TIM WOODBRIDGE'S STREAK HITS 40 YEARS

By: Tim Woodbridge
Allentown, Pennsylvania

Always enjoy those “round numbers” in terms of the streak, and I have to admit - I have been really looking forward to this one!

My wife and 2 daughters threw me a nice anniversary party this year as well! That in itself was interesting - as we got to talking about the fact that a lot of things have to go into a streak this long! One of the key things - includes a very supportive family! They gave up Sunday afternoons of having their husband and father around as I was out running for 3 hours. They almost always went to Boston with me as my pit crew! And many times they sat in the van in some parking lot - just so I could go run a mile to keep the streak alive!

This has been a bit of a challenging year – and one of those years when you do realize that keeping the “streak” alive isn’t necessarily going to be up to you... but by the "Grace of God"...!

I have to admit that I continue to enjoy the USRSA Facebook page – although I don’t tend to go on all that often – it’s good to see how many people are sticking to their goals and hitting those milestones - 1 year, earning their comma, etc! It really helps to see how excited people are about what everyone is doing!

Again I feel like I’ve really learned that you have to just feel blessed to be able to do what you do each day! I try to remember that no matter what happens – you just have to enjoy what you do on the road each day – for as long as that lasts – and really just be happy and proud of what you’ve accomplished!

As I’ve said before - I have had to “re-behave” in terms of training regimen due to some arthritis in my knees for the last several years. This year actually started off very strong in terms of running mileage, but I got hit with a couple of things this year. First off this summer – got a case of vertigo. While they don’t actually know why or how it happens – it was one of the worst things I've ever had to run through. I’ve never had that before – but wow – that was a challenge! It actually took me several months to really shake. Just started to get back into some decent mileage then right after the holidays, tore meniscus in my right knee (although I need to come up with a better story than falling off my deck stairs...) So it effected my mileage (1037 miles this last year) – but still have a total of 79,398 miles for the streak, which isn’t bad for a guy that screamed at his high school coach for making him run the 2 mile once! I did spend about 2500 minutes in the running pool at my gym - while it doesn’t help my mileage totals – it does help with overall fitness level without beating yourself up!

While I don’t run Boston anymore (30th time was the charm...) - I continue to be involved with the Marathon (the Elite Runners Fluid Stations), and makes me still feel very much a part of the race. I have joked that getting up at 4 a.m. - setting up 8 aid stations over 22 miles of the course – then tearing down and dropping off the BAA vehicles back in Hopkinton at around 4 p.m. – it might be easier to run...

I did my 60 mile birthday “run” again this year – it’s now a triathlon – swimming biking and running a total of 60 miles – so trying to figure out a strategy for 61 miles coming up in June!

Again – thanks to the association for keeping up on all the streaks – I always appreciate getting the newsletter and catching up with all the different streak anniversaries! So keep up the great work – and keep on running!

WEATHER & RUNNING
--George A. Hancock
runnergah@comcast.net

Weather has a huge influence on our lives. A bright summer day with a gentle breeze creates many great road memories. Likewise, an icy cold day with heavy snowfall measured in feet creates road memories bordering on nightmares.

Weather is all around us. Weather's impact touches everyone. One cannot escape Mother Nature's whimsical weather patterns.

The Weather Channel begins the week with an intriguing Sunday morning feature. An business analyst discusses weather's impact on our economy. Weather really is a force now on our economy. Our extended winter season crippled lawn and garden, outdoor sporting goods and spring clothing sales. Of course, ski resorts and other similar ventures flourished in this continuing season. However, the vast majority of other retailers and business concerns suffered through this lingering wintry season.

Runners especially streak runners need to monitor the weather every day. Why? The reason is obvious after viewing the myriad weather videos that populate Facebook, YouTube and other social media outlets.

For example, say you are a streak runner with a decent 13 year long streak. You run every day no matter what hurdles are placed before you. However, suppose you reside in a flood prone region. Or, you live a quarter mile away from a large body of water like a lake or river. Heavy persistent rains visit your region. These relentless rains deposit copious amounts of water into your neighborhood. The rain waters run off the hillsides, across home owner's lawns and into the neighboring streets. Three, four or five inches of rain fall in a short period of time. The drainage systems cannot handle this water flow. Flash flooding occurs within a short time frame.

Unfortunately, these rains are relentless. The system stalls or intensifies adding more rain to this flooding issue. The roads, the streets everywhere are flooded. What do you do?

It's time for your daily run but where? Your vehicle floated away. You view the top of road signs from your flooded home. Every street for miles is under water. What do you do?

Do you turn to the treadmill? The electric power went out hours ago. Your generator is beneath those flood waters. Now what?

Many social media keyboard warriors would comment, don't live in possible flood prone areas. Or, why are you living along the shoreline? Why did you build a house near that river?

Perhaps these are legitimate questions. However, these statements never answer that question. What do you do if weather forces a running change?

Individuals, runners residing in the Houston, Florida and the Caribbean region last year were confronted with this scenario. Hurricanes, coastal storms, severe rainstorms and tornadoes ravaged huge section of our country last year.

The total property damage was in the billions. Sadly, there were lives lost in some regions. Of course, running for many when faced with serious weather events is a low priority. But, what if you are a serious streak runner? What if running is your life? What are your plans? What will you do?

These are difficult questions that have no easy right or wrong answers. I reside in the Greater Johnstown region. Johnstown, Pennsylvania is no stranger to flooding issues. Johnstown is nestled in a low valley with most of the downtown region located in a flood plain between the Stonycreek and Conemaugh Rivers. The 1936 March floods resulted in federal intervention and massive river walls were constructed along these rivers controlling the water flow. However, residents learned after a relentless July, 1977 rain storm those walls are not infallible.

Heavy persistent rain fell in a short time period, several water dams breached and water runoff from communities above Johnstown combined to form the deadly and expensive 1977 Johnstown Flood.

