JUDY MICK'S STREAK HITS 33 YEARS

By: Judy Mick

On November 20, 2018, I celebrated the 33rd year of my running streak. This year, my streak is more precious to me than any other anniversary in the past. 2018 is the first year that was really tough for me.

In the past, I've maintained my streak through my hubby's surgeries, taking care of my Dad before he passed away and still taking care of my Mom. The craziness of our businesses never even bothered me.

But, this year saw my first true injury in all the years that I've been running. Now, I've had little aches here and there and a bout of plantar fasciitis – I've run through the shingles and food poisoning. No biggie. I've been extremely fortunate all these years. This year (and I'm still not sure how it happened) I've been dealing with a meniscus tear since March.

In the beginning, it was tough just getting that short and slow run of 1 ½ miles in each day. But, after a couple of months – it got a little easier. Then, I slowly started in 2 milers during the week. By September, I started trying to increase one day a week to a longer run.

After the doctor that diagnosed my tear and promptly told me that I'd need surgery or would eventually need a knee replacement – I went to a physical therapist that I knew. He said that was rather extreme and thought that therapy would help. (Even my regular doctor told me that you always try to rehabilitate first).

I did therapy with him for a few months – then just started doing my exercises at home every day. I'm still doing them every day and still getting stronger. As I researched, I found out that with someone my age (60), surgery can actually do more harm than good. And, that the best thing was to do exactly what I was doing to strengthen the area around the knee.

I'm still a work in progress with this. I have days where I'll be a little sore. Not really during the run – but, afterwards. The run itself never really hurts. However, I know that I am SO much better than I was in March. The hardest part is being patient – and admitting that we don't heal as quick at 60 as we do at 20.

I'm currently up to 6 miles for my long run for the week. I'm still hoping to work up to my yearly half marathon in Key West in January – but, I'm going to be smart. If the longer runs truly bother me – I'll continue to run low mileage as long as I have to. I don't want to do anything to jeopardize the streak or my future running.

Something super exciting happened to me in June. I was interviewed for the New York Times! They did an insert for their Sunday paper regarding exercising and staying fit. My topic was How to Make Running a Habit. I was truly honored and excited to be included! I really have to give a shout out to my Hubby. He's been listening to me through all of this. He's always been my biggest supporter, but this year has been above and beyond. He's listened to the whining, the tears, etc. I am a lucky girl!

Hubby is also a HUGE supporter of my streak. Whenever we meet someone or someone talks about my running – he will immediately mention my streak and how long I've been running every day. He's definitely a keeper!

It's been an up and down year; but, I'm still out there. And, I don't plan on quitting any time soon!

SAM JOHNSTON'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 15,023 DAYS

By: Mark Washburne

Sam Johnston, 76, from Naples, Florida, finally ended his running streak after 15,023 consecutive days (41+ years) on Friday, 12 October 2018. Started on 26 August 1977, Johnston had the 13th longest active running streak in the world as listed by Streak Runners International (SRI) and the United States Running Streak Association (USRSA) when his streak ended. He now has the sixth longest retired running streak in the United States and seventh longest retired running streak in the world that includes Ron Hill of England (52+ years; 19,032 days) as listed by those same running associations.

"There are many things in life for which there is no good time to do them," said Johnston in a statement to SRI/USRSA. "And there was certainly nothing special for me about 12 October 2018 except that it used to be the day when we celebrated Columbus Day every year in times gone by. However, for me it turned out to be the day that I accepted my fate due to the poorly performing left knee I now have. After running 1.26 miles, I stopped and walked for twenty painful minutes and decided that it would probably be my last official day of being a streak runner. It was over. I told my tolerant and loving wife that I was quitting, but I did plan to run the next morning just to make sure. On Saturday morning I went out and got a couple of minutes into my run and I decided quitting my streak was the right thing to do. And even though I could have run a mile, I didn't. I finished 1K and stopped. I then turned off my music and took a very slow, reflective, one hour walk before going home. Saturday was a long day filled with the benign torment from my decision. I went to bed at about 10:30 that night and oddly enough I woke up later and looked at the clock. It was 11:59. And just as I glance at it, the clock changed to 12:00. It was officially over. No regrets. Many memories, and all of them are good. To paraphrase the good Dr. Suess, it is hard not to be a little sad that it is over, but I am really, really glad that it happened. The good news is that I have a lifetime membership in the club so I will be able to follow the happenings with the group and read about others as they move up in the rankings. Best wishes to all for good health and scenic running paths. It is truly a worthy endeavor and I will miss it."

We here at SRI/USRSA wish Sam Johnston a quick recovery and much luck in the future.

WINTER 2018
--George A. Hancock
runnergah@comcast.net

The winter season creates unique daily obstacles for the streak runner. Of course, if that streak runner resides in a warm weather state then the question becomes, do you have room for the rest of us?

Weather, in my opinion, is the number one hurdle for any runner. Weather controls our daily run more than any factor including injuries. We have numerous health care professionals willing, skilled and able to treat, cure or prevent injury. Our online health care resources are outstanding. My health care insurance company includes a diverse and informative online library. I can easily find the necessary information about a muscle, tendon or lumbar disc issue. Plus, there is a staffed customer service center available during designated hours.

Likewise, we have many skilled weather scientists and forecasters analyzing, predicting our weather trends. Technology has evolved to a point where weather forecasting is very accurate. Satellite technology permits scientists to study the big weather picture. Software programs also assist the weather analysts studying our ever changing weather factors.

One prevalent issue is individuals ignoring the daily weather forecasts. Or, simply just not being aware of the available weather information. I cringe when watching some weather videos. Especially those showing motorists, school bus drivers, truck drivers and others drive into free flowing water.

The phrase turn around don't drown is ignored. Why would anyone drive a loaded school bus into fast flowing water? I don't care how skilled you are or how often you driven along that road. Flowing water, flash flooding, water runoff cripples infrastructures. The road could hide damaging obstacles. There could be significant road subsidence present beneath that water.

This motorist is endangering their passenger, themselves and first responders with this risky driving practice. The motorist can find an alternate route.

The runner faces a similar situation. Why would you run into flowing water? The runner could quickly disappear beneath this swift moving water. This water could easily hide numerous hazards. Turn around don't drown.

Common sense dictates that runners must practice weather aware tactics. Technology gives us updated weather information at our finger tips. There is no excuse for lax weather awareness. Most storms take time to develop and spread across our region.

One needs the proper running gear if you reside in a region with changing seasons. Every season lasts just so long. The proper mindset coupled with seasonal road gear moves us safely from here to there.

Of course, at this writing, our winter gear should be nearby and ready to go. Those daily runners running with Ice Spikes need those shoes ready to wear at a moment's notice. Runners unfamiliar with Ice Spikes or screw shoes take note.

I started using screw shoes in 2009. These days I insert Ice Spikes which are the commercial product into my trail shoes. I use trail shoes because my New Balance brand is a heavier more durable shoe. I've run on both snowy and icy surfaces with great success. I use Ice Spikes because these feature a bigger open faced bite.

Many runners use #8 ½ inch hex screws. I started using these screws. These are very inexpensive and work well. The local hardware and home center stores sell this item. The screws or spikes are very easy to insert in running shoes. It's very easy to determine a pattern that provides you with the best traction. Plus, there are many excellent instructional videos on YouTube.

Safety on the road is always an important running feature. Reflective vests, hand held lights and illuminated vests and head lamps are available from numerous sporting good outlets. Any runner out on the winter roads in dark clothing is foolish. Expecting motorists to see your dark shape on snowy roads is risky. We have outstanding safety items available at reasonable retails.

Personal safety is another winter season issue. Sadly, personal safety is a growing issue for many of our female runners. Recently, several news accounts revealed deadly attacks on female runners. A female golfer was also murdered while practicing on the university's course on a sunny afternoon.

These deadly encounters led to some disturbing revelations. Many female runners came forth describing the harassment, the vicious comments, the stalking they face while on their training runs.

These encounters clearly are far worse than those runner versus motorist episodes from road running's early days. Female runners risk serious repercussions while running alone. And, a new mindset has developed to deal with this difficult situation.

Many female runners are wearing bright reflective road gear. Self-defense classes are taken to improve personal safety. And, many female runners are now running armed. Actually, in the Greater Johnstown region many male and female runners are running armed.

Individuals can debate this point nonstop. These armed individuals are properly licensed, trained and experienced with their firearm. I understand why runners are training with a weapon.

Many communities in the Greater Johnstown region are patrolled by part-time police. Some very large communities have no local police patrols period. These communities rely on the Pennsylvania State Police for protection. However, there is a time element involved in this situation. The State Police could be anywhere in the county. It takes time for the State Police to respond to an emergency situation. Frequently, the emergency demands an immediate response. Time is critical in these often life threatening situations. Hence the armed runners even armed walkers that I encounter along the road.

The burgeoning drug trade is also fueling this new mindset. Now, I never feel threatened during my morning run. Nor have I personally been threatened in decades. An older male runner trotting along the road is probably not worth the harassing retort.

Some local runners tell me they do not fear being robbed in a drug related crime. What valuables after all is a runner carrying? The fear stems from possibly witnessing something a drug addict or drug runners wish hidden. The thought of eliminating potential witnesses is very prevalent. This is an understandable concern.

We live in difficult times. The drug situation especially opioids drains valuable resources from our communities. Sadly, the once positive and healing aspects associated with a solitary run is no longer valid for many runners.

Female runners are running in groups for added protection. There is safety in numbers. Armed runners are common place along the roads. Once distracted drivers were the main threat to an enjoyable run. Today a vast array of disturbing issues challenge the daily runner.

