STONE KILLENGREEN'S STREAK HITS 7 YEARS; HAS TOP FEMALE STREAK IN NORWAY
"About Streak Running in Norway"
By: Tone Killengreen
Oslo, August 7th 2023

On June 20th 2023 my run streak reached the age of seven years.

As for many, my run streak is a daily habit, a stress reliever and something I look forward to everyday. I usually run in the morning before work, or on my way to work. That way I get some me-time in the beginning of the day.

Anna Ryymin and Tone Killengreen

Anna Ryymin (left) and I (right) getting our streaks done while run commuting to work. Anna is also a fellow runstreaker with 558 days of consecutive running. She also tends to have several ultra-adventures in the course of a year, like Bislett 24 hours indoor challenge and outdoors trail ultras.

Runstreak Norway

In August of 2019, I started a group on Facebook for run streakers in Norway. My own run streak was three years old and others had been asking me what I was doing and how it works.

As I write this, the group now counts 574 members. According to our list here in SRI, we have 57 runstreakers who have completed one year or more.

Marit Imset

Marit Imset is the newest addition to our list here on SRI. She just completed 365 days of consecutive running. Marit tends to race ultras, but in the everyday running she has a trail loop right out of her back yard where she does most of her running.

Marit has also completed the Bislett 24 hours indoor challenge along with several others in this group.

The weather

Living in the northern hemisphere, the weather is always an issue when running every day.

Additionally, while Norway is the land of the midnight sun where the day never ends during summer, the winter is equally dark and potentially cold. Also, since our country is very long, we tend to have different seasons depending on where you live.

What to wear, how many layers, or how few layers, of running clothing is a constant discussion, especially during autumn, winter and early spring, even sometimes during the summer. Light wool is almost always a safe bet.

Tone Killengreen

It doesn't rain if you wear a cap – runhack.

Runstreakers

As a group, Runstreak Norway contains many different kinds of runners. How far they run on an average beyond the acquired mile differs. Many of our members are ultrarunners. One does not have to run long distances to have a run streak, but as days turn into years, the curiosity for the longer runs seems to awaken.

Stian Løkken ran his run streak day 947 this weekend while participating and completing Norseman Extreme Challenge, claiming to be the world's toughest Ironman course. 3800 meters of swimming, 180 kilometers on the bike through the national park of Hardanger and ending it off with a marathon that have a continuous climb for the final 20 kilometers.

Stian has a long track record of races and many of the races are ultras, but also shorter ones.

Run streaking from the north to the south of Norway

Elin Møllegaard is one of our members, with a run streak of 948 days. She ran her run streak while crewing for her husband who cycled Norway from north to south in the summer of 2022.

She got to run her streak in a new place every single day during this 10-day event. Norway is a long-stretched country of 1702 kilometers (some 1000 miles).

In June this year Elin ran Tour de Dovre which is a cycle course of 130 kilometers around one of Norway's National Parks.

PhD-Dissertation

Laila Hov reached run streak day 600 just the other day. During the work with her PhD dissertation, she needed a relief and some headspace after long days of writing, so she started her run streak.

By now she has also completed a local trail ultra of 50 kilometers. Her daily running varies a lot due to workload, if she has a race coming up, or if she just needs to get out and run.

Laila Hov

Run streak in the everyday life

The puzzle of getting the run streak to fit into our daily life is a tale of its own. None of us would be able to do this without the love and support of our family.

Having one in the family who has to get a run in every day can be challenging. Being reminded or asked if you have run or if in fact the family need you to go for a run if you have been putting it off all day.

Ole Holgersen

Ole Holgersen is on his way with his second run streak. The first got put off too long and all of a sudden it was past midnight. His run streak was over 1000 days long. Ole needed a while until he was ready and had the motivation to go again.

He is the main reason we have our own Active Streaks list on the SRI website. Very grateful for his commitment and work to enabling this list.

Ole is also a member of a very active running club and he claims that the run streak has made him a better runner. He has completed a 24 hours indoor challenge and enjoys running on his local trails, like summiting Gullfjellet, the tallest mountain in Bergen.

Lizzy Namuleme

Lizzy Namuleme runs many of her run streaks while being out with her family. There are many ways to make sure the runs streak happens every day and running while spending time with kids and partner must be one of the best forms of activity and family time in combination.

Siw Monica Boye

Siw Monica Boye has a run streak of 1137 days. She is also my sister. On her first run streak, she had almost reached one year of running every day when she slipped on an icy patch and broke her ankle in three places, back in 2018.

She had a long way back into running and in 2022 she ran Copenhagen Marathon. Her running most days is a mile or three. Siw prefer running on trails in the woods, but sometimes we get to run together in the early morning meeting up before work, finishing the run with a coffee.

17th of May Norway's National Day

Even though we run every day, running on the National Day is special for us. Many of us dress up with the colours of our flag or even run in a National Costume. Some have a tradition of running up a local summit.

Tone Killengreen (right front) with her husband Eivind Killengreen who is also a runstreaker of 1158 days. Here they are dressed for a celebratory run on Norway's National Day.

Eivind used to run orienteering in his teens and has embraced the trail running since returning to running as an adult and for his daily runs. He has run several trail ultras but what he enjoys the most is adventure running in new places and trails, like spending a week in Chamonix and exploring the town and the trails up in the mountains.

Runstreak Podden – The run streak podcast

In November of 2021 Jon Asphjell and I set out to make The Run Streak Podcast. Neither of us had any idea of what we were doing or even how to make one, but ignorance is bliss.

As of now we have published 56 episodes. Most of our episodes are in Norwegian, but two are in English. Episode 49 which is with Mark Washburne and episode 52 with Eliza Miron.

Jon Asphjell and Tone Killengreen “running a run streak in Hell.”

Jon Asphjell

Jon Asphjell has a run streak of 1397 days. He started his run streak while on vacation with his husband in London. And last year he was back in London doing a celebratory run around the time when he reached his first comma, 1000 days.

Jon's speciality is back yard running. In October he is going to Tennessee to run in Big's Backyard World Championship. He also has his own backyard race here in Norway.

24 hours in Hell

In June 2023, Runstreakpodden were speakers at an outdoor 24 hours event. It takes place in Hell, located in the middle of Norway, close to the city of Trondheim, thus the fitting name “24 hours in Hell.”

We had four runstreakers participating and completing this race. Elin Møllegaard, which you met above was one of them, but here are three others as well.

Kirste Sandness

Kirste Sandness has a run streak of 610 days, for the time being her daily run is 9,4 kilometers, to get enough distance during the week. She has participated in Zermatt Marathon, Zürich Marathon and Eiger 51 K.

She has also run several other long races, like The Arctic triple a randonne race in Lofoten, Oslo Marathon, Ecotrail 50 miles - a trail run around the city of Oslo and Bislett 24 hours indoor challenge.