I wrote about this deadly event in my new book My Running Odyssey recently published by the Daily American. My perspective was as a runner seeking to get that daily run in despite the conditions around us. Also, I worked in the retail business in those days. I wrote about how that flood affected nearly everyone including local retail stores. My book is available at www.madeinsomersetcounty.com

My running days now span 45 years. Since 1992 I used various running logs to detail my daily runs. I currently use The Complete Runner's Day-By-Day Log calendar book. I have 26 years worth of detailed weather accounts about my daily run. That time frame covers a quarter century.

I reviewed those books seeking a similar weather pattern corresponding to our extended winter season. Plus, any similar extended Indian Summer autumn season from 2017. Well, in my Greater Johnstown region those extended seasons were a first. We never experienced extended winter or autumn season in that time period. These were a first.

Now, one year does not constitute a trend. These are weather patterns that need monitored. If I'm still writing about similar patterns over the next five years then worry.

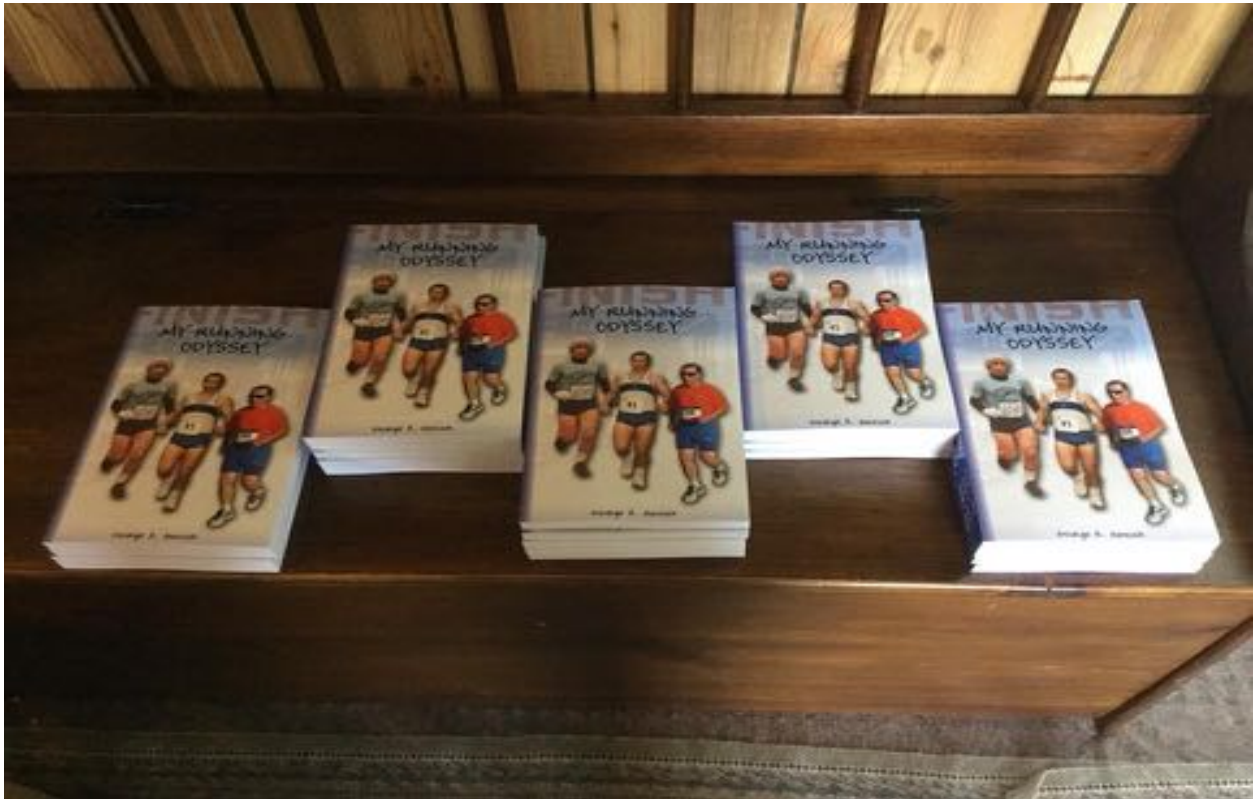

Offering weather advice is difficult. I will offer a few thoughts. Monitor the weather in your region. Be very careful of weather forecasts from local sources. Many local forecasters are wary of alienating their sponsors. Local forecasts are too often dumbed down. Potential severe weather is downplayed.

The National Weather Service (NWS), the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) and the Weather Channel are valuable weather forecast tools.

Dress for the weather and have alternate routes available if needed. Always be aware of your surroundings. It's not wise running in flood prone regions during heavy rainstorms. Likewise, running outside during blinding snowstorms on unfamiliar roads is not wise.

The smart runner is the prepared runner. The more weather you know, the more weather information you possess assures safe road passage during weather events.

The daily run continues. Just keep a wary eye upon our ever changing skies. Run smart!

I started road running in 1973 and road racing in 1976. This book is an account of my 45-years on the road. Along the way I completed 500 road races and over 102,000 miles. The book describes how factors such as marriage, family, employment, and the weather influence a running lifestyle. Also, my book details the running streak subculture and its humble beginnings.

Traversing Some Warmer Tundra During Winter By: Steve DeBoer

Over the years, I have discussed various aspects of running/streak running, including the challenges of traversing the tundra when it is cold. I rarely run indoors (running on an indoor track a few times prior to doing an indoor mile race in January) and have now accumulated 47,700 miles of tundra when the temperature is 32 degrees or below, possibly the most among our streak running contingent, with a goal of reaching 50,000 in the next few years (I covered 1179 miles of “cool” tundra in 2017). This usually results in slipping/falling on snow or ice 3-4 times each winter (even sometimes when I have my ice cleats on!), with some falls being more painful than others – only 2 falls this winter. Last major snowfall was April 19-20, when we set a total snow fall record for that date and for the month of April, as well as a record low of 18 degrees.