The daily runner must remain vigilant. A smart runner is cautious. A smart runner is alert in our fast changing surroundings. Streak runners continue on praying that one day these troubling scenarios disappear. But until that day, run smart!

40 Day Daily Mile Run Outside

By: Dr. Heinz M. Kabutz

Being a geek is for people who do not like to move a lot. Our day is spent sitting in a comfortable chair and moving only our digits. Since I was a "streak runner," I wanted to encourage a healthier lifestyle. So in August, without much forethought, I announced a challenge: "Run one mile a day for 40 days, starting tomorrow, and you will get a free copy of my latest Java Design Patterns Course, worth $525." Almost a hundred geeks signed up and nearly half got the reward.

Here are some stories that the finishers sent me afterwards:

"The biggest take away for me in participating is to push myself to finish what I started. The real challenge is not the distance itself but the perseverance to do it every day and finding ways to fit it into my schedule." - Alvin John Pagente from Singapore

"When I saw your tweet announcing the challenge I was thrilled. I wanted to do some sports since forever. Since school I didn't really do any sports regularly. Now I am a software developer, sitting most of the day and of course I know that some exercise would be good for me. But I lacked the last bit of motivation, until I attended your challenge. ... So I guess yes, you influenced my life and in a positive way. Seeing me run every day, my wife started running too :)" - Anonymous from Germany

"Heinz' running challenge finally gave me the right motivation to start running (and sports in general) again after a almost 1-year break that started with some medical conditions which had been resolved long ago." Dominik Dörn from Austria

"Lessons learned: 1. You mentioned it, but I did not listen: Start slowly. When I started running I should have forced myself to run slower. After I realized that my pulse is way too high I forced myself to run really slow (~8 min/km) and thus was able to improve. 2. I was able to do my first > 5km run since probably 25 years!!!" - Dominik Schwald from Germany

"I usually ran the same round near my home in the city center, so no beautiful natural surroundings unfortunately. A few times the only opportunity I had was running during a lunch break at work. I brought running shoes and a clean shirt to not disturb my colleagues with sweaty smells in the afternoon. ;) The last weekend, when we were nearing the 40 days, I was staying at a hotel with my family and I forgot to bring my running clothes and shoes. I still went out and 'ran' because I was so close to the finish line! Running in my normal clothing and shoes, the speed was not very impressive, haha! And I also got lost in this unknown neighborhood, so I had to stop and look up the directions back to the hotel. That definitely was my lowest of these 40 days. My highs were losing 2 kilo's (yay!) and of course breaking personal records: that time I went through the 2km limit in the 12 minute test and the other time I ran 5km in 32min22secs. But most importantly, I became addicted to running and a healthier lifestyle. I will definitely continue running after these 40 days. Probably not obsessively every single day, but I aim for at least 4 days a week. I will keep running my mile route, but also longer distances. And I will try to start interval training also!" - Lady Geek from the Netherlands

"I don't think I have any lows. It might be when I felt like I couldn't run faster (and I ran really, really slow), but even that felt good because I knew this would only help me get in better shape, so suffering a bit doesn't matter. The most fun day was when I had struggled for two hours on my first orienteering competition in my life, running around in the woods looking for the controls for about 2 hours (=1,5 hours after the winner), running/walking a total of 9 km (on a track that was only about 3 km). I was trying to figure out if Heinz would accept this orienteering competition as a run even though the average pace was really really slow. Then, when I came home after this competition and the 2 hours of workout and still didn't really have an OK, from Heinz on that run, I went out again to run a normal mile." - Helena Hjerten from Sweden

"The first week was tough, but thanks to the encouragement of everyone, I got through it. The second week I overdid it and was in A LOT of pain. I stepped back to doing just the minimum for a while and then scaled up again slowly. Then, just as I was getting longer distances and better speeds, I got a bad cold and really struggled to get through. But alas, we were almost at the end so I slowed down and powered through. I wrote a blog post (with photos) that outlines my experience in the challenge. It's a bit long and starts way before when I entered the challenge." - Jennifer Strater from Germany

"The motivation to join the challenge was kind of obvious for me. I signed up for a half marathon end of September and I am kind of lazy at running. I am cycling a lot. But on normal days I am exhausted from my cycling commute. When I prepared for a running competition in the past I usually ran 2 or 3 times before it on a weekend, ran the competition and was totally destroyed afterwards. So Heinz' call was a perfect kick in the ass. I ran 40 days in a row. Most of the times late in the evening, when my cycling was done and the kids were sleeping." - Robin de Silva Jayasinghe from Germany

"First of all, thank you for the initiative. It was very interesting to have running as a habit after so long. I'm not overweight but I wasn't exercising at all. I remember always feeling drained around 6pm before starting the challenge. Today after 40 days I feel much better, with more energy and could convince my son to run with me a few times. During the challenge a lot happened. My second son was born and a lot of other things happening at the same time. But exercising gave me the energy I needed to go ahead." - Rodrigo Graciano from the USA

"As a new software engineer, I'm always willing to learn new things, that was my main motivation to start this challenge, however, I felt a bit overwhelmed when I discovered it involved to run every day for forty days. 'I'm not a runner' was my first thought, but at the same time I thought as someone said 'if you don't try you won't succeed' and I decided to do it. I ran with the burning sun also in rain. August and September are crazy months here in my country you see. I even ran on my birthday! Something that if you had told me I was going to do, I just would have laughed.

"At first, my desire for knowledge was my engine to continue, but during the time was passing I learned something about myself. I started to have more energy during the day. I started to sleep better. My stress levels decreased. I started to feeling better about myself. I was enjoying to run and I was expecting my next run to see if I could improve my records, like a little competition with my own self. Running has become a new habit, a good one if you ask me and I'm not expecting to quit anytime soon. Sometimes you just need a little push to start a better lifestyle.

"I run everyday in my street, there aren't many safe places to run where I live, so I managed to run like 10 times my street to complete it." - Rome Jimenéz from Guatamala

"The first day was a shock (I 'ran' 1.7 km in about 11 mins), I started out running too fast assuming it would be easy (ignoring the fact that I've not been active, not even cycling, for the past 6.5 years) and was breathless with my lungs on fire within about 30 seconds. I pushed on jogging, walking, stopping every 100 m or so to catch my breath and was glad to get the first mile over with. The next day was much different, humbled, I started out very slowly but realized there were more problems areas than my lungs: I was aching from the previous day my legs were two planks of painful stiffness. For about four or five more days even walking was awkward since every muscle in my legs and hips were aching, but I was surprised at how quickly my breathing and endurance had improved and was now running about 2 km in about 11 mins without having to stop. The next two weeks brought more worries, running the mile each day was starting to become easy and I was trying to increase my pace and distance a little but soon discovered I had shin splints. A small bit of research left me wondering if it would be wiser to take a break but I pushed on trying to run carefully, concentrating on trying to land gently on my feet with each step. Thankfully after a week, the pain cleared completely. The third week was probably the best, pain-free, at last, I ran my first 3 km followed 2 days later by my first 5 km. That first 5 km was my best memory of the last 40 days because when the Endomondo app announced 4 km I was drained and was very tempted to stop since I'd only once run 3 km before. A couple of times I was about to stop and walk but I persevered and reached 5 km in 28 min 15 s, not a great time but I felt I had come a long way in 3 weeks." - Thomas McDermott from Ireland

"The heights? Where to start? The most important thing I learned is that my excuses not to do sports were just that: lame excuses. It's just a question of priorities to find a time slot where I invest in a healthy and happy life. It's raining? Not a problem for the next 15 minutes. No time to run? Just get up 30 minutes earlier or run late in the evening." - Timm Gutowski from Germany

Now to my story. I was never a runner. At school I would rather sit than move. I used any excuse to avoid exercising, even inventing IT problems for me to solve so that I would not need to go to gym class. It was the 80s, so anyone who knew how to turn on the computer was king. In 2014, overweight and hopelessly out of shape, I was asked by my wife how I wanted to spend my Easter Holidays. I said: "I want to start running." It was hard going at first, but after several years of off-and-on running, I started a streak on the 1st December 2016. Sadly, after running the 40-day challenge where I managed to inspire almost 100 programmers to move, I got a spasm in my quadratus lumborum muscle. The pain was so intense that I could only barely move around on crutches. I had to retire after 672 days running in a row. As soon as my back was getting better and my physiotherapist allowed me to, I started running again. I'm now on day #9 of my second streak. Let's see how many years I manage this time. I have addressed the issue of too much sitting by buying a treadmill desk, so that I can move whilst coding. Here's to the next 10000 days of running!

Traversing the Tundra Age 15 or Younger By: Steve DeBoer

With 96 individuals currently having run daily for over 20 years, plus another 88 with retired daily streak in the US that lasted over 20 years (the most there have ever been), you would expect the Streak community to be all aging individuals who have retired or will reach Medicare age soon. However, there has been a much greater increase in registered tundra traversers with less than 5 years under their belts and on their feet (675 of the 1128 active streakers as of 8/16/18). With online registration of one's daily runs, these numbers change every week, but here is a breakdown of the number on the active list in each decade as of 9/1/18 (1134 total):

19 and under	41
20-29 years	69
30-39 years	278
40-49 years	302
50-59 years	245
60-69 years	137
70-79 years	60
80 and over	2

If we use age 50 as a separation point, 60.8% were under age 50 on 9/1/18 and 39.2% were 50 or older. The age category with the most was those 40-49 (26.6%)

This compares to:

9/1/03 (101 total active)	9/1/08 (184 active)	9/1/13 (414 active)
38.6% under 50	28.3% under 50	41.0% under 50
61.4% 50 or older	71.7% 50 or older	59.0% 50 or older
44.6% 50-59	42.4% 50-59	29.0% 50-59

As you can see, our active, registered tundra traversers were getting older in the first 9 years of our existence (almost 72% in 2008 had reached age 50) but have gotten significantly younger since then (only 39% in 2018, reduced by almost half percentage-wise). 2018 was the first year the 40-49-year-old group became the highest percentage (50-59 was always the highest in the past, almost 45% of the total in 2003). If we go back to George Hancock's first list of daily runners in December 1994 (when I celebrated my 40th birthday), 21 of 51 were in the 40-49 age range (41.2%). And there were actually more 30-39-year-olds than 50-59 year-olds. Ah, the good "old" days!