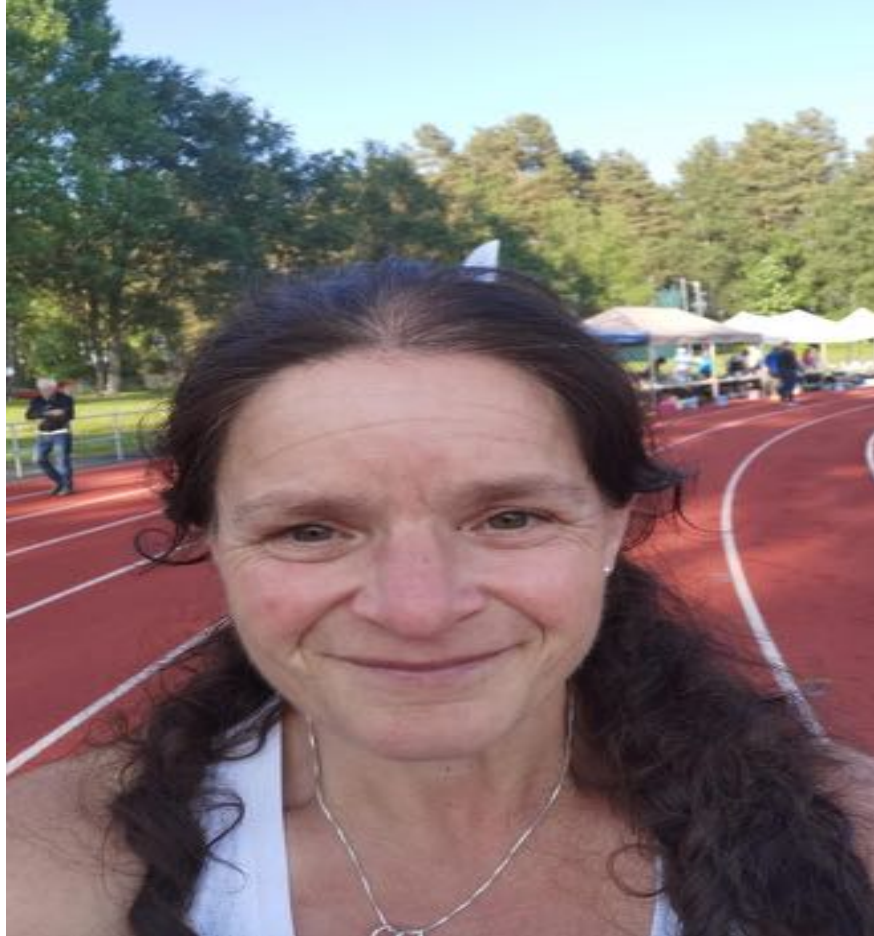

Kirste lives in the North of Norway and, as you can see from the picture, her daily runstreaks are done in the most spectacular of surroundings.

Jon Asphjell and Kathrin Øien

Kathrin Øien has a run streak of 950 days. Here seen high fiving Jon at course in Hell.

She started her run streak in Lisbon and celebrated completing a year in the same place. During her first year, she had trainings runs of 50 kilometers or more, ran a 6-hour run, half marathons and long mountain hikes.

Vibeke Bergsletten

Vibeke Bergsletten has a run streak of 227 days. She enjoys running her streaks along with her dog. She also enjoys running long distances as well as short runs.

Vibeke celebrated her 50th streak day by completing a 50 kilometers indoor challenge. On the opposite end of the scale, she has also done a late-night mile in her back yard, as a breather while sitting for a home exam.

These are just examples of all the beautiful people that constitute the Runstreak Norway community. I would have loved to name each and every one, but that would have meant a small book celebrating everyone's achievements. Instead, I will end by saying that the community is there to cheer and inspire one another. Successes are celebrated, griefs are shared and supported. This community that started out with a few individuals now has a life of its own, with ever increasing number of people finding a purpose and meaning by running each day. May it long continue.

John Roemer IV with his cross-county team from Hereford High School

JOHN ROEMER IV'S STREAK NEARS 45 YEARS
“Perpetual, Periodic, Final and Enlightening Family Streaks”
By: John Roemer IV

Perpetual

At the risk of minimizing challenges encountered during a long streak, nothing has come close to ending mine. Not a scorchingly-hot solo cross-country bicycle trip, whooping cough, twice being wiped out by drivers while bicycling, kidney stones, sciatica resulting from a car-on-car collision, a hernia, and now significant coronary artery disease from a lifetime of uncontrolled, genetically-high cholesterol.

The most consistent challenge has been resisting doctors' well-meaning insistence, during my infrequent visits over the last four decades, to stop running immediately. “Foolish,” “Nuts,” “Disconcerting” are terms physicians have used to describe this habit. I no longer argue, I just lace up my running shoes for another outing on the trails.

Fortunately, the people I interact with most of the time don't try to persuade me to stop running. The members of the high school cross country and track teams I coach seem to enjoy the quirkiness of posing for the ritual team photo on my streak anniversary. Their youth allows them to comfortably accept the implausible. Some of the race shirts I wear to practice are three times as old as they are, and at 44 years, my streak started when some of their parents were in diapers.

Periodic

Healthy habits like running every day also are embraced by my family, and fortunately my wife Barbie was susceptible to streaking's dubious charms and began her own. She started running a year or two before I did, for adolescent freedom and perhaps to distinguish herself from her seven siblings. She did road races after high school but abandoned them because running was more enjoyable without pre-race jitters.

Later, running took a back seat while raising three kids, dealing with breast cancer, and going through a divorce. When we met she thought my streak was a novelty, but decided to begin one when she realized that it's a healthy addiction. Dieting became unnecessary, it appeared to slow aging, and it aided mobility in her arthritis-wracked joints. She started running every day on 12 October 2007.

Things went pretty smoothly until she had the distal joints of several fingers fused in 2016. Her physician and sisters declared that the streak must end.

My parents, on the USRSA streak lists and nearing 80 at the time, laughed uncontrollably then asked: She's not running on her hands yet, is she?

Sibling peer pressure looked like it was going to prevail over Roemer mirth, however, and she went a few verbal skirmishes with me until shifting from proclaiming that she couldn't do it to she didn't want to do it. With that distinction I immediately said OK and stopped badgering her. After I said that, within 15 minutes she was on the trail getting her one mile minimum.

A year later I was driving to the high school track nationals in Greensboro, North Carolina to support a 5K runner and a shot putter I coached. Barbie was in Michigan visiting her siblings and called me after stopping for a drink, 8 miles into a hot run. Chatty and feeling accomplished, she said she was going to walk the last mile to loosen up. I commented that she sounded parched, and wondered jokingly if she could navigate her hometown streets.

Ten minutes later she called and asked where she was. I laughed but soon realized she had no idea that she was not in Maryland. She said her head was bleeding and asked what to do.

She wound up in the hospital and spent nearly 36 hours getting a battery of tests under the doctors' liability-driven suspicion that she had a seizure, a cerebral aneurysm, or some other grave malady.

Finally, the obvious became apparent to the physicians — she was dehydrated and simply tripped and hit her head on the pavement, resulting in a serious concussion. Her streak stopped at 9 years, 8 months, and 5 days. She still cannot recall the 10 minutes that triggered its end.

The last six years of streaks have been fractured by her hastiness. 14 months into her second streak she rushed across the wet lobby floor in her school and ruptured her hamstring during a nasty fall.

After having more arthritic joints surgically fused a few months later (this time toes), she managed a nearly 3-year streak before slipping at school while hurrying through her office, dislocating her shoulder. She now is more than a year into her 4th streak, demonstrating stubbornness that streakers everywhere can appreciate.

Final

My father had streaks of 12, 23, and 5 years, with mostly 8 miles per day and a 20-miler on weekends. They ended despite his toughness.

Examples of his dedication include racing 20 miles with me, despite recently breaking a toe, so that he could complete a year-long championship series to win our individual age classifications and the non-existent father-son category. He also ran with an inserted catheter for nearly a week after bladder surgery.

The end of each streak was precipitated by more calamitous health problems. Prostate surgery ended the first, and cataract surgery the second. During the layoffs between his streaks I took a second daily run, suggesting that he could find satisfaction in that at least half of his DNA was getting a daily workout.

My mom and I ended his third on his 81st birthday because despite his capacity to run miles on the decades-trod trails every morning, he couldn't remember how to get back home. He died 18 months later.

Historical

My mother had a nearly 6-year streak that ended in 1987. Now a vigorous 84 years old, she has the fluid gait of a cat, and agility and balance that allows her to do things such as effortlessly climb a ladder — to do maintenance on her sloped roof.

After my seemingly endless string of creaky morning runs, witnessing my wife's travails, and watching my dad labor through awful pain to maintain his streaks, I'd like to think that I'd be more rational if, when I began in 1978, I could see what was coming.

It's glaring that the eldest in this family briefly dabbled with streaking and gets around like a 20-year-old. But so far my wife and I shrug off consistency's hobgoblins and pursue the benefits.

Steve DeBoer's 71st marathon finish Med City Marathon May 13, 2023. Steve is the only person who has run daily over 50 years and completed a marathon (4th since getting to 50).