My wife, Gail, is always strongly encouraging (though not DEMANDING) me to consider taking her someplace warm for part of the 5-6 months each year that we get to “experience” winter in Minnesota. So last fall, I started mapping out a route we could drive to get a couple weeks of warmth the last half of February. We drove over 1200 miles the first two days to reach Dulce, New Mexico, where streak runner Brad Kautz currently serves as pastor of the Jicarilla Apache Reformed church. Brad previously lived in Rochester, and I have probably run more miles and more races with him than anyone else. Our last major running event together was in December 2016, the Quad Keyah Marathon Series at Four Corners, New Mexico, which involved running 4 marathons in 4 states in 4 days. Brad finished 2nd overall and I ended up 3rd.

I should mention, northern NM has a bit of elevation, 6778 feet in Dulce, so a little higher than Denver. This means some cooler mornings, and it was in the middle 20s as we did 8 miles our first morning run together, but warmed up into the upper 40s during the day. The next morning was in the 30s but since we ran the first 5 miles into the wind with some rain and sleet mixed in, I still opted to wear a shirt. Driving to AZ later that day, we experienced quite the wind/sand storm, and could barely walk towards the restaurant, much less open the door. Fortunately the wind died down during the night, so my run the next morning was pleasant but still required a shirt with temps in the middle 20s again (Holbrook, AZ is 5082 feet elevation). Then it was on to Phoenix, with a stop to see some statues of rock musicians standing on a corner in Winslow, AZ, next to a flatbed Ford (we actually parked right behind the pickup!).

I was told it had been in the 80s temp-wise in Phoenix, but we came in time for a “cold” snap. That meant upper 30s the next morning, perfect for my first “shirtless” run of the winter! It did get up to almost 60 degrees later in the day, when we met up with Craig Davidson at the Runner’s Den, where he works, a fellow streak runner (#22 on the active list), who began his running streak in 1978 in Fergus Falls, MN. I had never met Craig before but knew about his penchant for finding money during his runs. So I had to ask if he had found any that morning, and the answer was, “5 cents!” We then traversed 4 miles of tundra together. As we began, just before leaving the Runner’s Den parking lot, he spied 3 pennies on the ground. He took two of them and I took one. Unfortunately, my money finding “streak” ended the next day, though I did find a couple more pennies on other runs before the trip ended.

Alex Galbraith, Herb Fred, and Steve DeBoer

Bill Anderson, Lauren Anderson, Steve DeBoer, and Gail DeBoer in Fort Worth

While in Houston the following week, I got to meet Alex Galbraith (#4 active, who kept his streak going by running one mile on a treadmill the day after thyroid surgery) and Herb Fred (retired, with 253,000 total miles, having had 10 separate running streaks over the years, the first one from 1970-1978). My morning run in Houston was the warmest of the trip – upper 60s with some humidity, reminding me of Minnesota summer runs. Then it was on to Fort Worth to have dinner with Bill Anderson (#9 active) and his wife, Lauren. Bill kept his streak alive after an appendectomy (his daughter and wife measured out a course in the hospital courtyard – 32 times around for one mile, with his daughter pushing the IV pole).

Steve DeBoer and Roger Nelson in Colleyville

We spent the night in nearby Colleyville with Roger Nelson, who lived in Minneapolis for 5 years during his first running streak, which went from 1981 to 2007. Coincidentally, Roger shares a June 7th birthday with Prince Rogers Nelson and often got calls on his birthday when he lived in Minneapolis. But when asked if he was Prince, he would tell them, “No, I’m King!” His second, ten-year streak ended last December, as he reported in the Winter 2018 issue of the Streak Registry. So he paced me on my ten-mile tundra trek on his elliptigo “bike.”

With the recent significant increase in registered streak runners, I thought it would be interesting to see how the numbers have changed in the last few years. Keep in mind, it was 2002 when it was decided by member vote that 1 mile should be the minimum mileage required of a daily runner. At that time there were 82 men and 4 women (4% of total) with registered active running streaks, as well as 14 retired streaks (all men). Male streak runners had been identified in 31 states but females had been found only in 3 states. In October 2012, Jared Ostroski was the first person to register a running streak in New Mexico (the last state to have a registered daily streak), at which time at least one man had been streaking in every state plus Washington, DC.

As of January 2013, there were 363 active streak runners, 58 (16%) were women. Another 243 retired streaks were listed. States that still had never had any daily female runners at that time were: AR, DE, ID, KS, ME, MO, MS, ND, NE, RI, SD and WV, meaning 38 states plus DC did have women who ran daily. As of March 31, 2018, we had 980 on the active list, with 315 being women (32%). If we restrict the list to those who began daily running January 2013 or later, the female number is 235 of 580 total, or 41%. We are now down to only 3 states that have never had a daily runner of the female gender – ME, ND & WV. DE is the most recent state to add a woman streaker, when Ashley Gutermuth, moved there from Washington, DC in the summer of 2016, having a string of daily runs beginning in January 2015. If we only look at the active daily runners, there are currently no males active in AK, MT, SD & VT; and no females active in AR, DC, ME, ND, VT & WV. That means VT is the only state with no person currently doing it daily. SD has only one streak runner active, Holly Mathieu, who just registered in March. By the 2nd week in April, the active list had surpassed 1000!

Here is a list of the ten states with the most total and active streak runners:

TOTAL	Early Apr 2018	Apr 2016	ACTIVE	Early Apr 2018	Apr 2016
MN	142 (51 women)	100 (28 women)	MN	81 (36 women)	56 (17 women)
CA	126 (34 women)	100 (25 women)	CA	69 (26 women)	57 (18 women)
TX	109 (31 women)	79 (18 women)	TX	63 (21 women)	46 (13 women)
PA	93 (27 women)	73 (18 women)	PA	51 (21 women)	40 (13 women)
FL	85 (22 women)	62 (15 women)	FL	50 (14 women)	39 (11 women)
NY	80 (25 women)	58 (15 women)	NY	44 (13 women)	36 (11 women)

NJ	68 (27 women)	40 (17 women)	MA	42 (12 women)	28 (11 women)
MA	67 (21 women)	46 (16 women)	IL	38 (14 women)	24 (9 women)
IL	56 (20 women)	37 (12 women)	NJ	36 (15 women)	21 (12 women)

MN had the largest increase in Total (42, 23 being women) and Active (25, 19 being women). Two years ago, MD was #10 with 39. Since then, IL, MI and OH have all passed MD for most total and active.