I will now turn my attention to our most youthful group, those age 15 or under. I will limit this analysis to daily runners in the US, as only 2 international streakers began before age 20 (Michael Kernahan of Australia reached 1 year in 2014 at age 18, and James Chalken of Great Britain – registered in September - hit the year mark on 1/1/18, just before reaching age 15). That means, non-US residents have had only 1 of 130 active (0.75%) began before 15.

When George Hancock published that first list of streak runners in this country, there were 51 individuals listed, ranging in age from 20-year-old Phillip Stuart to 65-year-old Len Burton. Many of those who began running daily (Mark Covert, Jon Sutherland, Steve DeBoer, Bob Hensley, Steve Gathje, Dave Hamilton) were less than 20 years old when they started. But by the time the US Running Streak Association was established in December 2000, only 3 runners had begun daily running before age 15 – Kurt Kroemer of MD (age 14 in 1975), John Wallace III of MI (age 13 in 1989), and Joel Pearson (age 8 years, 10 ½ months in 1994). That meant 3 of 113, or just under 3%, were pre-15 beginners. When the Association approved the 1-mile minimum requirement, Kurt dropped off the list, as he often had days that did not reach the minimum. The other two, John and Joel continue daily runs in the present, both supported by streaking relatives. Both John's dad and mom, John Jr. & Karen, are daily runners. Joel's dad, Jim, has now run daily since February 1970, almost 49 years, and is #2 on the Active List. Joel's uncle, Don, brother, Hopper, and sister, Paige, have retired streaks. Joel was the first under age 12, 11, 10 and 9, to do it daily, and was the youngest on the list until Paige began her streak at age 13 in August 2002. By then the Streak Association approved the requirement that one must have run daily for 365 days to get listed, so I will use the age when individuals reached the year mark for the rest of this article.

Tim West of MA became the second daily runner to reach the one-year mark before age 10 in 2007 (9 yrs. 11 months). He ended his streak after 2 years, while his mother, Nancy, who began at the same time, continues running daily today. By the end of 2008, only 4 under 15 had registered, of the 185 on the active list (2.2%). Adding in the 50 others on the retired list that were not duplicates of the active tundra traversers, that would be 1.7% of total registerees.

Fast forward to September 2013 and over that 5 years, our registered total increased to 414 active and about 160 additional individuals on the retired list that were not duplicated. We added 5 persons who reached 1 year before age 15 – R. Christopher Reed (NV, 6/20/09 start, see TSR Fall 2018), Brad Blaszyński (PA, 8/30/09 start), Yeraj Rust (CA, 8/12/11 start), Jonathan Reid (FL, 11/25/11 start), and Keziah Wilde (MA, 5/13/12 start, see TSR Summer 2017). Chris & Jonathan had fathers who ran daily; Brad started with his mother, though her streak ended; both of Yeraj’s parents are streaking. Keziah was the only one who didn’t have a relative doing the streak thing. Of the nine total (2 females), only 7 (1 female, Keziah) are still active, which works out to 1.6% when counting the active and retired together. When Keziah made it to 3 years, her update was, “Still running every day and loving it. My parents think I’m crazy!”

Returning to the 9/1/18 analysis, of the 217 persons with running streaks of less than 2 years, 12 are under age 15, which as a percentage is 5.5%. Of course, that percentage is not as high if we include all active (26 of 1134 = 2.3%), but still the highest since the 1-mile minimum requirement was instituted.

Here are the other young streakers who have registered in the past 5 years (32 total, as 20 of them have streaks longer than 2 years):

Regarding siblings, Joel & Paige Pearson were the first to both be under 15 when they started. The Walt brothers from CA came next (their mom had registered previously). But in January 2017, 4 siblings, the Thorsons from MN registered, along with their mother (their dad had been running daily a year previous). Jenna Thorson was the first to reach one year before age 9 (younger than Joel Pearson) and Lauren was first before age 7. Along with a brother-in-law, there are 7 streak runners in their family, the most in any family in the world.

Here is a note from Beth Thorson, who compiled answers to some questions I sent from her running brood:

How long had you been running before you started streaking?

Answers on this ranged: maybe one year, two years, several years, a long time. In actuality, we can't really remember when they started running for fun because they were so young. Mike started running in 2008, as a way to improve health. At that time, Oliver was 4, Natalie 2, Jenna just born, and Lauren not yet born.

Mike and Oliver Thorson:

"I think this is 2009 at Twin Cities, Oliver ran a one mile race the day before Mike's first marathon."

Do you run alone, in pairs, or as a family?

Yes, all of the above.

Lauren Thorson:
"Sometimes they run alone. Lauren running on vacation, summer 2017."

Or we run in larger groups.

"Oliver, Natalie, Beth, Lauren, Jenna [Thorson] on a very cold mile in Charles Lindbergh State Park, winter 2016. Photo by Mike, he ran three very cold miles while we found a wood stove."

What's the farthest distance you've run?

Oliver: 10.1

Natalie: 4.1

Jenna: 8.5

Lauren: 8.0

What motivates you to continue streak running?

Oliver: It's a habit.

Natalie: Because I've been doing it for almost three years.

Jenna: I like it and it makes me better at everything!

Lauren: I'm the youngest one on the streak registry, and if I stopped my sister would be the youngest streaker.

Have you ever almost missed a day?

Oliver: broken foot - In August 2016, Oliver broke his fifth metatarsal jumping off a dock. Luckily he'd already run that day, and was only kept overnight in the hospital after surgery to place a pin that rendered the rest of his summer un-swimmable. He ran for 35 days in a boot. His right shoe was considerably more worn than the left after that!

Also once we were at the lake and in order to avoid running on the highway I had to run laps back and forth on a dead end.

Natalie: My dad and I had to get up really early in the morning on the return trip from Mexico, so I did my mile in the San Diego Airport.

Jenna: Nope

Lauren: This summer we were at the lake with our aunt and uncle and cousins. Everyone else ran in the morning. We got in bed at night, and my sister asked if I'd run that day. I hadn't, so I got my uncle out of bed and he ran a mile with me at 10pm!

Do you run for enjoyment or to stay in shape for other sports?

Oliver: enjoyment. Running is my sport.

Natalie: Dance. I do ballet, modern and jazz.

Jenna: Enjoyment and Dance; ballet and modern.

Lauren: Dance (ballet) and soccer

Then this year, Darrell Stempke and 3 of his kids registered, Jackson being under 6 at one year. But his sister, Sierra, who started a little later, has the new youngest mark, being 4 years and 11 months when she got to 365 consecutive days.

Here is a note from their Dad about how they got started:

First, your math on their ages sounds right. It was purposeful to have Sierra start before Jackson to break the family "record" just for some internal fun. She's not a naturally competitive person. Our competitive child is Eli, the oldest of the four (we have one more child, Annalise, age 3, that runs with us sometimes).

Eli was the first to start the streak and he wasn't really a runner before he started the streak. I was a runner, but almost ALWAYS took at least one day off a week. He played baseball for our local Pony league. There was a phenom on our team named Tyler Vladic that was a one-kid wrecking crew and definitely had some speed. I remember leaving the field and asked his dad if he played Division 1 sports...assuming this kid must have good genes. When he realized why I was asking, he said, "You know, he just likes to work and exercise. I go running, and he always wants to go running with me."

It must have stuck with Eli, because he asked me a day or two later why I never took him running with me. Although I couldn't take a kid that young on my hour run, I told him I'd swing by the house and pick him up for our mile cool down. We did it every day for a full week. I commented to him that I didn't think I've ever run 7 days in a row since I always usually took a day off. He asks me if 7 days in a row is a record and I tell him the record is much more, I'm sure. He had me look it up and we found your site with people around 45 years! He said right there at the computer that he wanted to break that record.

One of the days during that 7 day streak, Eli didn't do the whole mile...so that ended up giving me a 4 day head start on him. 😊

We almost always run together, Eli and Jack in front with Sierra and I in back. Most of the time, we do the run while dinner is getting prepared or right after dinner. We jog slowly and do exactly a mile every day. We talk about our days. I usually have to give them a turn to talk because one kid won't have a problem talking the whole mile. When Sierra started, she was slower than the boys, so I'd run with her and the boys would double back at every corner.

The furthest distance they've run was 5k. We do the St. Anthony 5k in Long Beach every year. This past March, I think their times were about 25, 30, and 40 minutes going from oldest to youngest.

They are all self-motivated to run every day. In fact, the best threat I can give them is that if they don't behave, they won't get to run with me. If I give that threat, they finish their veggies, clean their room, or whatever the task is in front of them...without delay.

We don't really keep track of time except for the 5k in March and we do a mile family race every Easter. Eli's fastest time so far is 7:20 for a mile, which was on the sand. I'm sure he could break 7 now.