Traversing the Tundra Daily - The first 100 in the World By: Steve DeBoer

Over the years, there has been much speculation of who might have run daily in the distant past. When it comes to documentation, the first two people to run at least 1 mile every day for one year are Ted Corbitt of NY (1919-2008) and Ron Hill of England (1938-2021), both being Olympic marathoners (Ted in 1952 and Ron in 1964 & 1972, also running the 10,000 meters in the 1968 Olympics). See my Traversing the Tundra article the April 2021 Streak Registry for more about other early possible run streakers.

After reviewing Ted Corbitt's logs provided by his son, Gary, Ted met the one-mile minimum required by the US Running Streak Association from Dec 1, 1953 through May 31, 1959. Ron Hill's legendary streak continued over 52 years from Dec 21, 1964 through Jan 28, 2021, still the longest on the retired list, though in reviewing his records he found one day in 1967 that he likely ran less than one mile.

Nick Marshall wrote an article about streak running for Runner's World in 1977. I contacted him, and he told me about Buzz Sawyer, who always promoted daily running. Nick did not know how many running streaks he had, but at least one prior to breaking his leg while training for the 1960 Olympics, and at least one after his recovery. This would make him second in the world to run every day, though there is no documentation to prove it.

From conversations with Amby Burfoot of CT, winner of the 1968 Boston marathon, it seemed likely he had run daily in the late 1960s, but on a careful review of his logs, he found that from Jun 1966 through Oct 1967, he missed three days, 283 days being his longest streak. That brings us to 1967, when Bob Ray of MD started daily runs on Apr 4, 1967. When George Hancock compiled the first list of streak runners in Dec 1994, Bob was the first entry. He had begun running with some coworkers during their lunch break. One woman mentioned having run every day for two weeks, so Bob decided to try and match her. It is not known how long she did it, but Bob made it 38 years to Apr 7, 2005, choosing to stop then, having run 100,000 miles during his streak.

When I began to run, March 29, 1968, I knew nothing of streak runners. I just wanted to be in good shape for basketball practice the next fall. Even though I got cut from the basketball team, I decided to keep running (I did make the team the next year). Starting April 9, 1969, I ran every day. I wasn't aware of any standards anyone had set, so I might just run to school or church, less than ½ mile from home. But I managed to go 317 days before spraining my ankle in basketball practice the following February, taking a few days off. I had another streak that ended in June, when I got strep.

My current daily streak began July 20, 1970, when my brother, Dave, and I ran two miles after getting back from a family vacation to the West Coast, during which I recovered from the strep infection. The USRSA minimum of 1 mile per day, which was instituted in 2002 after a survey of organization members, has been met ever since June 7, 1971.

In Nick Marshall's 1977 RW article, he mentioned Bruce McLanahan, who ran for over 500 days in a row while in high school. Since Bruce graduated in 1969, it most likely began in 1967. Both he and older brother, Gregg, ran at one time with Buzz Sawyer's athletic club. Gregg recalled Buzz being a fan of running streaks but did not know specifics of when or for how long Buzz's streaks lasted. Gregg later ran daily for over 6 years, though he missed one day in the middle after having surgery.

Mark Covert was the 6th person to do daily runs, beginning July 23, 1968. He was the first to run every day for 40 and 45 years, stopping on his 45th anniversary in 2013. In 1969, besides me, Jon Sutherland (May), John Cramer (September), and Bob Hensley (November) started streaks. Jon ran with Mark in Junior College and found out Mark had been running daily for a full year two months after Jon started. In 2021 I learned that fellow Minnesotan John Cramer became a daily runner while going to college in IL. Thus, we can say 9 persons had run daily for a year before the end of 1970, 10 if my 317-day string is included, since there was no minimum distance then.

- * streak never registered with Streak Runners International (SRI)
-  on Spring 2001 USRSA's first active list

Note that only 12 of the first 102 were known by George Hancock when he published his list of 51 individuals who were running daily in Dec 1994. Only ten of them registered once the USRSA set the one-mile minimum distance in 2002. When the USRSA published its first (2001) list of 113 run streakers (3 being women), it included 35 of these folks. The four from outside the US (Ron Hill, Dominik Machek, Simon Laporte, Frank Clarke, and Rick Rayman) were not eligible until the organization went international in 2012.

The top states where streakers resided in the first 100 were (some runners lived in more than one state) CA (12); MN & PA (10); MD (9); and NY & WA (7), with 30 states represented in total. It wasn't until Sep 2012 that RI became the last state to have a daily runner pass the one-year mark. There is still one state that has never had a female streak - ND. Coincidentally, ND also has the lowest number of identified streak runners (7). It is also interesting that the three states with the most in 1980 (CA, MN, and PA) are now #1, #3, and #5, while TX (#2 now, had six of the hundred) and NY (#4, had seven) were near the top back then.

Nineteen of this group have passed away ranging in ages from 62 (Allen Kayner) to 91 (Walt Byerly). There are 21 listed who have continued running daily since their first streak began, two of whom have never registered because of insufficient documentation (Mark Kushner #31 and Andy Ferrara #64). Twelve more had to end their first streak but have returned to streaking. Herb Fred had ten separate streaks lasting one year or longer. Bruce Mortenson, Don Slusser, Jay Kammerzell, and Craig Snapp each have had five. Not surprisingly the 21 still on their first streak include the top ten on the current Active International list. #43 Kurt Kroemer, who is not registered, was the youngest of the 100 to commence daily running at age 14, though some of his runs were under one mile. #74 Wendell DeBoer, now deceased, was the oldest of the 100, starting at age 53.

PS I celebrated three significant streak-related events in the last few months. I became the 4th person in the world to run at least one mile per day for 52 years on June 6th, the anniversary of D-Day. On July 15th I tied Ron Hill at 19,032 consecutive days run, becoming the 3rd person in the world to pass him on the 16th. This achievement was noted by the race director at the awards ceremony of the 5K race I ran on the 15th. Then, on July 20th, I celebrated my 53rd anniversary of daily runs (not recognized by SRI, since I traversed less than one mile of tundra some of those days in the first 10 months). July 20, 1970, also happened to be the first anniversary of Neil Armstrong's walk on the lunar surface. My long-term goal is to run the distance to the moon, now needing less than 36,000 miles to get there (just over 181,000 as of 8/1/23).

ATTENTION STREAK RUNNERS WHO LIKE TO RACE

SRI/USRSA and Steve DeBoer are compiling a list of streak runners who have run more than 500 races over the years. If that is you, we want to hear from you to recognize the outstanding racers among our running streak community.

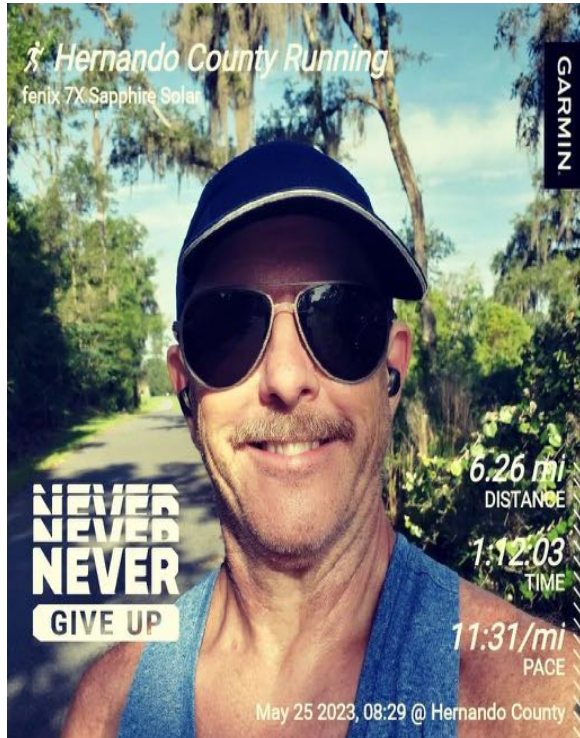

Races, for the purpose of our list, are events that are solely running or where running is part of the competition (triathlons count), and is timed for a specific distance or for the distance you can run for a specific time (for example, a 24-hour race that measures how many miles or kilometers you can run during that time period).