MN was the first state to reach 100,110,120,130 and 140 total; first to reach 70 and 80 active. CA was the first state to reach 50, 60, 70, 80 and 90 total; first to reach 40, 50 and 60 active.

Of course, states vary in population from 583,000 in WY to 39.5 million in CA. Making adjustment for that, those states with the highest number of streak runners per million population are shown below. Note that the highest population states (CA, TX, NY, FL) don't show up on these lists, but MN rates number One when adjusted for population as well:

TOTAL Early Apr 2018		Apr 2016	ACTIVE Early Apr 2018		Apr 2016
MN	25.87 (9.29 W - 1)	18.22 (5.10 W)	MN	14.75 (6.56 W - 1)	10.20 (3.10 W)
WY	18.77 (8.53 W - 2)	8.80 (6.82 W)	WY	8.53 (3.41W - 2)	3.41 (3.41 W)
MA	9.86 (3.09 W)	6.77 (2.34 W)	VT	6.39 (0 W)	3.20 (0 W)

(2.73 W)
VT	7.99 (1.60 W)	4.79 (1.60 W)	VA	5.01 (1.19 W)	3.70 (0.84 W)
MD	7.83 (2.33 W)	6.49 (1.83 W)	WI	4.85 (1.73W)	2.60 (0.52 W)
WI	7.62 (2.08 W)	4.68 (0.87 W)	CO	4.40 (1.47 W)	3.67 (1.10W)
PA	7.26 (2.11 W)	5.70 (1.41 W)	IN	4.38 (1.06 W)	2.57 (0.60 W)

In 2016, IA was #10 TOTAL with 4.70 streakers per million, but WI has passed both IA and PA in the last two years. DC has the 3rd highest (4.46/million) and AK has the 4th highest (4.07/million) rates for TOTAL women. For ACTIVE overall, VT ranks 3rd for ACTIVE, even though they have no active women. MT ranks 3rd(2.90/million) for ACTIVE women, even though they have no active men. AK also has no active men but are 4th (2.72/million) for ACTIVE women.

Postscript: As I send this off (April 30th), TODAY we got our first 70 degree day in southern, MN (our first 60 degree day was last week), the snow finally disappearing over this past weekend. My wife put the shovel back in the garage, so we'll see if that "precipitates" anything white. Guess I can launder and pack away my t-shirts until Fall.

I have started running 3 years ago as part of a lifestyle changing plan. My weight and fitness has taken a turn for the worst, nearing 40 with a desk job and being a smoker. After some trial and error I finally managed to lose some weight, quit smoking, and started running after googling what it is all about, like any good computer nerd. 2015 was a good year, I started in January and by September I was able to run a 2-hour half marathon.

I first read about streaking on Facebook I think, it was the end of a 30-day, November running streak. Fitting the usual pattern I started the streak late when everyone was ending it, on 10th December of 2016.

Running – and streaking - really turned to be a quite serious hobby, something not just for the body but for the soul as well. I love running because I feel it makes me more stable and strong mentally, a bit more resistant to stress. It also helps me keep my weight in check which is still a work in progress with minor setbacks and successes due to my addiction to bad food and ice cream.

As far as sports goals go, my goals are reaching under 90m for a half marathon and hitting a Boston qualifier time that could actually get me in, that is about a 3:10. My current bests are 1:32:49 and 3:22:52. I am not in a hurry though and trying not to lose sight of the main goal, just staying active and healthy.

My running streak started on June 3rd, 2017. I started the streak because I was so inconsistent with my running. Anything could derail my runs and often did, considering I work full time and have 2 school age kids. My first goal was to get to 100 days. Once I did that, I just kept going. I have run mostly outside, but also retreat to the treadmill at the gym when the weather is bad. I prefer road running to trail running.

I grew up as an artsy kid, and not a sporty kid. I recall gym class - running a mile every year was torture! Why would anyone want to run at all? Fast forward to a time after I got married. A friend was running with people at a local running store and I came along a couple times. Shortly after that, I was hooked. Then, I got pregnant with my first daughter and my focus changed. I went back to running after I had her for a bit and did some 5ks. Then I had my second daughter. I started running again (using a "couch to 5k" app on my phone) and was a sporadic, inconsistent runner. I did some more 5ks and thought it would be amazing if I could someday run longer.

After my father passed away from cancer in early 2015, I was looking for something to do to give back to the local organization that supported him (Gilda's Club in Rochester, NY). I discovered on their website that they had a half-marathon training group to raise money for the organization and I quickly signed up. I trained in the summer of 2015 for my first half marathon, which was hard, but I did it! That was the beginning of many half marathons.

I have also recently discovered relay races, have run one Ragnar, and have two more relays in the future. Excitingly, I have my first Marathon (something that I thought I would NEVER do) in the fall of 2018: the NYC Marathon!

JEFF GOULD'S STREAK HITS 8 YEARS

The status hasn't changed. My run today [27 February 2018] completed 8 years. A year or so from a 'PR' (my longest streak is a bit over 9 years).

What a treat it is to be a long-distance runner, with nobody to make me ill tempered or tell me what to do. This is the part of my day I will not do without.

Brent Burmaster

BRENT BURMASTER'S STREAK HITS 25 YEARS

I started running on my Junior High track team and later recreationally in college at Oklahoma University. At age 32, I found myself 30 pounds overweight and started running to reduce weight. My identical twin brother was an active runner and he was the encouragement I needed to run in a 10K in St. Louis in 1988. In less than 2 years, I ran a full marathon, the 1989 Dallas White Rock finishing in 3:29:45.