There were many times that completing the run was a challenge, including:

- Last summer, Eli and Jackson went on a hike with my family to Mt. Whitney from the west side. On Thursday, we ran our mile at Long Lake at about 11k feet high. On day two, we ran at around 10K feet in Guyot flats in the middle of the day. And the last day, we started our hike at 4:30 am and were done at 6pm after 16 tough miles. After this, we ran our mile in the parking lot at 8.35K. Oddly, it seemed like it was harder for me than it was for them!
- Any time the family splits up, like when I go on a business trip, the biggest stress is making sure that someone else runs the kids. So my wife, sister-in-law, and their grandparents are all experts at this and know I need a text to confirm it's done.
- There is a dog named Angel that barks at us every time we run by their house...which is two laps for each mile. One time, the dog got loose and bit two of my kids, and drew blood on Sierra. It's a small dog, so we kept running. I didn't realize until we got home that her bottom was bleeding.
- Every kid has gotten the stomach flu at least once during their streak. We just wait until they throw up, and we run during that temporary relief you have. Once, Eli went quite a few hours without throwing up, so we gave it a shot...and were wrong. He started throwing up as soon as we started...but he just kept jogging along AS he was throwing up. He intended to keep going! We went back to the house and tried again later that day.

The kids don't really run to be in shape, although they understand that it's a healthy thing to do and take pride in that. We don't try to run fast. They all do other activities, but it doesn't even seem like the mile gives them any competitive advantage in sports. I think we run it too leisurely. I think it does give them some grit, though, which definitely helps for hiking trips.

The reason the other kids started coming with Eli and me was more that they wanted to spend time with me after I've been at work all day. My 3 year old comes with us a few times a week, and sometimes she even takes the lead! Our mile time is typically 12-13 minutes, I would guess. You can tell Anna doesn't want to start a streak and doesn't really understand the concept. She'll just decide when she sees us getting ready to go that she wants to join in. Probably about a month before her 4th birthday, I'll see if she has interest in the streak.

After Eli made it to 100 days, we let him choose a prize which had to be something that we could all share in, like frozen yogurt or bowling. Each kid got to pick a prize like that, then we do a family activity to celebrate each time they hit another year anniversary. Jackson just hit his 3 year anniversary while we were on our recent Whitney hiking trip.

Eli is the only child that I would label as being competitive, so it's easy for me to see what drives him in wanting to keep the streak. I'm not really sure what motivates the other kids. I've gotten ahead of myself and thought, "Sierra would be sad when she has a baby some day because I'm sure she'd have to break her streak." Obviously, there is a LONG way to go before that, though.

PS I ran the Grand Forks marathon on September 29th, getting my 50th Boston qualifying time. My plan is to actually race the event in 2020 and hopefully meet some of my fellow streak runners who compete there. Of course, as always, God willing, I am still running by then!

PPS: In the last 3 months, we have seen the first state with 150 streak runners (MN), the 2nd state with 140 (CA), the 3rd with 120 (TX), and the 4th with 100 (PA). Also the 1st with 90 active (MN), 2nd with 80 active (CA) and 3rd with 70 active (TX). Though FL has fewer total streak runners than PA, it looks like it will be the 4th to have 60 active soon:

HEATHER PLUMMER'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 4,225 DAYS

On July 9th, 2018, Heather Plummer ran for her 4,225th consecutive day. The final day of her first running streak. Later that day, her son Lee Plummer was born.

The streak lasted eleven years, 6 months and 25 days. It began when she was 15 years old. During the 11+ years, she evolved from a young teenager, to a college student, to an elementary school teacher. She got married and moved three times. And she ran every day. She ran several marathons, a 50K and numerous trail races in the central Texas area (all of them with her Dad). She ran every day of her pregnancy including the day of her child's birth. She also did Crossfit up until the end of her pregnancy.

Due to the timing of the birth and doctor's orders, the streak was forced to end. However, Heather has begun a new streak. Heather has continued running every day, just as she has since she was 15 years old. She took a quick break to bring a beautiful baby into this world, and now she has picked-up where she left off.

JOHN WOLFF'S STREAK HITS 28 YEARS

As you noted, I completed my 28th year of my running streak today August 31 and begin year 29 tomorrow. I continue to run a minimum of 3 miles per day and shoot for an 8 minute or better per mile pace except when I get challenged by one of my daughters-then the pace quickens as we shoot for family bragging rights.

CHRIS BRACKMAN'S STREAK HITS 7 YEARS

Thanks for the reminder of my anniversary. Hard to believe it has been 7 years already! In some ways it seems like I just got started.

All of my runs continue to be outside no matter what the weather. The only challenge I've had this year was being diagnosed with mild peripheral neuropathy in both feet. After much poking, prodding, and testing the doctors have been unable to determine a cause. Thankfully there's no pain, but there's always a level of numbness present. Not enough to keep me from running on though! Fortunately my doctor also runs so he just told me to keep on doing what I've been doing.

I continue to draw inspiration from all my fellow streakers and really admire the way so many have overcome obstacles put in their way.

I'm thankful for all the blessings I've received from the Lord this past year and pray that all of you have continued success in your running!

BRYAN NIEBANCK'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

I have kept up my running streak as I move across the world, from Connecticut to Ohio and even to Israel. I love how running allows me to explore and clear my head. I ran my second marathon in April 2018 and am preparing for another. I typically run less in the summer months and build up the mileage again for spring marathons. I ran one thousand miles in 2017 and have already logged nearly 700 miles in 2018. The most difficult miles have been after dental surgeries, but taking it slow and steady there will be nothing to stop me from running every day.

ELLEN WESTFELT'S STREAK HITS 5 YEARS

My streak is well and alive. :-)) I've just been out running and, on my way home, I picked up 2 litres of blueberries... This is the great thing about a runstreak, you get to see and experience the most diverse things! This year I've been running in the US, Norway, Spain, Sweden of course, and will be going to Reunion Island (FRA) later this year to run the epic ultra-race called Diagonale des Fous (170 k and 10,000 meters of elevation gain). Wish me luck!

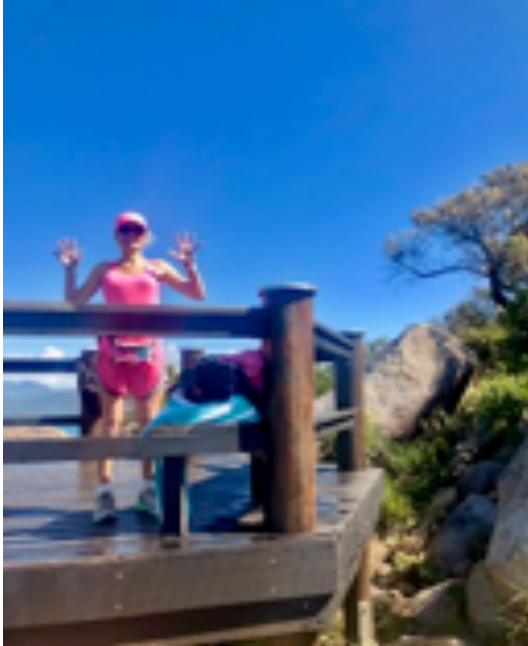

I've also been part of getting a lot of people in Sweden to try out a runstreak. Around 700 people registered for an event in January and many of them are still running!

Ellen Westfelt

DEB JOHNSON'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

I'm still streaking. Today completes year 4....total run streak miles 8288.8....so I ran 5 miles to celebrate my goal of running another year. I ran the Big Sur marathon in April, a bucket list marathon, and plan to run St. George marathon in one month. I'm also considering trying my first 50k next year. Keeping on keeping on, or as Scott Jurek says, "sometimes you just do things."

DAVE HACEK'S STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

It is hard to believe that 3 years has past since I started my run streak. I would be happy to give you an update on my run streak. To start with my year mileage for the first three is as follows.

Year 1 - 2,139 miles

Year 2 – 2096.86 miles

Year 3 – 2197.49 miles

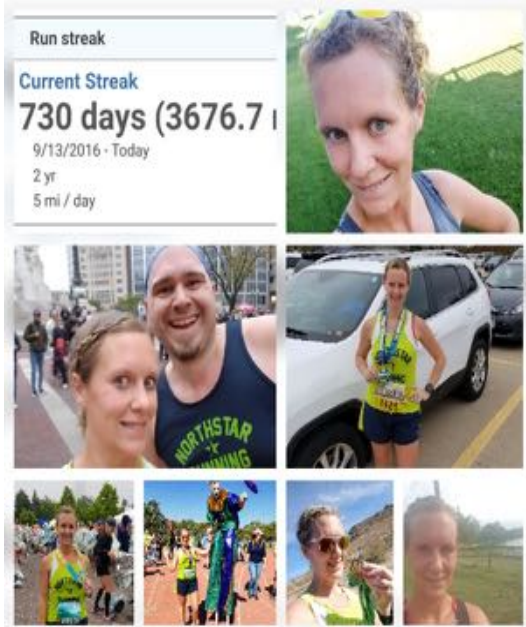

Dave Hacek
Albany, Oregon

Total streak miles as of September 11, 2018
- 6,455.2 miles

When I first started the streak I was hoping just to get to 30 days and like all I just kept going. The first year went by quickly with no issues, then somewhere around 420 days into the streak I had a left calf issue and thought about ending the streak around day 440 just before Thanksgiving in 2016. Thankfully my calf issue got better and the streak was safe. So in January of 2017 I started training for my 7th marathon in May for the Avenue of the Giants in the Redwoods in northern California. I set my PR marathon on May 6, 2017 finishing in 3:44:24 and then on Thanksgiving Day turkey trot set my 5K PR time of 21:28. 2017 was good year with no issues and many great memories along the way.