NO GUESSING! Only athletes who have accurately recorded their lifetime running races in their log books, or who have saved their race bib numbers, or who can verify races run through an online website like Athlinks should submit their lifetime race totals to us.

Please send total lifetime races run, the year of your first race, and the year of your most recent race if you are no longer competing to Steve DeBoer at stephen.william.deboer@gmail.com.

KEVIN MACFARLAND'S STREAK HITS 8 YEARS

Eight years completed on May 25! Wow the time sure has flown by.

Many people question my sanity for this running every day nonsense. However, the voices in my head say we're okay by a substantial 54-46 margin. But seriously this has become a great part of my life and I hope to keep doing it for years to come.

One thing I have learned is the importance of stretching every day. After a mile warmup walk I will stretch for 10-15 minutes and then do my run. Afterwards I stretch again for 10-15 minutes and cool down with a bike and row. Also, I incorporate weight training into my daily routine.

So happy to be able to keep on streaking! I wish you all the best in your endeavors!

BRIAN FLASPOHLER'S STREAK HITS 10 YEARS; BRIAN FLASPOHLER'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 3,652 DAYS

After my 5/24/2023 run, I will complete ten years of running every day, 3652 days. Didn't miss a day for the entire ten years. I have some mini streaks in there too - 6 years of at least three miles a day, one year of four miles every day, two years of outside every day, and an average over the entire streak of just over five miles a day.

5/25/2023, I am not going to run. In fact, I won't do anything at all that looks like exercise. I will walk Brody but that's for him, not me. Time for me to put the running streak to bed. It was a good one but I just don't want to prioritize running every day anymore. I'll still run, but put in more time biking and other fitness stuff. And if the day sucks for some reason, I just won't be bothered to get out and run.

On the last day, I attempted a ten-hour challenge. I went nice and slow and my cardio engine was fine but my suffering muscles were undertrained. So, when the heat started to up the suffering, I just stopped. Six hours and 30.8 miles and the streak is done.

Long live the streak!

HEATHER BAGAN'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

In 2007, I completed my first running streak. I intentionally ended it at the one-year anniversary because an indefinite commitment to the streak felt like too much pressure. I didn't anticipate how difficult it would be to stop - I felt confused like something was missing - but I stopped anyway. Years passed. I tried a few times to start a streak again, but I could never get the momentum back.

Fast forward to 2021 and I moved across the country to Southwest Florida during the pandemic. I had found renewed energy in the outdoors, when my brother-in-law brought up the idea of running every day. I felt ready, so I started again on March 1, 2021. This time, when the one-year anniversary hit, I kept going. The commitment felt like it was to me and not to the streak. It was an opportunity to clear my head, to get my body moving, to feel the sun on my face... every day.

At the end of September 2022, Hurricane Ian hit. I watched the news from the safety of a hotel in Miami, knowing my life had just turned upside down and I wouldn't be able to return home any time soon. I ran around the hotel parking lot that day and then the few days that followed.

Two weeks later, I was living out of bags in a random guest house. I was mentally exhausted, and decided to stop running. The streak had become a burden instead of a pleasure, so I poured myself a drink to toast the end of another era. At about 10pm, I came to my senses - even if it felt like a burden, running every day was the only constant in my life, the only normalcy I could control. I quickly put on my running shoes and ran quick, short laps up and down the street with a thunderstorm rapidly approaching. It was certainly one of the fastest miles I've run to date.

I had the pleasure these past two years of running in multiple cities, states, countries and continents. I ran with old friends, new friends, and family. I ran when I had the flu, when I dislocated a rib, and finished a run after falling and getting pretty scraped up on a gravel road.

After months of being displaced, I was able to celebrate my two-year anniversary back home where it all started. Needless to say, I have no intention of stopping any time soon.

JOHAN WIKSTROM'S STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

Three years! Running has kept me going through a divorce, through studies and stressful times with a full schedule of singing concerts and being a part time parent.

To decide the time for running has always been the first thought when I wake up or the first priority when I plan the coming day. It has now become a habit to run and the longer I continue doing this, the less the counting of the days mean to me.

Every day that I can run is a blessing that I cherish.

SARAH MILLER'S STREAK HITS 10 YEARS

So excited to have made it to 10 years of running at least a mile every day!!

I've had just a few close calls of forgetting that were saved by my husband reminding me in late evenings, thank goodness.

Only two days of my ten years have been on a treadmill where the neighborhood just didn't permit outdoor running while traveling - even with the ridiculous cold Iowa winters.

My secondary streak of running without slipping and falling on the <bleeping> ice sadly ended at 5 years this winter, but will keep tracking to see if I can make it more than 5 years this next time around.

I'm halfway through my goal of running a marathon in all 50 states. I hope to keep the streak alive at least until I finish all 50 and maybe even longer.

I also enjoy running Relay Iowa every year (the world's longest relay run!) and traveling to all the states with an amazing group of running friends.

Truly don't know what I would do if there were a day where I couldn't run - keeps me sane while raising two amazing teenagers with my fabulous husband! I run because I can!!!

DAVID HACEK'S STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

With my daily run on 5-30-2023 I completed year 3 of my second run streak.

The last year has been by far my best mileage running year ever I as close in on my 60th birthday this year on November 24, 2023. I logged a total of 2,972.17 for year 3 and my total streak miles stand at 7,274.86.

In the last year I have had only 2 weeks under 50 miles in a week and have had 19 weeks of logging over 60 miles in a week. I have pushed my 200+ miles a month streak to 20 months and counting.

I'm currently on day 44 of streak within a streak of running at least 8.5 miles a day. Other active streak within a streak are 8 miles a day at 81 days, 7 miles a day at 120 days and 5 miles a day at 160.

I set my monthly and weekly records in August of 2022 when I was training for the Chicago Marathon which I ran on October 9, 2022, and completed my 11th overall marathon. My monthly total was 279.36 miles and my weekly record stands at 68.43 miles.

As I move into working towards year 4 of my current streak, I'm planning on continuing my 200+ mile a month streak and my other streaks within a streak. It's nice to challenge yourself during a streak and the past 6 months I have reducing running pace almost 15 seconds a mile. My next challenge is to figure which marathon I want to run for my 12th marathon. Thanks, for allowing me to share some of my running stories.

NICOLE KIESEWETTER JOINS SRI FROM GERMANY

It began in spring 2018 – I started running with the goal to lose a few kg weight... It was some kind of duty. In order to satisfy my sugar addiction... In February 2019 (I remember it was a sunny winter day) I recognized that running was no longer a duty but pure joy. Fun. Head free. Music. Nature. FREEDOM. – And later on, an addiction for sure.

And this it still is for me – after many big and small injuries and pain I never stopped running. I slowly understood that I will never run fast paces over long distances like a marathon (I tried a HM and after that I was just... comatose). I tried and tried but never reached really good paces. In comparison to most of the other runners I really am slow (under 7 min./km is good for me!).

But I found my motivation. I can endure much pain (not always healthy, I know) and after walking the West Highland Way with a plantar fasciitis over 120km/week last May (2022) I decided to start a streak. And I did. I ran through all kinds of weather and pains and against some people's opinions that I really am unreasonable.

Now I managed one year. My minimum were/are 3km per day (6km at an average). This was my biggest motivation. To be able to join your wonderful community and sign up in the official streak lists. I AM SO PROUD. Thank you all – I will go on. This is my way to stay fit and young – no matter what they say.

After my run on May 25, 2020, I saw where a gentleman I follow on Strava titled his run "Runners World Streak Day 1." I was vaguely familiar with running streaks - I'd seen others title runs as "streak keepers." This time, I Googled Runners World Streak to see what it was all about. While looking around the web, I found the SRI/USRSA website. As I pored over everything on the site, I kept thinking it sounded like something I'd like to give a try. I'm still at it after three years, with 4,934 miles as of June 1.

TERESA MORRIS' STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

This streak anniversary is very important to me. My previous streak ended suddenly in February 2020, just after my five-year streak anniversary, when I woke up early one morning in terrible pain from the waist down and unable to walk. I was diagnosed with septic arthritis of the pubic symphysis, a rare form of a rare infection.