In 1992, I wanted to run every day which I did but in March of 1993, I became ill and took a day off. After I felt better, I made a promise to myself that I would run every day in my life, no matter what. The day that I made that promise was March 13, 1993.

I try to average 40 miles a week. I have run over 55,000 miles since that day. Since I was a traveling Sales Executive, I was able to run in 41 states and over 23 countries. I have 13 bite marks from 2 dogs that attacked me. I ran when I had a 105 degree fever and also broken ribs. I had heel spurs and ran through that. I ran right after a tornado (Texas) and a hurricane Fran (North Carolina). I ran in minus 20 degree wind chill (New York) and 103 degrees (Texas). I have gotten lost a couple times and the longest run ever was 30 miles. I ran 10 marathons – 8 during the streak.

I retired from my Sales Executive job in 2009 and for the last 9 years I run a homeless shelter in Dallas (www.soulsharboardallas.org). This is the best job I ever had. Last year, I was featured in Runner World's podcast about streakers:

<https://www.runnersworld.com/human-race/episode-21-twenty-four-years>

This week I celebrated 25 years of running every day. I always run 5K (3.1 Miles) or more. Also, I have run outside except for a few times when I ran on a treadmill.

Finally, I would like to thank the many running partners over the years and especially my 4 legged running buddies – Macgregor, Kensington, Angel, Conan, Sooner, Avalanche and my 3 current dogs, Boomer Mudslide and Darla.

God Bless.

KIRK WILBUR'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

On March 20, 2018 I celebrated my fourth "runiversary" the same way I celebrated the previous three: at a local bar with my friends eating a celebratory ice cream cake and enjoying a few beers.

Over the past two years I've had some persistent troubles with my legs and piriformis muscles. Regular massages and plenty of foam rolling have helped, but I've cut back on my mileage and race entries.

I only completed 2 races in the past year: A marathon in September and a half in October. The former was the Santa Rosa Marathon. While it was my worst marathon finish to date, I'm glad I did it.

Not too long afterward, Santa Rosa was hit with a devastating wildfire, and much of the area I'd been able to visit while I was in town—including the wonderful hotel I'd stayed at—burned. I'm glad I got a chance to visit the city before that occurred.

Otherwise, not a whole lot to report over the past year—just happy to still be streak running.

STREAK ENDS
AFTER 1,234 DAYS

I injured myself during my last long run training for Boston. I eked out a few more streak days, but it was getting better far too slowly. Training went really well, then didn't. Ninety-four miles in a week was apparently a bit much! I ended my streak, running my last mile on April 3, 2017. Ended up at 1,234 days, more than double the prior Alaska record. I had hoped to heal a piriformis injury in time to run Boston. Unfortunately, it was pretty severe and did not heal in time. It was quite nice to watch the marathon, though, especially such an historic year!

Thank you for recognizing my completion of 17 years as a streak runner. I feel so blessed to have reached that milestone and to already have started the 18th year. JOHN SCHUERZINGER'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 1400 DAYS

Sadly my streak of 1,400 days has come to an end. Sunday, April 15 was my last day. This decision has been over 6 months in the making. My own fault. 2 years of overtraining finally caught up with me. I'll still continue to run, but it won't be every day, and right now I need some much needed time off to be in decent shape for my 3 ultras this summer. Better to end a streak due to tired legs than to injury. And you can bet I will still continue to follow the achievements of all the awesome streakers out there.

MARTY KNIGHT'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

My streak is ongoing and as you noted tomorrow [8 April 2018] is my 4-year anniversary. I am celebrating by running the Baltimore & Annapolis Trail Marathon. This will be my 6th since I started the streak and it has been a couple of years since the last one so I'm a little nervous about it. I trained using the Hanson Marathon Method and feel prepared--I ran 225 Miles in March for crying out loud--so I should be OK.

My goal on Marathons is always to break the 4-hour mark--I have only done it once and as the calendar is relentless (I turn 58 this May) the slimmer my chances are of making the goal.

When I am not training for a race I have raised my personal streak rule to at least two miles a day. So, keep up the good work with the site--know that it is appreciated out here in streak-land.

By the way, I use Endomondo (by Under Armor) for tracking my runs -- if anyone ever asks for an app -- I highly recommend it.

Yes, my streak is still going very well. Although uneventful in terms of injuries and streak-ending scares, this year has been filled with many new successes and improvements.

I have run a total of 1191.96 miles or 99.33 miles per month.

I completed two full marathons (Kobe Marathon in November 2017 and Houston Marathon in January 2018); it was my 12th Houston Marathon, and I finished in 3:38:22, which is my fifth best time. I look forward to another year of running!

Stuart Ainsworth

STUART AINSWORTH'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

The last few months of my streak have been hard work as I adjust to medication following a heart attack just over 2 years ago (during my streak). My cardiologist still doesn't believe that I felt no symptoms – he asked if I had experienced shortage of breath or tightness in the chest or unexplained niggles my response was that as a regular runner that is pretty much a daily occurrence!

Fortunately he also stated that my level of fitness and the fitness of my heart allowed the 'muscle' to save itself when faced with a blockage in one of the three arteries serving the heart. In fact, another artery grew towards the blockage effectively bypassing the problem so no need for surgery. However, I am on a range of standard heart medications some of which have unfortunate side effects for the physically active. Beta Blockers in particular come in different strengths and compositions and side effects can include feeling like hitting 'the wall' after as little as 100m – not much help for a regular runner. My suggestion is to open a dialogue with your medical practitioner and work together to find the medication with the least worst side effects.

It's not all bad!! There have been several charity campaigns that I have doubled up with my streak. The annual Running Down Dementia challenge between Alzheimer's Research UK and parkrun is relatively modest 100 kms in 5 months (geared to be a culmination of 20 x 5k parkruns). I have adjusted to my streak to run 5k every day of the 5-month campaign whilst raising money for this worthy cause.