So let's move into 2018 and once again in January I begin my training for my 8th marathon to be run in May at the Vancouver BC marathon. Training went well and marathon course was beautiful, but I struggled from mile 12 and finally finished in 4:40 and change. I was disappointed with my time but I did become an International Marathoner. So what better thing to do than train for my 9th marathon which I will run on Saturday September 15, 2018 at the Pacific Northwest Marathon. I'm going to just try and have some fun and not put pressure on myself to post a Boston Qualifying time. For my age I need to run a sub 3:40 marathon. My training has gone good so in just a few days I will find out the results.

One of the great benefits of running every day is losing a few extra pounds. Since the streak started I'm down 15 pounds and down 115 pounds from my 300 pounds at age 38, prior to my running career started. Once again thanks for letting me share a bit about my run streak.

Missie Jacobson

MISSIE JACOBSON'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

I have learned more about how to balance and get creative with my running. Winter I logged so many treadmill miles during the day so I didn't take away from family time. This summer I ran a ton of miles with the kids. Gannan (5) rode his balance bike and Gavan (8) would run or bike or both. Now with school starting I am running more while they are in school and it works out so I learned to balance! This also inspired Gavan to start his streak.

Here is the fun part, my stats!

730 days of at least a mile
 1749.5 miles
 average 4.79 a day
 399 hours running
 Completed 15 races with PRs in these distances (how much I took off too)
 1 mile - 4 sec off
 5k - 43 sec off
 half - 1:35 off
 Ran in 5 states

Highlight of this year: Marquette half marathon. I know my other trips were so fun but that race was so beautiful. I loved looking at the scenery and just running easy so I enjoyed it!

My streak is well and my running performance has been steadily improving. The daily minimum is 10km and I'm fortunate that I never get any serious injury. I'm currently training for EndurRun 2019 (<http://endurrun.com>) which is an event comprised of 7 races in one week.

LINDA VANDUYNHOVEN JOINS SRI FROM AUSTRALIA

I am a 54-year-old lady who lives in Melbourne, Australia. I am a Registered Nurse working in the Emergency Department of my local Community Hospital. My husband is a runner (but not a stalker), and I have two children, my son aged 21 who is a great little runner, however only comes out running occasionally and my daughter who is 18, and not a runner, (at this stage, but I'm working on that).

About 7 years ago, I was a little overweight and sedentary. A work colleague began running for fitness and I clearly remember saying to her - "you'll never catch me running."

Fast forward a few months, and her running partner had bailed on her so I nervously met her one weekend for a run. From that breathless slow shuffle, we continued every Sunday morning to meet bright and early, and as our fitness improved our distance got further and we eventually signed up for our 1st Half Marathon.

We continued those Sunday long runs for years, she was the best running buddy you could ask for, always on time, never let you down whatever the weather. We grew from colleagues to best friends.

4 Years ago parkrun came to my area and I became heavily involved with Lillydale Lake parkrun, and was on the committee for several years. This really extended my running circle of friends, and it is great to have so many running friends to run with. We have travelled far and wide to events, and had many fabulous weekends away to go running. We prefer trail running to road running.

Within this group of running friends, a running Streak competition was started in 1st October 2017 for a bit of fun. 16 people started, and by approx day 200, I was the only person left. My streak had come to mean so much more to me than a bit of fun. I embrace it with pride and integrity, appreciate the great days and draw strength from the challenging days.

I was greatly anticipating my 1 year of streaking, (30th September 2018) and it turned out that we were away camping that weekend at the beautiful Wilson's Promontory where I ran RSD 365 along the beach with my husband beside me and my original running buddy Jo there who presented me with a bottle of champagne. Couldn't have been happier.

I am not a fast runner, but I can go far. Next month I will be running the Marathon at Queenstown, New Zealand. A very beautiful place to run.

I have been greatly inspired and encouraged by all of the Streak Runners International members who are all amazing, and I hope to be streaking for a while longer. My next goal is the comma. Thank you to everyone for the support.

GRANT GOODMAN' STREAK HITS 21 YEARS

I am still going strong and have completed a 65 mile ultra this fall and ran 50 miles of the North Country trail in August. I believe I am finally past the hamstring injuries that have slowed me over the past 2 years, but with the help of a great physical therapist I have been able to keep the streak alive.

I am still coaching high school cross country and track so staying motivated isn't a problem.

I do about 4-5 races a year and my next plan is to run another ultra next fall and possibly try to run rim to rim of the Grand Canyon in the summer. My lifetime mileage is a little over 92,000 miles at the time of this writing, so in about 3 years, I should crack the 100,000 barrier, and I should hit the 10,000 day mark on 2/20/25.

Grant Woodman

SAM LATHROP'S STREAK HITS 6 YEARS

I'm still running, even when it's difficult due to travel, sickness, and obligations. I very much enjoy knowing that I've inspired a few people to start.

The best thing about the streak is looking back on it. I know my first run was in Minneapolis on a treadmill and it wasn't planned as day 1 or anything, I'd just decided to start running again.

Since then it's been a constant, ranging from a chore to a wonderful expectation. I've woken in the middle of the night in terror that I missed my run, only to check my log and confirm that I ran earlier that day.

International travel is a planning nightmare, I aim to keep my runs synced to a 24 hr Eastern time zone, but daylight savings is always difficult to deal with. At the end of the day, I know what I did yesterday, what I'm doing today, and what's going to happen tomorrow. So here's to constants.

PAUL RUSSO'S STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

My streak is still ongoing. I'm doing a 3 mile minimum each day. I had a very close call a few weeks ago when I hurt my back, but managed to do a few very slow and painful miles each day. It was the first time I really thought the streak was going to end. It's all better now, so I'm running freely.

RICH JONES' STREAK HITS 5 YEARS

I feel very fortunate to report that I recently reached the five-year mark on my running streak. During the past five years I've run a total of more than 5,000 miles and biked more than 7,500 miles. Just a few of my most memorable runs include one along Omaha Beach in Normandy France, one in the Rocky Mountains with a light snow falling, and another running across the Chain Bridge in Budapest Hungary. I've also run several 5Ks but don't have many first place medals. And I've ridden the RAGBRAI bike ride across Iowa the past five years. The most important numbers for me are that my blood pressure and cholesterol counts are good - however my BMI indicates that I'm still not tall enough! A fondness for red wine and dark chocolate may have had some impact on my BMI.

I want to thank the organizers and contributors to this newsletter in that I find much encouragement for my running in the stories that are shared. As one of the earlier authors noted I haven't seen a stop sign yet so I intend to keep running every day.

ROBERT BUIKEMA'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 1,381 DAYS

Sorry to report that the last day of my streak was Thursday, October 4. By my count it was 1381 days and 5520 miles. I suffered a back injury and was not able to get out the door yesterday.

Streaking changed my life and I was really hoping to make it five years at least. Today is a very difficult day.

LARRY DOOLEY'S STREAK HITS 13 YEARS

My streak is intact and going strong. As I enter my 14th year I am still working full time with a very heavy travel schedule. I fly about 175 x's a year with over 150 hotel nights so as you can imagine keeping the streak alive has its challenges but I would never start my day no matter how early without a run. I run every morning as early sometimes as 2:30-3:00 am so I can catch an early flight. I do admit on more than a few occasions I do only 1.5 miles to "check the box" but will more than make up for it on my next day's run. My boss, the CEO of my company, thinks the "streak" is great and never fails to ask me how it is going and did I run that day and my answer is always the same "of course."

Larry Dooley

ROGER CROSSLEY'S STREAK HITS 7 YEARS

The past year was a decent one although I continue to slow down in regards to my pace (now averaging 10-minute miles instead of a pace closer to 9 minutes a couple of years ago). I guess that's to be expected to a certain degree as age becomes a factor (I turned 65 in August). Plus my stride has been affected by nagging arthritis especially in my hips.

The good news is my mileage has not been affected. It's actually increased over the past year & I set a personal best for monthly mileage in July at 222.3 miles then broke that mark in August with a total of 228.5. My daily average mileage for the duration of my streak now stands at 6.16. However, I have had to back off a little lately due to another arthritis flare-up in my right hip.

I continue to run my lion's share of miles on a treadmill, but of course much prefer running outside when I can (when time & weather permit). My current treadmill has over 10K miles on it now & is still performing well although like me it's seen better days (it's a trusty old Sole F85). I believe treadmill running is more difficult (at least for me) than running outside or on an indoor track (by the way our local RecPlex has a beautiful sixth of a mile indoor track). On a treadmill there's no room for wandering side to side & if you don't touch the controls once you start (I don't) you're forced to maintain your pace or else. It takes a certain amount of concentration that's not required running outside or on a track. Plus there's the boredom issue which can make concentration difficult. Lucky for me boredom isn't much of an issue. I never seem to tire of listening to music when I run.

SHANDRA STOUT STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

I started running casually while studying for the bar in 2007, because a friend had to be able to run some distance to pass her Navy physical. I started running races and found, while perhaps not a love for physically running, I liked the effects of having run and got addicted to completing races, setting and meeting goals and increasing mileage. I ran reasonably consistently - but never daily - through two pregnancies and various life changes. In 2016 I had a drastic career change and moved from our home of 12 years and everyone we knew for a new job. I had let running lapse while job hunting and moving so I started slowly building mileage when we moved into our new home. I started running every day because it was the only way to get my 10,000 steps while working a new job. I remember we had a hurricane on October 15, 2016 so I didn't run. Then sometime in January I realized it had been a long time since I took a day off and I went back over my records and realized I could get to a 100 day streak. So I did that. Then I figured I'd just keep going to 200...then 300, at which point I was obviously planning on a year. Now it's suddenly been two years (and now I find times in the hurricanes to run - we aren't coastal). My family has adjusted to the fact that I need to find time to get a run in, no matter where we are. My daughter has started joining me occasionally for a mile.