I was hospitalized, then when released from the hospital I was on IV antibiotic for several weeks, then an oral antibiotic for two years (until summer 2022) as the infection stubbornly remained in a small area in my pelvis. I had to go to physical therapy to literally learn to walk again, then to run again. I had a waddle gait for a while, typical of survivors of septic arthritis, but little by little I was able to walk a mile, then a little more than a mile, then a little more. I had to learn to run again, which I did using the Galloway method.

On June 7, 2020, I tried running a mile without walking for the first time. I was able to run it, albeit slowly. June 8, I ran another mile without walking, in the midst of my twice daily walk, and I managed under a 13-minute pace which was quite a triumph for me. I started my running streak 2.0 that day.

Quite a few weeks passed before I could run two miles in a row without walking some, but eventually I was able to and even placed 3rd in my AG in a half marathon in September 2021: my first race after having been struck with this illness.

I feared I would never run or walk normally again. The infection I had has a mortality rate of up to 40%, and most people who survive it never fully recover from the symptoms. My doctors (I had two, an infectious disease doctor and a sport doctor: the sport doctor was charged with helping me to walk / run again) and my physical therapist told me that my five-year running streak contributed to my full recovery.

My body was used to stress, had muscle memory, and was strong from my running and these factors contributed to my full recovery. I still have arthritis, caused by the infection, in my pelvic girdle, however, and sometimes it flares up to cause discomfort when I run, but it's manageable pain now and since runners have high pain tolerance the arthritis doesn't inhibit my training.

When people now question my commitment to running every day, I tell them that my running streak probably saved my life - it certainly helped to prevent a much worse outcome to my health crisis. I run this streak now as a preventative measure against any future health crises.

Happy Global Running Day [7 June 2023] to all! Hope you celebrate in an appropriate way :). For those who do not know, it began as National Running Day in the US in 2009, the first Wednesday in June, and became global in 2016. So, this year it coincides with my streak anniversary.

Yes, I did run 10 miles this morning, so my daily 1+ mile runs have now made it to 52 (years that is, not days). Of course, Jon Sutherland and Jim Pearson continue to stay ahead of me by 2 years and 15 months respectively. Hope you two had memorable tundra traverses today as well.

And a special birthday greeting to Roger Nelson of Colleyville, TX, who celebrates today. He used to live in Minneapolis and would get calls on this day, asking if he was, "Prince," to which he replied, "No, I am King." Sadly, Prince Rogers Nelson, who was also born on June 7th, is no longer with us, but his music lives on.

It has very much become a normal feature of my life now. I look back and think on every day, wherever I was I always managed my run. It's a strange feeling but one that brings a lot of satisfaction. On to the next year in the hope of keeping my average up!

RODGER KRAM’S STREAK ENDS AFTER 5,145 DAYS
“An Obvious Decision: Rodger Kram’s 14+ year Streak Ends.”

My streak started on April 23, 2009 and ended on May 24, 2023, just over 14 years.

I went to the optometrist for a routine exam but she noticed a small tear in the retina of my right eye, just outside my visual field. She told me to see an ophthalmologist/surgeon within 24 hours.

Indeed, the surgeon scheduled surgery immediately. That involved removing the vitreous gel of my eyeball with a very small needle and then laser surgery under a microscope. Afterwards, they filled the eyeball with silicone oil to avoid pressure fluctuations (I live at 9000 ft elevation).

The doc told me before the surgery that I would have to avoid bouncing (i.e. running), lifting, straining, sneezing, or coughing movements for at least 6 weeks. Otherwise, I could ruin the laser surgery (“tack welding” he called it) and potentially totally detach my retina, leaving me with severely impaired vision. Thus, I stopped my running streak.

As my former coach, John Wilkie, wrote to me: “No sane person would have chosen otherwise.” Alas, breaking my streak pales in comparison to the recent health challenges of some close friends.

I will begin a new streak when I get medical clearance. A streak requires both perseverance and luck. While I had the bad luck of a torn retina, I had the good luck of catching it early. Further, I have the good fortune of high-quality health care. As Joni Mitchell sings: No regrets coyote.

Bryan McCullar

BRYAN MCCULLAR'S STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

I've made it 3 years running each day. The mindset has been neat in the sense that you never wake up and start your day wondering if you're going run. It's simply of matter of how far.

There's a lot to be said about consistency and a streak is certainly a great way to ensure that.

I began my run streak June 6th, 2020 shortly after meeting a small group of trail runners at a low-key 35k trail run in Norfolk, Arkansas along the Ozark Highland Trail. I immediately gravitated towards that environment. The transition from road to trail took my mind off pace and distance and it brought me a new joy of exploring the outdoors. I was constantly looking for new trails and found my weekly mileage volume was climbing steadily.

During my 3-year streak of running exclusively outside, I've logged 7,548 miles (or 6.9 miles per day) for 1095 straight days. I was able to complete 28 ultra-marathons including 50ks, 50-milers, 100ks, and 100-milers.

I've met some of the most amazing people out there who are all running to something, for something, and sometimes away from something. Whatever the reason, run happy.

I love the greater running community and welcome any of you to join a trail race in Arkansas. You won't be disappointed in the scenery, support, or vibe.

When I'm not running, I've been employed at a food company for the past 21+ years and enjoy coaching my 8-yr old son, Maverick, in baseball and camping (ok glamping) as much as possible.

JOEL PEARSON RUNS IN ALL 50 STATES

Joel's run in Skagway [Alaska] today [16 June 2023] met his goal of having run in all 50 states. I've only been in 45 states.

I know I haven't run in all of them. We traveled a lot when Joel was younger.

Hopper was one of the best wrestlers in Washington, so we drove to both the USA Wrestling Regionals and the AAU Nationals for many summers. Later, Joel steeplechased and racewalked in the national track championships for several years. These trips (most of which he hated, by the way) gave him a good start on the 50.

I suppose this is one of Steve's strange categories.

MICHAEL PEREZ'S STREAK HITS 10 YEARS

I just hit my 10 year "streak-aversary." Over the past 10 years of run-streaking, I've run 3 marathons and numerous half marathons.

I've run in over 20 countries during personal and business international travel. To get my minimum one mile during international travel,

I've had to run in airport terminals, subway stations, and anywhere else I could find to keep the streak alive.

It has sometimes been boring, often has been fun, and occasionally even comical the things we go through to 'get that mile.'

My streak has become second nature and I can't imagine not running every day, so I don't see myself ending my streak anytime soon.

Taiwo Aloba

TAIWO ALOBA'S STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

Hello, my name is Taiwo Aloba and I am a Run Streaker!

What started as a Summer Miles Challenge has turned into an impressive feat of endurance and dedication. Today [19 June 2023], I celebrate three years of running every day and counting.

For those who may not be familiar, a run streak is the act of running at least one mile every day, without any breaks. It takes a lot of commitment to keep going, but the rewards are well worth it. The benefits of daily running extend far beyond physical fitness. The mental and emotional benefits of exercise are equally important, and regular running has been shown to reduce stress, boost mood, and improve quality of life.

So, what does it take to maintain a run streak for three years and counting? It takes discipline, perseverance, and a lot of planning. It can be challenging to fit in a run every day, but with a little bit of determination, it can be done. It's important to schedule runs into your daily routine, make time for exercise, and stay motivated.

Today, I celebrate my accomplishments and take pride in my dedication and hard work.

In conclusion, maintaining a three-year run streak is no easy feat, but the rewards are well worth it. It takes commitment, planning, and perseverance, but the physical, mental, and emotional benefits of daily running are priceless.

I am forever grateful for the gift of running.

Here's to many more years of running!

NICK ALLEN'S STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

Running every day can sometimes be a little lonely but we all do it for different reasons so it was very nice to receive a little token of recognition. I've been running every day for 3 years, I've set my minimum mileage at 4 miles a day and often run more.

My other passion in life is cycling which I also do most days to commute to work and club ride totally nearly 150 miles a week so you can tell I'm a little active. Made harder being a husband and father to 2 amazing children, I try not to let my activities impact on family life so I am an early bird. Lie-ins are for whimps!