This year sees to 100th Anniversary of the formation of the Royal Air Force, the oldest independent air force in the world. I served as a logistic offices for 20 years and have embarked on another rather modest celebration campaign #SPITFIRE100K100DAYS, at 1k per day its very achievable so I have adjusted to run 5k every day of the 100 day campaign.

I continue to be actively involved in parkrun UK and as a result of my recent medical episode am now an Outreach Ambassador for people living with heart conditions working to encourage participation in parkrun by people coming off cardiac referral programmes and wanting to remain active.

A busy time and all held together with the structure that a run streak adds to one's life. Big thanks to all fellow streakers especially those who so actively support us all on the Facebook group. Safe and successful running everyone.

ANTHONY ROSE, 15, JOINS USRSA

I am happy to say that my streak is still alive through the coldest and longest winter New Jersey has ever had. On January 1st, 2018 my adventure started. This date marks the first time I have ever recreationally ran in my life. Throughout elementary and middle school, I was forced to run the yearly mile and I always dreaded it because I always came in dead last. This reason made me strongly dislike running.

The first week of my experience was the hardest week because it was the coldest week of the year, and it was difficult to breathe outside. After the first week though, I started to appreciate running. I look forward to my jog everyday after school now. I have started to increase the distance to more than a mile a day, because I have a 5k scheduled in June.

Running has become a part of my daily routine and has become part of my lifestyle. It gives me time to reflect on life and everything going on. I would like to thank my uncle, Vinny Loproto (USRSA Member), for the idea of starting a streak and the motivation throughout my journey.

TOM BARRY'S STREAK HITS 21 YEARS

I'm proud of my 21-year streak and hope to keep it going. It's long enough for me to have outlasted a dog or two along my route. I run about three miles a day and hit the weight machines at the gym when I get the urge. Most days I also walk nine-plus holes of golf, and it's often not a direct (Hoganesque) path from tee to green.

I live in Decatur, Ga., right outside of Atlanta. Decatur is a small city of about 20,000 souls, where one might think my streak would make me King of the Road. But no. So I'd like to tip my runner's sweaty cap to my fellow Decaturite and reigning monarch Rick Porter. Mr. Porter currently ranks 15th on the U.S. list, with a jaw-dropping streak of 40.4 years. It's nearly twice as long as my streak, and he's three years younger. Something tells me I'm not going to catch him. Long live the king!

My streak is still going strong at two years. What started as a way to run the dog in the morning before work, has morphed into a streak. Now its is so habitual, like brushing my teeth...I run daily, and love it (most of the time). Oddly, I enjoy running in terrible weather conditions, where I deduce that people in their cars driving by in the pouring rain/snow think I'm a little crazy. Most runs are with my 5 year old bordercollie, who would never allow me to miss a day. I consider my streak the best gift I have ever given myself. Running daily gives me a newfound respect for streak runners everywhere.

VIVIAN WILSON'S STREAK HITS 7 YEARS

Thank you for the shout out! 7 years for the second streak! Despite surgeries, chemo, and radiation treatment, I managed to continue the streak. The key component was to stay healthy. On Dec. 24, 2014, I was diagnosed with breast cancer. It was so very important for me to continue running throughout. My surgeon encouraged rest but did not rule anything out.

Less than a month after surgery, I completed the Austin Half marathon. Not my fastest but did finish strong! (My surgeon could not believe it. I told her I bound myself tightly!) Chemo did not stop me either - my Thursday AM buddies continued our runs. The heat during radiation was tricky as I was not allowed to sweat. (June and July were tough months but managed it!) Marathons, half marathons and an occasional short race was not absent. Completing the 2017 NYC marathon, 30 years after my 1987 NYC Marathon, was a highlight as was Big Sur - 1 year after chemo. It has become quite the habit now and even my husband knows to make sure I have my miles in. Looking forward to next year.

JOHN WHEELER JOINS USRSA

I am John Wheeler from Simi Valley, California, age 42. I started running to lose weight and be healthy. Little did I know that running would change my life forever.

I started out small, on the treadmill doing 1-2 miles each day, very, very slow. As each day progressed I was able to do faster longer runs. Then I mixed it up with running outside and then I got hooked.

I vowed to myself to run at least a mile every day of the year. I got up to 8 miles a day mostly on the treadmill then I decided to run the Los Angeles marathon. I did it in 3 hours 59 minutes. Then I started running 5k's, 10k's, half marathons, and more marathons.

I qualified in 2012 for the 2013 Boston Marathon with a time of 3 hours 8 minutes, my Marathon PR. I trained all year for Boston, then the big day arrived. There I was crossing the finish line of the freaking Boston Marathon. Unfortunately the events that year with the bombing put a damper on my accomplishment. But I was safe and not hurt and that is all that mattered.

I still run today but not a lot of races anymore. I have joined a virtual race now for the past 3 years of Run the Year. That puts me at 5.5 miles at least every day, so that is fun.

I plan on doing this forever and one day make it to the longest running streak yet. Glad to be part of the United States Running Streak Association.

I just wanted to let you know that on March 31, 2018, I did celebrate my 8-year anniversary of running at least one mile everyday. As of March 31, 2018, I had run 2,923 days in a row for a total of 6,880 miles.

I am so grateful for the encouragement that USRSA gives this 75-year old guy to keep running each day and, God willing, I hope to continue to do so until my last day on this earth.

Blessings to the USRSA.

I just completed my streak anniversary run on the beaches of Costa Rica. The streak lives on although there have been challenges. I streaked all the way through nursing school and through training for and successfully qualifying for Boston.

One of the hardest days of my streak was during a 100 miler, when I had to make sure to complete my mile before walking again after 24 hours on my feet. Up next I have planned a 50k in the Franklin mountains in West Texas, running Boston, and hopefully a return to Fuego y Aqua in Nicaragua.