The biggest change I see from running daily for two years (other than very significant calf strength increases) is that while I previously enjoyed being a runner, I did not particularly find the actual running relaxing. I like eating, so I liked burning calories, but did I actually like *running*? Now I do - I will go out with no music in the driving rain because I enjoy it. It is no longer a chore I check off - sure, not every day is great, but a good run at the start of a day? That's going to be a good day.

KYLE SATHER'S STREAK HITS TWO YEARS

I'm very pleased to reach Year Two of my run streak. I find myself quite fortunate to avoid significant injury for this long. Most of my friends keep asking me how long I actually intend on continuing the streak and I think some are finally catching on that I will continue as long as I possibly can. I celebrated my anniversary by stacking two doughnuts on top of each other and lighting two candles. Here's hoping I can reach three doughnuts next September!

One day at a time.

I've been running since 2014. One of my friends convinced me to sign up for Whistlestop half marathon in Ashland, Wisconsin. I ended up not really training for it but showing up anyway. I finished in about 3:20.

Since then I've become hooked on running. I just ran Whistlestop half again this October and finished it in 2:22. I'm not terribly fast, but being able to see my progress is motivating.

I have run Grandma's marathon 3 times as well as a slew of other races like the Eugene Curnow trail marathon, Wheels off half marathon, Afton 25k, and some others that I am forgetting.

My run streak is too new to be registered yet. I started it on January 1st, 2018. I am looking forward to celebrating its first birthday this winter.

According to Strava and Garmin accounts, my lifetime mileage is 1,752 as of 10/16/18. My Runkeeper profile, which is my oldest account, says it's 1,771. I'll have to do some studying of my own data to figure out my official lifetime mileage.

I am working on hitting 1,000 miles in 2018. As of 10/16 I am at 783 miles. Super excited to be able to register my streak in January!

LAUREN HORNER'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

My streak is still going strong! I am an assistant cross country and track coach and my streak has been an inspiration to my students. It has been a testament to perseverance and determination.

On October 6 (my streak anniversary), I was at 4,4781.5 streak miles and 1,445.5 miles for 2018! For the past month, I have been running through a knee injury, a strained plica tendon. Some days are just one-mile days on the treadmill with a 3% incline and some days I am able to run with my team, although I am still unable to do the full varsity workout with them. Thankfully, my knee is improving and I am still running!

I have run in several races this past year - a few 5ks, a 10k, and the Blue Ridge Marathon. I have also run through a mild case of plantar fasciitis, which happened after running a long marathon training run that involved running up and down a couple of mountains.

Looking forward to running my 5th year of my running streak!

The Facebook community is very inspiring. It took me almost three years to join USRSA, because I wanted to make sure I was reasonably worthy. Its hard to imagine how many years people have remained loyal to their streaks.

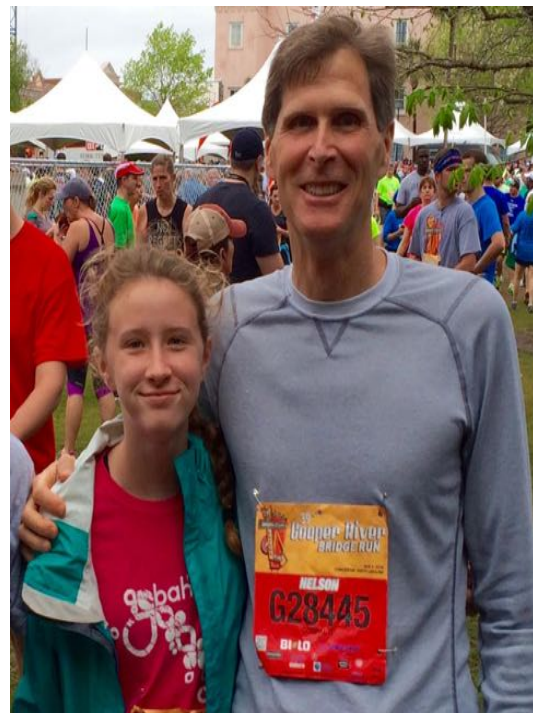

I came to running as an adult. And, I have to admit, well into my forties I still carried a preconceived notion that running was an elitist sport and hobby. It wasn't until I ran my very first 5K, at age 50, (Save the Light 5K to raise money of the Morris Island Light House restoration), that I experienced the welcoming and supportive thrill of the starting line. After that I increased my participation in local charity runs. As I began to learn how beneficial running is to brain, muscle, and bone health, I upped my fitness training. By the time 2015 rolled around, I was running about five times a week. Beginning January 1st, 2016, I committed to a 30-day streak challenge that the No Meat Athlete podcast (now No Meat Athlete Radio) promoted, and I just kept going. I especially enjoy participating in bridge runs. I run the Charleston South Carolina Cooper River Bridge 10K with my daughter each year, as well as, the Annapolis Bay Bridge 10K with a longtime friend.

My running streak and the inspiration I've obtained from the running community led to my very first half marathon last December on Kiawah Island, finishing in 2:10:45, chip time. I'm taking my daily running streak seriously, but in stride so to speak, trying not to think much beyond today's run. This year, at 57, I'm signed up for my very first full marathon, also on Kiawah Island. My choice has everything to do with the fact that it's one of the flattest runs around. I'm especially interested in becoming more involved in trail running as my running career progresses.

BEN ROSA'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

I remember my first attempt at a run streak in 2011 after reading about the streak running phenomena in an article on the internet. My streak lasted exactly 11 days before I quit due to muscle soreness and plantar fasciitis. I was a regular runner until late 2015 when I quit for a year due to the same ailments.

On September 30, 2016 I committed myself to a new run streak and have been running on average over 4 miles daily since. I am proud to have accomplished a 2-year streak and plan to continue streaking.

Doing small things consistently results in big accomplishments and major life changes. I have seen many positive gains in all aspects of my life and attribute a great many of those to the discipline that I have developed during my streak. My friends, family and work colleagues are very impressed with my accomplishment and serve as my biggest cheerleaders. Looking forward to writing an article next year when my run streak reaches 3 years. Until then....Streak on!

KELLY NELSON'S STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

The streak is still alive and I'm excited to be rolling into year 4. No amazing accomplishments related to running this year. At this stage in life allocating time to run every day is the accomplishment, and the thing that keeps me sane. I'm so thankful to be able to run every day. Love the newsletters and updates- thank you!!

BRENDA LEPICH'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

Yes, it is my 4 year Runniversary!

I still do 5 miles every day and 10 on most Sundays! Always outside! Even in Wisconsin which can be challenging for sure!

JOSH FOOR STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

This past year of run streaking was one of the most challenging years of my streak thus far, but in a good way. Our daughter was born near the end of my third year of run streaking and I was promoted to the rank of Master Sergeant in the US Army, which caused us to do a cross country move from Lafayette, Indiana to Phoenix, Arizona.

My streak has stayed intact and I'm averaging right at five miles per day over the course of my run streak. My two dogs join me on most of my runs and now that we live in Arizona I have some amazing scenery to look at that is different from the flat farm land of the Midwest or east coast scenery that I've encountered over the last several years. Running is so symbolic to life and my streak has made me a better person all around.

I have an amazing wife who encourages me, my daughter loves to be pushed in the BOB jogging stroller, my dogs love to run, I have made so many friends and our friendships have strengthened as we've embraced the suck together along some difficult runs.

I am also thankful for you and for the USRSA and the entire running community for the support.

Streak on! Blessings!

MICHELLE RAMSDELL'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 974 DAYS

I'm sad to report that my streak has ended. I had been dealing with an overuse piriformis injury that wasn't improving so I agreed with my PT to stop the streak. I went for what I thought would be my last run of the streak and then added up the mileage – it came to 2998.95.

I could not leave it like that! So, I ran one more day (1.05 of course) to make it an even 3000. The number of days came to 974 (if only I had done the math a few days earlier...).

The good news is that I'm healthy again and back to running and racing. I hope to start another streak soon and now I'll have a goal to shoot for (or past).

NICK CAPERNA'S STREAK HITS 11 YEARS

Yes, still maintaining the streak. Averaging 10m a day. No major injuries or issues. Plenty of challenges. Thankful for both.

We had our first child in May and that has really been a game changer. My wife has been incredibly understanding and supportive. That has helped tremendously.

My father-in-law has renewed an old love for running this year as well. It's been a joy to share daily running results with him and see his progress. We ran a 5k together in the early fall.

My hope this year is that I can maintain my love for running until my son is old enough to run a few with me.

Keep moving forward each day.

BILL SHIRES' STREAK HITS 32 YEARS

Yes, another year has passed, and my streak continues. I am now counting up from 32 years instead of 31. It doesn't seem like enough time has passed to make it so.

As to what I am doing now....To soften the load on my legs, I have transitioned much of my longer mileage from the roads to the trails. The transition has gone well as I won the New South Trail Marathon in March. I spent the middle part of the running a number of different 5k to 50k trail races. Just a few weeks ago, I finished my first 50 mile in just over 9 hours.

If my legs continue to stand the running, I plan to do even more trail races in the coming year. Possibly, I would like to attempt a 100 miler – just to see what it feels like to run 100 miles.

Thanks again for reaching out. Hopefully, if all goes, we will be talking about me hitting 33 years next October. Happy Trails!

Tomorrow [3 November 2018] is 11 years that I have run at least a mile a day!! My husband will take me out to eat to celebrate! My dream is to run a mile a day until I am 93 which will be 40 years! Yippee! So great I have this to do!!! Lots of love.