I don't really have an aim in mind to keep streaking but I did promise my children I'll try and beat Forrest Gump's running streak of '3 years, 2 months and 14 days' #gumpstreak.

DAVE INGERSLEV'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

2023-07-05. Feels amazing to reach 4 years of running every day with no days off! And a lovely way to complete the 4th year with a quickish 10k shuttle run back to get the car through beautiful flood plains and woodland trails, after a fantastic day's walking in the Dorset, UK countryside testing out a route for a future event.

The stats:

- 4 year / 1,461 day run streak ... so far!
- Min. 5km/day for first 6 months, then min. 5mi/day ever since.
- Average 11.6km per day.
- Total distance is 10,550mi/16,986km, which would be over 40% of the Earth's circumference, but I didn't go that way.
- Includes:
 - - 6 ultramarathons (max 52.0mi/83.7km),
 - - 7 marathons,
 - - 23 sub-marathons (but longer than halves),
 - - well over 100 half marathons,

- - running through quite a few coughs, colds, and minor injuries - as long as it isn't making me worse, I keep going!

- - disregarding shoe manufacturers' recommendations about replacing running shoes every 300-500 miles, pah! The trail shoes I wore today have over 1,500 miles on them and still going strong.

The hardest days are tied between physical (the two days following a marathon/ultra) and mental (a few occasions where there was emotional trauma).

The best days feel like freedom and flow, being part of nature and enjoying beauty, often involving a mountain summit or coastal path or long-distance trail.

My streak continues. I marked the completion of year 9 and the start of year 10 with a run in a leafy, green European summer - contrasting with the traditional dark sub-zero mornings of my hometown in Australia on my anniversary date. Still streaking! I have not missed a run of at least 1 mile a day for four years! That's through two bouts of Covid, several vacations, two major cross-country road trips (one was 3 weeks long and the other was 2 weeks long), kids' activities (including a son who plays travel hockey), and all of life's ups and downs, I have found a way to get a run in every day! Some might call it crazy, others might say I'm obsessed...I say I'm dedicated and determined and darn proud of it, too!

I ran my second marathon in Rehoboth, Delaware in December 2022 and on July 9th, I am planning on running my own made up race where I run one mile on the hour, for 24 hours. The best part is that I plan to end with one final mile at 12:01 am on July 10th, so that it counts for the day and then I can go to bed and sleep in!

Still no intentions of stopping...bring on year 5!

We started the same day. He lives in the northern Norway and I in Stockholm, but now try to meet up and celebrate every 100th day to do something fun!

We have run in the Norwegian mountains, eat cake in the woods and now celebrated day 730 with a threshold session and a mini party with (non-alcoholic) drinks at the track!

Today [12 July 2023] marks the completion of my third full year of streak running! I began my streak living in Manhattan through the depths of COVID, when I set a 100-day run-streak goal and never looked back.

I have accomplished so much in the past three years, including qualifying for and running the Boston Marathon, taking 20 minutes off my half-marathon time, and running in numerous states and countries (and weather patterns, anyone from New England will know!)

I've also had the added joys of seeing my daughters run their first races and being joined on most of my runs by my sweet pup, Jazz. I can't wait to see where my streak takes me next.

I've been a 'runner' for about 8 years. I started as a way to lose weight and get in shape and it evolved into running obstacle races, then into trails and ultra-distance races, and now into running daily because I love it.

I first tried a running streak in 2017 and made it 100 days and decided it wasn't for me because my body couldn't handle it and I thought I needed full rest days.

Last year, while crewing my friend Erika at the Badwater 135 race, I joined her husband for his daily streak runs and was inspired to start my own. Since then I've been fortunate to avoid any serious injuries, increase my weekly mileage and be much more consistent which has translated to more success racing. I'm excited to keep my streak going for a long time.

The following is a pep talk I put together for a friend's daughter:

To achieve success in anything starts with you. Many things can look impossible until we prove that they are not!

Goals have been my key to success with the running streak, completing 10 IRONMANS, and simply in life. Unless you know where you want to go, you will never get there. Most goals should be achievable to build confidence, but some goals should be so big that they scare you and they make you stretch!

Once you establish your goals, train yourself to “think positive,” and to approach challenges with positivity. This can be as simple as reframing daily thoughts from “I have to” to “I GET TO!” Our minds hold tremendous power and we often become what we tell ourselves over and over.

If we see ourselves as average, we will be average. If we see ourselves as sick, we will be sick. But, if we see ourselves as healthy, as champions, and as overcomers, that's what we will become.

Surround yourself with people that are positive, people who believe in you, and people who will help you reach your goals and your dreams! Do your best to remove the anchors that are holding you down.

Avoid excuses on your journey. It has been said that, “Excuses are like armpits, we all have them, and they all stink.” A loss, a failure, or a setback are really opportunities to learn and grow, and often a setup for something even greater in your future!

I would be lying if I said success comes easy. There are no shortcuts to success, only hard work, dedication, and perseverance.

Over the course of 13 years, my wife and I got married, we built a house, were blessed with two beautiful daughters, changed jobs, traveled many places, dreamed big, and tried to shine brightly in our community. But I've also been sick with a terrible flu and many times had stomach pain so bad that it brought me to the floor in agony. I've been injured with a dislocated shoulder, had a severely sprained ankle, and had many other ailments that would derail the average person, but through it all I always accomplished the mile!

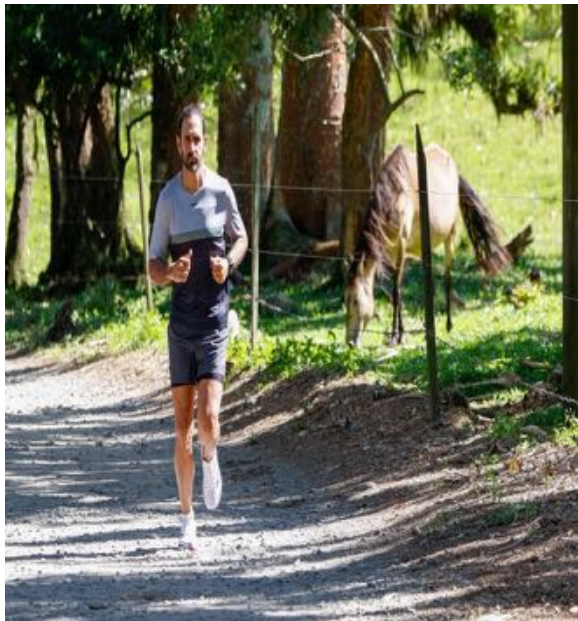

During the 4,749 days it would have been very easy to lie and say I ran the mile when I really didn't. But it is very FREEING when you always give it your best and are true to your word.

Practice daily gratitude because there will never be a completely self-made success story. Sincerely thank your family, your teachers, and those special people that helped you reach your goals and dreams. Forgive those that did you wrong and thank them for driving you forward. Through my strong faith I have worked hard to develop a spirit of excellence which is doing the right thing even when it is hard and when no one is watching.

Success awaits for those willing to dream big, work hard, and put in the time! You are never too young, too old, or too far gone to chase your dreams so “Set Big Goals, Work Hard, and Get Them!”

A master in runstreaking? I learnt a lot but I thought it would feel different now. It feels kind of empty. I've been waiting for this day for a long time. Planning on how to celebrate, what path to run on, how long, with whom and so on...

When the day came, I just ran an ordinary 5k at home, with my daughter (3 years of runstreak, yayh!), and my husband. He came home with presents for us, and cooked a great meal! A great day!

But it feels a little bit empty. Like when you were waiting for the Christmas presents, but realized you were too old for toys to rip up and play with immediately...

First day of runstreak as a proficient, is exactly the same as the day before, as a neophyte. Still it's always totally different, just like every new day is different from the day before and you never know what is waiting :)

Today 7/17/23 is 3 years straight of running. My goal is 5-6+ miles most days. I was only able to complete 2 miles during 4 days out of my streak.

Over my current streak I am now at 5,569.06 miles tracked. I raced in one half marathon and ran 3 other half marathons on my own. Mostly I run outside in all conditions: rain, cold, heat, snow, and wind, but occasionally I am forced to run on a treadmill. My coldest run was 14 degrees F and my hottest run was 90 degrees plus F.