I have also been pacing half marathons with Beast pacing, which is an awesome gig! I thank you for maintaining this registry and keeping us motivated to streak on.

DAN FURLONG'S STREAK HITS 7 YEARS

My streak is still active. I'm actually running more miles and running much slower. I am a high school English teacher, and I arrive at school at 7 am during the school week. When I started my streak, I would run 2 miles before school. However, over the past five years I have gradually increased that total, and I am currently running just over 8 miles before school (10 miles each on Saturday and Sunday).

I have really grown to enjoy waking up early and heading out on the empty, silent roads. I like to think of this as the only time of the day that I can control (pace, distance and direction).

The greatest threat to my streak this year (running year), came over the Christmas holidays, when the flu ran through my family, and I was feeling awful. Exacerbating matters was the weather, and a three-degree day felt like minus 20 with the wind chill.

In regards to my streak, it is still on going. I thought it would be easier with my retiring over 10 years ago from being a teacher and head boys basketball coach for 37 years, but I started 2-part time jobs which have ended up being a full-time job.

My schedule is even crazier than what it was before. I have had to run a good many 1-mile days, many at 4am or earlier.

MANDY COUEY'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

My streak still lives on. I first started my streak with three other girls, who dropped within the first month or two. I didn't even realize streaking was a thing, but a friend of mine told me about the Runner's World streak that went from Memorial Day to July 4th (I had just started streaking the week before) as a way to encourage people to stay active and fit while on vacation.

My solo runs are treasured as time to be alone with my own thoughts and prayers. On the other hand, it is bonding with the best of friends when running with my fellow teammates. We encourage each other, we love each other and we motivate each other to push harder and faster and further.

I am now a wife, mother to a 5-year old daughter and 3-year old son and as of today, a full time student! I feel it's important to teach the values of fitness and commitment to my children. It's amazing what runners can accomplish and the drive we have to persevere through sickness, time with our families, and whatever else life throws at us. It has taught me that with hard work you can set a goal, obtain a goal and exceed your goals with some drive and dedication. And these are values I want to instill in my children. Some of my favorite places to run over the last two years were Palm Beach, El Paso, Tallahassee, Bristol, Roswell, Nashville, and Portland.

LUCAS HENDERSON'S STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

My streak has continued and I am up to 8428.44 miles during my streak.

Last year I wanted to run more, but smarter, so I started a mini streak within the year of 112 straight days of running at least 10 miles each day. This mini streak started 6/21 and lasted until 10/10. I thought I was going to lose both my 10 miles a day streak and my overall streak when hurricane Irma came through Florida, but I was able to run just after midnight on the day of the hurricane and then wait until the afternoon of the next day after the hurricane was over.

I averaged 9.2 miles per day for the calendar year 2017 and really feel like I've started to hit my stride, no pun intended, when it comes to running every day.

People are constantly in awe of my running every day and the miles I put in each week but they also ask me about how my legs don't get tired/ injured without taking days off. I usually explain that running every day gives me the opportunity to stretch my legs without allowing them to get tight the day after a long or hard run. I listen to my body and take it easy on days they feel 'heavy' and let them go when they feel 'light.'

I set new PRs for my 1K (3:29), 1 mile (5:42), 5K (18:05), and 1/2 marathon (1:25:50). I also won two 5ks, finished third overall in a 1/2 marathon and finished in the top three of my age group in every other race I ran, other than my marathon.

One of my more interesting runs occurred just after Hurricane Irma. I got stopped by a group of police officers that were pulled over to the side of the road that I run up and down every day. One of the officers called out to me "What are you training for?" which got me out of my zone and focused on the fact that 5 officers were staring at me. I had already run 11 miles and still had another 3 to get home so I was tired, extremely sweaty, and running low on liquid. I stopped and talked with them for about 10 minutes. They said they saw me every day at various points of my run and would actually pass along updates on seeing me when one of them had a day off. I know I pass one of them now because they flash their patrol lights on when they pass and honk their horns.

The other interesting run I had was a 5K race in December. It was a cold and rainy day, which meant it was perfect weather for a PR, so I was excited for the race to start. Unfortunately, there were eight high school runners all lined up at the starting line. I put the thought of winning out of my head, as well as finishing top three, and focused on just running my race. The group of high school runners took off as a pack from the start and I ran my race. I caught up to the tail end of the pack just before the end of mile 2 and started to pick up my pace. I passed two more over the next half-mile and another 2 during the last 1/4 mile sprint. What made the run so interesting was listening to them explain to their coach how I was able to not only catch them, but also pass them at the end of the race. One of them said "he may be old, but he's fast" which made the race that much sweeter.

Other runs may have been better in terms of training purposes, but I won't soon forget these two runs and who knows if either would have happened if it wasn't for running every day.

One final note, I've started a new mini streak of running at least 10 miles every day and I'll become a dad for the first time later this year. My wife doesn't like the name I'm calling our unborn baby, but I think it's appropriate. The name, Mara Thawn (you'll have to say it out loud to get it).

KARL DOSTAL'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 651 DAYS

I have unfortunate news as it relates to my streak. My streak ended on May 12, 2018 after 651 days of continuous running. After running the Louisville Derby Marathon and then running the Skyline 3way challenge at the Flying Pig, I unfortunately tore my meniscus. After about a week of minimal running to keep the streak alive, I gave up and went to the doctor. I have a torn meniscus in my left knee with surgery later this week. With a recovery time of 3-4 weeks, I hope to start a new streak in June. I enjoyed every minute of being involved and can't wait to get back on the active list...

DAVID HAMILTON'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

Not too much to report. Streak continues with mainly 2-4 miles daily at a snails pace as my ongoing 7 year plus ankle injury won't tolerate much more than that. One of those "won't get better so figure out how to manage it" type of injuries. Cheers. Streak on!

MICHAEL MARCUS' STREAK HITS 6 YEARS

Well, I made it to 6 years of consecutive running! Running every day has had a tremendously positive impact on my life. It is amazing to see what running even just one mile can do for our physical and mental health. I am so thankful for the association providing the inspiration to continue!