My running streak is going strong! Spending most of my time running trails. A huge mountain lion crossed my path just ten minutes before I was to do my run near a campground in Umatilla National Forest, SE Washington. Drove to a lookout tower parking lot to run in circles instead. Heard loud rifle shots pulling into campsite after my run, and neighboring campers said they just saw two bear cubs in camp! I run with a large canister of bear spray now.

Alan Watts

ALAN WATTS JOINS USRSA

Hello, my name is Alan Watts. I ran my very first mile in March of 2013, at the age of 51, after my wife talked me into signing up for a 5K. I started with the couch to 5K app and got hooked on running after my first 5K in April of 2013. Later that month, I ran the Nashville Rock and Roll Half Marathon with no training. I googled the guy who won the marathon and found he was looking for athletes to coach. So I hired a coach and 12 months later I qualified for the Boston Marathon.

I had early run streaks of 99, 97, and 121 days and have now been on a run streak since January 16, 2015. My average miles per day has stayed steady at 8.2. My run streak includes 5 of the Abbott Majors with only Tokyo remaining, which I am planning to run in 2020.

My name is Sam Mason and I have been running since my soccer career ended in 2012. Living right near a park in DC, I try to run in the woods whenever possible. I ran my first marathon in 2016 and since then have run other marathons and half marathons. I am looking to continue the streak as long as possible as well as see if I can push myself to do an ultra.

DAVID EICKEN'S STREAK HITS 5 YEARS

I started running in May of 1980 as a couple of my fellow letter carriers ran and we would run after work. They both quit running and I continued on my own. That Fall I ran a 4-mile race and was my fastest race ever as finished in 27:29 for a 6:53 pace.

After that race I continued to run 3 or 4 times a week for the next 20 years without entering a race and then another co-worker I found out had run a couple marathons and was training for another and I thought I would like to do that. At that time, I was only running 3 times a week but my job was carrying mail so I got a lot of exercise doing that.

I did run a 20-mile run before the marathon in Madison Wisconsin in May of 2000. I finished it in 4:16 and then that Fall I ran another marathon at the Quad Cities (Moline Ill.) which I finished in 4:15.

The following year I ran 2 more marathons with my fastest being 4:07 in Rochester, Minnesota. After that the following couple of years I trained for a marathon but the weather stopped me once and the other time I had a cold.

In 2004 I ran my first half marathon with a time of 1:54 and hurt my piriformis muscle and took a couple months off but didn't help so back to running.

I retired in 2005 and upped my mileage and got a hip stress fracture so ran very little in 2006. In 2007 I ran another half but finished in 2:16 which is my slowest. Since then I have run 39 half marathons total with a p.r. of 1:50 and have run halves in 31 states but have raced in 37 states.

Thanksgiving of 2013 there was a challenge to run every day between Thanksgiving and Christmas and I thought that would be fun so I did that and just continued to run every day.

I have run in several countries from the top of a hotel in Peru, then in Costa Rica, Moscow and Kenya. I ran in the Paris and Frankfurt airports.

I am 68 years old and have been the oldest runner at a few runs; I was the oldest when I was 62.

This year I ran 6 halves with my fastest being 1:59 and my slowest 2:07. I have run a few 5ks along the way.

I hope to keep streaking as long as I can and would like to run a half in all the states.

JEMAL SWOBODA JOINS USRSA

Born in the Pacific Northwest, raised on a farm in Missouri and currently a Chicago-based serial entrepreneur moving to Denver soon. I've not always been a runner but I can't imagine my life without it. I ran track in college and excelled at pole vaulting and we always complained about running given our sport was focused on very short sprints. After college, I must have lost my running shoes as I gained some unhealthy weight but found them again after a rough break-up.

This started with a goal to run 500 miles in 2012 which lead to 5K and 10Ks and later half-marathons and full. After setting a marathon PR of (3:28) I decided to slow down but run farther. I now consider 50Ks and 50 mile ultramarathons my distance of choice. On July 28th, I set a goal to run a 5K per day which turned into "100 Days of 5Ks" which has turned into keeping moving every day while hitting at least 100 miles per month. Here's to everyone out there getting their miles in and wishing good health and dry shoes to all!

ANDREW BRADT'S STREAK HITS 7 YEARS

Running certainly has been an outlet for me over the past 7 years. A time to clear the mind, work through thoughts and decompress from the day-to-day stresses. However, it became so much more in early January this year when I was diagnosed with Sarcoidosis. A skin biopsy and later X-rays and a CT scan would deliver news that inflammation by the way of an auto immune disease was in my lungs and lymph nodes. Original prognosis was that I had pulmonary interstitial fibrosis already. I immediately went on 60mg of prednisone and on 1/19 I faced an unknown outcome.

That day, I decided to double down. I ran even longer, and it become more important for mental health. The steroids were unfortunately only allowing me 1-2 hours a sleep a night. I was working my way through a push-up streak which hit over 500 days and reaching my year of sit-ups everyday during these months on prednisone. The two hours I set aside for these activities was so instrumental for my mental health and working my way to fight back.

I'm happy to report I was able to come off steroids @ the end of May and a PET scan this September has revealed a better prognosis in my lungs. Not out of the woods but feeling much better and thanks to running my pulmonary function tests have increased this year. I'll eclipse around 3k miles this year which is the most in any streak year and I am in the best shape in years. So blessed that I started this run streak many Thanksgivings ago, and thankful for the community of runners to keep me motivated and uplifted by there stories. Here is to the next 2500+ days.

WOW...Really? I'm very humble to say yes.

Funny enough...yesterday I went to update my tattoo to year 2 !

Year 1 was a lace with the number 365...I wanted to update it significantly...So I did another eyelet to the original tattoo. The color of the eyelet are the color of the shoe used for the year!

On year 1 I decided to let my beard grow until the streak ended. I never thought to run a full year! I subscribe for the Thanksgiving run in 2016...the goal was to run 36 days (if I remember well)...but on Jan 1 2017 I said to myself...let's try to keep the streak for 100 days...after 100 days I said...nice, let's try 200!

Then I found SRI on Google...and I gave myself the goal of a full year!

It has now been 2 full years and I'm very proud of me. It has now become a habit, just like brushing my teeth!!!!

There is tougher day, especially the day I have to travel for work. The sick day, the "impossible day" that you finally put your 2 mile in...

But overall, I'm stoked and what the most proud of is to inspire others to move, to live a better lifestyle. Since I started my streak journey, I have now become vegan, give more to others...I truly think It helped me become a better person.

Again, very humble to keep on running and thank you for considering me for the newsletter!

I started running in 1999 when I joined a women's beginner's running program (before that - I never ran ever). We trained to run the Run for Roses in Montgomery County, MD - a 5K. Since then, I've run 85 road races including 4 marathons. I'm a back of the pack runner, but I love it.

I took a break from running during pregnancy and after my daughters were born (in '09 and '12). I started tracking my miles online in 2013 and have since run just shy of 3000 miles.

Last year, I started running every day as part of the 40 days of Awesome and since then have run in 6 states (+DC), 5 countries and in 2 airports (Paris and Atlanta) as my work in public health takes me on many travels. I have been able to streak for this last year thanks to my husband, my 2 girls, my awesome running dog and the best running partners ever in the North Durham Runners Club. I plan to keep streaking as long as I'm able.

I love my running streak because it gives me time to think. But I don't like it because it makes me get up and out of my warm house. It also is awesome to get to see and explore new places. I think more people should do a running streak because it gives you exercise and you see very interesting and hidden places. I will never stop running! I love running! Total streak miles 1,998.57

SCOTT PARTENHEIMER'S STREAK HITS 5 YEARS

Five years of running every day! My shortest run was a mile, and my longest was a 50 kilometer ultra. Every single run has been outside through some pretty brutal humidity in the summer, and wind, ice and snow in the winter. My racing and running have slowed down lately, with my last big race at the 2017 Boston Marathon, and only a few small, local races in 2018. But I have no plans on retiring the streak any time soon. I'm not a numbers guy so I have no idea how many miles I've run or what day I'm on; I just enjoy getting out there every day!

JANEL KASOWSKI JOINS USRSA

I am excited to be part of the group. My streak started out as doing the Runner's World Thanksgiving to New Year's Day streak. Then, I thought, why stop? I decided to try for 100 days and did that. At some point in there I found the Running Streak Association and made it my goal to go as long as I could. I am not sure what a running profile is, but I'll give it a shot...

My love for running began as a young girl when I would go with my dad to run a two-mile loop through the woods near our house. I ran track and cross country in high school and continued to run off and on over the next 20 years. In 2009, after my second round with thyroid cancer, I reconnected with running. I found it to be mentally and physically healing. Without really planning on it, I worked up to my first marathon in 2011. Since then, I've run a few more marathons and a dozen or so half marathons. To be honest, I don't like racing because I put too much pressure on myself. I prefer running alone and find the solitude therapeutic. I would much rather get lost in my thoughts and not think about my pace or if I am going to PR or not. I'll run in any weather, but my favorite runs are often in the rain. Last spring, I had the opportunity to coach the distance runners on our middle school track team. It was one of the most rewarding things that I have ever done. Promoting a lifelong relationship with fitness and running is tremendously important. Running is medicinal to me and has enabled me to successfully navigate a challenging health situation. My hope is to help others see that running can be much more to you than just a punishing cardio workout.