I have run in Washington state mostly, but also in New York, California, Florida, Mexico, Jamaica, Grand Cayman, the Bahamas, and international waters circling a cruise ship.

Back in July of 2020 when I began my streak, I was not planning on running for the next 3+ years. I made it a few weeks in a row and thought it would be harder to start over than keep going.

I was also inspired by the article I read about Jim Pearson's streak of 50 years at the time. I knew Jim from my high school days. He was the cross-country coach at my school in Ferndale and I wrestled on the same team as his son. It isn't always easy to keep it going, but it is a lot harder to start over! Yes - still running! I'm actually impressed by myself that I'm still running every day.

It's been days with no energy, full of energy, barefoot on a beach, in flipflops late on a gravel road, in high-heels between main course and desert in a dinner, just before midnight, right after midnight, on airports, health or feeling not quite up to it - but - EVERY SINGLE DAY for 3 years straight!

I almost can't believe it. It works because I'm a bit lazy. :) Why? Well, I don't need to run long or fast - I can and sometimes do - but mostly I just make this one mile, no matter what. These 10 minutes (yes, I'm slow) each day is something that is most doable.

And my secret recipe is of course because of my amazing daughter Mikka Söder- that also celebrates 3 years today! She inspires, supports and encourages me to keep running!

I ran my first recreational 5k in 2008, and after running only a few times a year for those events I started "really" running frequently in 2012, running my first half marathon in the fall, and then my first full marathon in 2013. I've run at least 1 full marathon a year since then, though my longest running streak was only 7 days.

In 2019, I got a tear in my left peroneal tendon that was really hard to recover from. Two doctors, one year, and five physical therapists later, I appeared healed and was cleared to try running again. Unfortunately, each time I tried a few miles I'd be right back in pain. Right around that time COVID hit the US and all my appointments were canceled.

On my own and getting desperate to return to running, I started running 1 mile every day on the same route so I could adjust other things and find what was or wasn't working for my tendon. Two weeks later and feeling a little better, I increased it to 2 miles a day, 2 weeks after that I started running some slightly longer distances and realized I should keep the streak going of at least 1 mile per day. 2 years ago, I changed my minimum to 5k per day.

Now over 3 years since I started my streak, it's let me come back to running better than ever by forcing me to make improvements to my form, how I recover, how I warm up and how I cross train.

I've run PRs in nearly every distance since then and run my first 60-mile ultras. It's also made me realize how many times I've not felt well at the beginning of a run and would have bailed in the past, but if I just stick it out a mile or two I almost always feel better and enjoy the run, and if not - there's always the next day.

PAULA GORDON'S STREAK HITS 24 YEARS

My streak began like most others, and many of my experiences are similar to yours—weather issues, injuries, travel, close calls, and so on. My reflection this year isn't about all of that.

When people learn about my streak, they assume I'm a "good" runner. Then I ask them if they've ever seen me run...I'm not fast and never have been, so to many that means I'm not "good." So, what makes me "good?"

This is why I love streak running. I don't have to be fast, I don't have to log ridiculous mileage (although sometimes I do). I just have to find a way every day to run a mile or more. Period.

That simple thing, running at least a mile every day, has made a HUGE impact on my life! For example, I'm 62 and I can still run. I get outside every day, no matter where or what the weather is doing (I live in South Dakota... We have it all).

I've run in every hemisphere and in many states. I've made friends along the trail. My old clothes all fit. I have more long-term goals now than when I started. I know I can find a way to get out and run. The list is long and most of you know the benefits.

I've realized I'm in my third trimester of life...I want my next thirty years to be awesome! I am planning on running at least one mile every day for the next thirty plus years because it's what makes me feel alive and it's what I do. I am a streak runner.

Running has become a part of my identity, even though I've never been "good." I'm persistent, disciplined and, as I've been told a few times, a little crazy. I'm okay with that.

I have continued to run every morning since then even with the birth of my two children and now a new endeavor of being in the Bakersfield Police Academy. I run every morning at 3 am prior to going to the Academy at 6 am.

it is so amazing to know there is an official organization tracking on running streaks!

So, well, I was up to the idea of going on a running streak for a very long time... I mean, to me, an out-of-this-world running streak meant something like 100 days in a row. :) This I accomplished in July 2018, and after that I stepped away from this idea, although it always tickled my mind - how many days I can run in a row without any single break?

So, I restarted my streak this year, 30.04.2023 (today is 31.07.2023, day #93 and I'm close to hitting 100 days again). I was so proud to have the running streak again, until, just a few days ago, I came across a webpage of your organization! Oh Gosh, when I saw records and active streaks, I got a bit dizzy, but at the same time I started to feel not being alone in the thing I'm doing!

So yes, I will keep running every day. I try avoiding those tricks like running just 1 mile somewhere on a treadmill, my normal run would be at least ~ 5 km outside... but I have to admit that lifestyle I have sometimes put me in conditions when I simply cannot run more than 1 mile (like when I was in the mountains climbing Ararat at height of 5137m, it is physically not possible to run more than a mile there. :)

Let us see how this all develops, but at least now I have a running streak goal - to enter "A golden league" of The hills (50+ years).

I began run streaking on Jan 1, 2017 with the goal to run every day for the entire year. After working so hard to achieve it, when Jan 1, 2018 came around, it was difficult to stop. "1 more week" I told my wife, "then I'll let it go." 6.5 years later, and I still can't stop!

APRIL STEVENS' STREAK HITS 5 YEARS

Running for 5 years now. When I started 100 days seemed unthinkable. Like everyone, there have been good runs, bad runs, and great runs.

I think one of the best things for me about running is it is the most selfish thing I do. I started running for me. For both my physical health and mental health. I looked at my life and realized none of my time was spent on me. It was spent on my kids, husband, and my job. I told myself if I couldn't figure out a way to give myself 15 minutes to run one mile a day then it was time to reevaluate my life. And here we are.

The first year was by far the hardest. And not on me physically or mentally. It was trying to convince others what this meant to me. I am a hunter so there would be days that I would walk through the mountains for 10+ miles. My hunting party would tell me "you hiked enough today that counts." They have now learned better and instead of saying those negative comments they ask when are you going to run today.

I am so happy to have made it to 5 years. And look forward too many more.

JOEL NG'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

I completed my 2nd year of my running streak on 07/30/23. Most days were an early morning run, however there were days I needed to get creative. For example, my wife and I went to the hospital on the evening of 09/15/22 for my daughter to be born. So, on 09/16/22, I went down from the hospital room right after midnight and ran my mile for the day in the hospital parking lot. That way the rest of my day could be free, and my daughter was born later that morning.

Another instance was when my daughter got admitted to the hospital with RSV. It was early, and I had planned on running that evening, but we ended up going to the hospital. The end of the day was approaching, and I had not had a chance to run. So, what I did was run around the hospital block so that I finished my mile just before midnight. Then I ran another mile after midnight as it was the next day.

I am proud of my streak, and I am excited to keep it going. I've run every day outside, regardless of the weather. I've run all over the country, while traveling for work, and love making sure no matter what I get it in.

The last 2 months, I've been working on making a 5K my minimum distance for the day.

SIMONE RUSSELL-MCGUIRE'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

I did not achieve my goal of 3,000 miles, and really really tried (yes, I cried about this) ... but it was still an excellent second running streak year. (Made it to 2675 miles, progress not perfection.)

Back in April, in order to travel to a Depeche Mode concert way over in San Antonio, we drove a whirlwind car trip sandwiched between one of my children's college classes. To keep up family running streaks (1/2 of us have streaks), we designed a short runcation. Though I didn't get to run the 8-9ish miles per day I was used to, it was still wonderful to get to run in places.

I had never been... such as City Park in New Orleans, Terry Hershey Park in Houston, different sections of The Riverwalk in San Antonio on different days (completely beautiful, and also mind the "waddling of ducks" that decide to take off like a helicopter right in front of runners), and finally Tuxachanie Hiking Trail in Saucier, Mississippi. (The Depeche Mode concert, by the way, was, hands down, the absolute best concert I have ever been to.)