Michael Marcus
Newtown, Pennsylvania

CHRIS MAY'S STREAK HITS 6 YEARS

No changes to the streak. I run a minimum of 2 miles a day but tend to run 30-35 miles a week. Six years! I intend to run a couple of ultras this year along with few half marathons and now obstacle course races. I joined crossfit which has helped my running. I hope to continue my streak in the coming year.

DIANE SHUMAY'S STREAK HITS 18 YEARS

Yes, my running streak is going strong. Nothing remarkable has happened outside of the fact that my husband and I get up every morning and run every day, regardless of how early that might be. We have run through some pretty wet rain storms this spring but who hasn't. We enjoy seeing new country when we travel but our favorite runs are right back home where we know the dogs and all running routes are flat.

Diane Shumay
Provo, Utah

TOM WATKINS' STREAK HITS 9 YEARS

Nothing notable to report. I ran around 4 miles per day mostly on park trails in Virginia Beach, Charlottesville and Santee, SC. I've made it a practice to pick up trash the last 3 years and now I find out there's a name for it: Plogging. The 2 most frequent finds are cigarette butts (not surprising) and tabs from energy gel packs (shameful!).

I have added Wim Hof breathing to my daily routine and am delighted to report increased energy and pain relief as immediate benefits.

CRAIG OSLIN'S STREAK HITS 13 YEARS

Not much to mention. I finished another year averaging 30-35 miles a week with a minimum of 2 miles. I ran a half marathon in Nashville in April which was fun. I've done 37 marathons with 2 Boston qualifiers, but I don't know how many marathons I got left in me. I'm going to try the Twin Cities this fall. I've been in good health with very few injuries, but age makes it tougher. I'm hoping to keep the streak going a few more years.

BRIAN FLASPOHLER'S STREAK HITS 5 YEARS

Five years! This is a tough group. It takes five years of running every day just to get out of the neophyte division! Last calendar year was the challenge of four miles minimum per day. This calendar year is the challenge of three miles a day but every run outside. I love my streaks within a streak! Of course this year's challenge is going to be easier with our relocation to sunny Manhattan Beach, California. That will be a much easier place to run outside everyday than in St. Louis.

I thought about quitting at five years but now with the relocation I'm going to keep it going!"

If you can fill the unforgiving minute
With sixty seconds' worth of distance run,
Yours is the Earth and everything that's in it,
And---which is more---you'll be a Man, my son!

THE FINISH LINE

By: Mark Washburne

Our running streak association continues to experience a surge in the number of new streaks being listed on our website. As I write this column near the end of May 2018, we now have 1,045 active streaks in the United States and another 116 on our International list for a grand total of 1,161 streaks worldwide. In the last quarter, we added an additional 108 streaks to our list from the previous quarter. The record for the most streaks added in a quarter was set in the previous quarter (Winter-Spring 2018) when we added an astounding 202 new streaks to our list. Historically, with so many streaks starting on January 1st and the last week of December, we always experience an uptick in new streaks listed during the first quarter of the year. The 108 new streaks in this second quarter of 2018 came as a somewhat surprise because we only added 26 new streaks in the second quarter for 2017. The big growth spurt in our running streak association for the last two quarters can no doubt be traced to the automation of our website in December 2017. Athletes, who now find it easier to list their streaks with us due to our new automated format, are doing so in record numbers.

Our new automated website has also led to a significant increase in our international list. In 2000, the United States Running Streak Association was founded and our original list only kept track of U.S.A athletes. In 2012, however, we invited athletes from around the world to join our association and we formed Streak Runners International. Our international list was slow to grow and mainly consisted of streak runners from other English-speaking countries. We now list streak runners from the following countries: Australia, Brazil, Canada, Denmark, France, Germany, Hungary, India, Ireland, Kenya, Mariana Islands, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Japan, Reunion Island, Slovakia, Slovenia, South Africa, Spain, Sweden, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, Vietnam, and, of course, the United States of America.

As for me, I have also kept busy this quarter. On Patriot's Day, April 16th, I ran the 122nd edition of the Boston Marathon. In this year's race, I was attempting to complete my 35th marathon and my 14th consecutive 26.2-mile journey from the Town of Hopkinton to the City of Boston. By all accounts, this was one of my more difficult marathons to finish. A few days before the marathon, I caught a cold. I should have stayed in bed that morning but, well, I am a streak runner, I already paid for the race, and who wants to end a Boston streak at unlucky 13 in a row? So, I woke up early, caught one of the busses to the start, and arrived in the Athletes' Village at Hopkinton High/Middle School to find it covered with mud from the drenching rain that would continue all day long. Besides the rain that came down in buckets at times, the runners also faced an unseasonably cold day and a headwind. For me, there were no good clothing options for the run. With my cold, I tried to dress warm for the start only to find that the pouring rain soaked through all my layers adding extra weight to my already difficult task of finishing the marathon distance. Despite these conditions, I did finish the marathon in a time of 4:09:33 – my second slowest marathon time ever. My slowest marathon time was in the heat wave of the 2014 Boston Marathon, when I had to walk major portions of the race and crawled over the finish line in a personal worst time of 4:19:35.

The other big race I am involved in this year is to represent my state of New Jersey in the United States Congress. I am happy to report that I secured more than enough signatures so that my name will appear on the Primary ballot. The New Jersey Primary is June 5th. The current Congressman decided to retire so the seat is now open and ten candidates (five Democrats and five Republicans), including me, are duking it out to represent their party in the fall in the General Election. Concerned about the corrupting influence of money in politics, I decided not to seek or take money during the Primary campaign. I am the only candidate of the ten who is not taking money and I facing off against candidates who raised hundreds of thousands of dollars and one person over 2 million dollars. Needless to say, I am an underdog to win but I still have my fingers crossed. Please wish me luck in this political race and good luck to all of you as we each run the roads and trails – every day!