MATT CARPENTER'S STREAK HITS 15 YEARS

This morning we woke to fresh snow on the ground. It came down steady all morning but stopped by early afternoon. Unfortunately, it left our dirt roads a muddy mess. Were it not a special day, I might have opted for the treadmill. Not today though. My wife and I went for a three and a half mile run around our country block. Less than 1/4 mile of this loop is on pavement. Just past the intersection of Packard and Ranger, my Garmin beeped for two miles.

I try not to think too much about streak running milestones before they arrive, as we have no guarantees. Over the past couple of years, I have found myself repeating the saying "Lord willing and the creek don't rise..." when people ask about the streak. Today I am proud to report the creek has not risen, and the Lord has blessed me with the ability and the opportunity to keep running at least two miles each and every day for 15 years.

KRISTY BROCK'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

Four years ago, I decided to give the Runner's World holiday RunStreak a try. What started as a commitment to run at least 1 mile every day from Thanksgiving to New Year's Day became an obsession I haven't wanted to quit. Tonight, I ran 4 chilly, windy, snowy miles to close out this 4th year of running at least 1 mile every day. It's been quite the journey.

I've run in rain, wind, ice, snow, sub-zero and near 100* temps. I've run in a hospital parking garage, in my scrubs, and with no time to spare. I've run through the horrible grief of suddenly losing my father. Through illness and ankle sprain. Every mile has been run outside- regardless of conditions. I've run 25 ultra distance runs- including two 100ks, four 12-hour races, one 50 miler, three birthday run your age in mile runs (35, 36, and 37), and fifteen 50ks in the last four years, along with several marathons and half marathons. Excited to see how many more years these legs have got in them.

DAVID DUDLEY'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

Starting late in life it has been an incredible journey from the couch potato to running every day. I am not a marathoner, 100k, 10K, 5K or even a 4K runner. I struggle every day with making sure I run at least a mile. It has expanded my village to the diverse group of people that do streak running. They are a great village. I am much healthier and stronger from it. I intend to run as long as I can.

MATT RYERSON'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

The streak continues, finished my run early this morning. Looking forward to starting year 5 tomorrow! This has been a challenging year with injuries, races, illnesses, and travel, but as so often is true, when you really put your mind to anything, it is amazing how much one can achieve.

When I started this streak as a holiday special, to get me through the month between Thanksgiving and Christmas without gaining too much weight, it was hardly even about running. However, once I cleared that month and continued the streak into the second and third month, it became about the challenge of becoming "official," hitting that one-year mark. It often felt like pushing a boulder uphill. Once I passed the one-year mark, however, the question I most often got was, "Why stop now?" which felt like I got in front of the boulder as it started rolling down the other side of the hill . . . trying to avoid the pothills of life that would trip me up and allow the boulder to catch me and run over me. But now, as many of those key benchmarks have been passed, the streak is more than just running every day. The streak is a representation of life, practice for life, and some days . . . life itself.

The streak represents getting up, every day, and overcoming the urges to "do nothing, accomplish nothing." It is practice in that the best days are the hard days . . . the days you have to earn it and also, not becoming lulled into the monotony of the everyday, just living in that moment, staying grounded, finding entertainment (I did one day, one mile as a TRUE stalker . . . on private property to avoid any legal issues, haha) and joy in the everyday. It IS life on the days where you need, to relieve stress, overcome grief (all too often on this streak), or just share JOY! No matter what happens, this streak has changed me. It has changed the way I view the world. It has changed my everyday habits. It has changed me for the better. I am better, because one day, I decided to run even though I had already run the day before.

If you can fill the unforgiving minute
With sixty seconds' worth of distance run,
Yours is the Earth and everything that's in it,
And---which is more---you'll be a Man, my son!

THE FINISH LINE

By: Mark Washburne

"The best time to plant a tree was 20 years ago," notes a famous Chinese proverb. "The second best time is now." A similar analogy can be made about starting a running streak. While running in general tends to celebrate the younger, faster people, the top of our running streak association list is made up of older athletes who made the decision decades ago to run every day. As I write this column, we now list 98 active running streaks from around the world that have reached 20 years and another 91 retired streaks that went beyond the two decades mark. These runners, who planted their trees years ago, deserve our awe and praise including Judy Mick, whose 33-year-old streak we acknowledge as deserving of the TSR cover with this issue.

Lest we forget, we also want to acknowledge our new streakers who have decided to run every day in recent years. In just the last year alone, we have experienced an explosion of new streak runners joining SRI/USRSA. Last year's TSR Winter issue listed 789 active running streaks in the United States and 62 international streaks. One year later, we now list 1,263 United States streakers and another 159 international streak runners. With this TSR and in-line with our opening Chinese proverb, we also note our first streak runner from China, Jacob Gao, who started his streak on 10 October 2017. We now list streak runners from the following countries: Australia, Brazil, Canada, China, Czech Republic, Denmark, France, Germany, Greece, Hungary, India, Ireland, Kenya, Korea, Mariana Islands, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nigeria, Norway, Japan, Poland, Reunion Island, Russia, Slovakia, Slovenia, South Africa, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, Vietnam, and, of course, the United States of America.

All our growth, unfortunately, has come with a downside. Our clothing partner, who sold us those cool shirts with our streak date on the back, unexpectedly quit. I am now in the process of hiring another firm to sell SRI/USRSA clothing to our members. The process is, however, taking longer than I hoped and it does not look like we will have a clothing partner until after the first of the year. I apologize to any of our members who were hoping to purchase SRI/USRSA clothing for the holiday season.

The huge growth in our association can, no doubt, be attributed to the automation of our website that took place at the end of 2017. I had actually been looking for someone to automate our website for a few years and finally found the right person, Loren Long, in the summer of 2017 while attending a political fundraiser and contemplating my own run for political office. Loren, who had experience setting up websites for political candidates, agreed to update our website last year. As indicated by the huge spike in our membership from an easier to use website, Loren did an excellent job and she has continued to do side jobs for our association including the recent automation of the yearly streak anniversary emails I would send out to athletes on our active list. The point of the streak anniversary emails is to acknowledge and celebrate another year of running every day by you and seek your stories and running pictures for this newsletter. With over 1,400 active streak runners and growing, you can imagine the task of putting together a streak anniversary calendar and sending hundreds of emails every year became quite a chore for me. I am, therefore, grateful that the task is now automated. Despite our new technology, we still love receiving your updates and running pictures for our newsletter so please continue to share your stories with us when you receive your streak anniversary email.

The need to automate our website became even more critical for me in recent months as I did run for political office. As many of you know, I ran to represent New Jersey's 11th Congressional District in the United States House of Representatives but lost in the June Primary to a Navy pilot who eventually won the seat in the November 6th General Election. Given my showing in the Congressional race, it looked like my short-lived attempt at political office was over but a surprise development kept it going awhile longer. About three weeks before the New Jersey June Primary, I was contacted by the head of my political party in my town of Mendham Borough and advised that no one from our party had filed for Mayor. My town's party leader then asked if I would accept a write-in vote for that position should I not be successful in the Congressional race. I agreed and received 74 write-in votes in the June Primary. I was thus placed on the ballot for Mayor of Mendham Borough, New Jersey but lost in the November General Election.

Given I was the first candidate from my political party to even run for Mayor in my town in the 21st century, my loss was not a surprise to anyone. In truth, most people see political contests as a zero-sum game with only one winner and the rest of the candidates as losers. With my experience in completing races in the running world, however, I know that you can be a winner even if you do not come in first place by sometimes just going the distance and there is, of course, always something to learn even from a bad race. In the Mendham Mayor's race, I did receive over 1,000 votes or a little over 40% of the vote. More importantly for me as a teacher, I have some great stories to share with my College history and political science students about what it is like to run for political office. For me, therefore, the experience was a good one and I am glad I ran for two different political offices in 2018.

Not surprising, my "running" running took a backseat in 2018 to my "political" running. I was able to keep my over 10,550-day streak of running a minimum 3-miles a day alive but keeping my Boston Marathon streak alive was not looking hopeful. I have run the last 14 Boston Marathons and was able to qualify for 2019 based on a 2017 Chicago Marathon time where I beat my age/gender qualifying time by 4 minutes 29 seconds. If you have run more than 10 Boston Marathons in a row, you get to apply a couple of weeks before the other runners and automatically get into the race if you have met your qualifying time. This proved lucky for me because so many people tried to apply for the 2019 Boston Marathon that you were required to better your qualifying time by 4 minutes and 52 seconds in order to be accepted.

Given my 2017 Chicago Marathon qualifying time would have fallen short by 23 seconds had I not been already accepted having run 10 or more Bostons and also given the fact that the Boston Athletic Association lowered the qualifying standards for all age/gender groups by 5 minutes for the 2020 race, I thought my Boston Marathon streak would end at 15 in 2019. As I almost never qualify for Boston at the Boston Marathon, my best hope for qualifying for 2020 was at my one and only fall marathon. This year I signed up for the Philadelphia Marathon as it fell after my November election for Mayor. Given the mayoral race, I was not able to do the long runs I usually do in training for a marathon and was content with the likelihood that my Boston streak would end at 15-in-a-row. A miracle, however, happened on November 18th in Philadelphia where I experienced the perfect cool (almost cold) day and I qualified for the 2020 Boston Marathon by the slim margin of 112 seconds. My Boston Marathon streak lives another year and, hopefully, your streaks will also continue too. Good luck to you as we each run the roads and trails – every day!

STREAK CERTIFICATION

Once a running streak reaches a year in duration it is eligible for listing by SRI/USRSA. Listing of one's active or retired running streak requires a fully completed and signed streak certification form, which may also be downloaded from the SRI/USRSA site or mailed upon request. Although membership is not a requirement for listing, the SRI/USRSA appreciates all contributions to its cause.