I participated in fewer races this year. The first was a lovely sort of short running appetizer through the trees, the Windermere 5k.

The second was an absolute blast through EPCOT and Hollywood Studios, Disney's Toy Story 10 Miler in April. (I also enjoyed being able to run in the middle of the highway.) We started in toward the back of the E corral as my husband had fairly recently recovered from a broken foot. For the first time we got to get taunted by The Balloon Ladies who waved to everyone from the top of the ramp on the highway. (That was hilarious.) We ran past gobs and gobs of people who were walking, texting and chit chatting on the highway's ramps behind the trees! Walking! (This still does not compute.) I finished with an average (phone) pace of 13'29" and my husband was right there with me. I was so proud of him.

The only half-marathons I achieved were all at home on the backyard track, which was just fine.

May all of your running streaks grow ever longer, I know I hope mine will.

JOHN LITZENBERG'S STREAK HITS 14 YEARS

I hit 14 straight years of running every day at the "Happiest Place on Earth" aka Disneyland on Thursday August 3rd and couldn't think of a better place to do it! It was the last day of a four-day excursion, two days at the Parks, and I did a few loops around the whole Disney complex before heading home. The only downer was being told to "walk" as I ran past the entryway to the Park entrances, and of course I ignored the command-- especially as I was on public sidewalk.

Other highlights over the past twelve months of my streak include a 10K 1st Place Overall at the Reindeer Run in American Canyon, CA on 12/3/22, a 15th Place Overall and 1st finisher over 50 years old at the Rock N Roll Arizona Marathon on 1/15/23, a 6th Place Overall and 1st Masters (over 40 years old) finisher at the IPA 10K in Sebastopol, CA in 36:47: averaging sub-6 minute pace per mile, a 5th Place Overall and 1st Masters finisher at the Bay to Breakers 15K on 5/21/23 and a 6th Place Overall and 1st Masters finisher at the 50th running of the Kenwood Footrace 10K, the oldest standing 10K in California, on 7/4/23.

I have been coaching cross-country at my Alma Mater high school, Sonoma Valley, since 2007 (Head Coach since 2011) and this past spring I became the Head Track and Field coach there as well. It was an adjustment, but ultimately was beneficial to get back to doing some speed workouts on the track again.

I'm currently on pace to complete my 10th straight calendar year of averaging more than 10 miles per day, over 3650 miles per year, at the end of 2023 and I'm looking forward to continuing to do that, and to continuing the streak, as long as I can!

Best Wishes to my Fellow Streakers!

JOHN HOGAN'S STREAK HITS 13 YEARS

My running streak hit 13 Years today [29 July 2023]! I have averaged 7.45 miles per day with a minimum daily total of 3 miles, for a total of 35,351.9 miles.

BRAD CHANEY'S STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

I have now run a 5K / 3.11 miles every single day for 3 straight years!! 1,095 straight days, all outside, no music, in weather ranging from -35 wind-chill back in December to recent 110+ heat index, snow, ice and a lot of rain!

This challenge started for me on August 16th, 2020. I started long ago not knowing how long I would do this, but felt like going at least 1 year, now in year 3, I don't want to stop.

This past year has had some amazing highs, including qualifying for and running the Boston Marathon, enjoying some of my best training I've ever had and raced in some fun races. I've also struggled at times with not feeling like I wanted to go out and run on some occasions, but I did it anyways and always felt great afterward.

Coming soon, I get to run alongside Matthew in his first full marathon, I again get to register and hopefully race Boston and look forward to many more runs and races with my friends!!

My three-year totals include 7,318 total miles, completed in 39.12 days or 939 hours. I have averaged 6.68 miles per day and a 7:42 average pace. Year 3 of my streak has my highest totals yet. I've run 2,641 miles in 13.72 days or 329 hrs and 17 min, 7.24 miles/day with an average pace of 7:29! Year 1 was 2,207 miles in 12.23 days, 6.05 miles/day and 7:58 average and Year 2 was 2,470 miles in 13.17 days, 6.77 miles/day and 7:41 average.

There are no plans to stop, I'm still in great shape and know I have a lot more miles in me during this streak!! I hope this inspires at least 1 person to lace up their shoes and go out and do something incredible!!

RYAN MOORE'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

Here is to year 2! This is my second streak now since I had covid in 2021 and had to stop for two weeks.

This past year starting in January I had a back injury that limited my mileage but thankfully I have been able to pick up the mileage the last couple months.

I enjoy so much being a stalker and glad stalker Tim McBride (day 4,251) got me into it. Also my girlfriend just hit her 3 year mark. Woo hoo!

STACEY MARSH'S STREAK HITS 5 YEARS

5 years! Looking back, I never imagined my streak would make it this far. From the physical side of things, I went from barely finishing one mile at a time to running my first 5k, 10k, and finally a half marathon.

Things escalated and I'm now preparing for my fourth full marathon, NYC Marathon, in November 2024.

I've also finished two 50k trail runs, three Ragnar relay races, and have hiked rim to rim to rim in the Grand Canyon twice (along with countless shorter distance races).

My daily run has come with me in three countries and 16 states so far. It's amazing to see the progress that can be made and the places we can go with simply running at least one mile a day.

But even more surprising are the non-physical changes in my life that have come along with this endeavor. I'm happier, healthier, and more fulfilled at 36 than I have ever been in this life so far. My confidence, resiliency, and mental health have grown alongside my runstreak.

My community and support system has expanded tenfold. My career has leveled up as each year has passed. I know, without a doubt, that the lessons this streak have taught me have had a ripple effect on life as a whole.

Will my streak see a 6-year celebration? I'm ok with admitting it's still unknown for me; but, what I do know, is that the lessons I've learned and lifestyle I've come to love over the last 5 years are both here to stay. And that, even more than the streak that may eventually come to an end, is beyond what I could have asked for when I set out for that first mile on August 19, 2018.

LOIS BASTIEN'S STREAK CONTINUES AT 43 YEARS; HAS TOP FEMALE STREAK IN THE WORLD

Hello, there's nothing new with me. I still run around 6 AM every morning. I am still running 3 miles each day. I am not competing in any races anymore. My running is just for my health and well-being. I still enjoy it and don't plan on stopping. Happy Running!!!

John Griswold

JOHN GRISWOLD'S STREAK HITS 8 YEARS

Run Streak Day 2,923 or 8 years of running at least 1 continuous mile a day every day. I started my run streak on August 20, 2015. Every mile of my streak has been run outdoors through all kinds of weather and in multiple States. This year has been the most challenging year of my streak. In 2010 I was diagnosed with kidney disease. In 2016 I reached Stage 4 chronic kidney disease. My kidneys have been slowly failing over the past thirteen years. Through running, bicycling and paying attention to what I eat I have been able to prolong the need for a kidney transplant until now. On June 19, 2023, I was officially listed on the United Network for Organ Sharing, National Transplant Registry. There is a 5-7 year wait for a transplant unless I find a living donor.

In November of 2022 I ran the Philadelphia Marathon, and my time was slower than when I ran in 2021. I knew something wasn't right. My daily runs were getting much slower than the past seven years as my energy level was lower. Despite this declining energy level, I have set long-term and short-term goals for myself. My long-term goal is to continue my run streak until the day of my kidney transplant. A key component in achieving this goal is to stay off dialysis and find a living donor as soon as possible. My short-term goal is to run the Charlotte Marathon on November 4, 2023 (26.2-mile run). A key component is these goals is figuring out how to train and run at a slower pace.

To shorten the 5-7 year wait I am searching for a living donor. My blood type is O negative. You can help me fight this fight in several ways.

1. Spread the word to your family and friends who might know someone who is willing to serve as a donor. You can start by sharing this message on your Facebook page.
2. Prayers and positive support are always welcome and much appreciated.
3. It is not my place to outright ask you for your kidney—that is a powerful and personal gesture—however, I would be truly grateful for such a selfless gesture.
4. You can learn more about donation from the National kidney Foundation at www.kidney.org/transplantation/livingdonors

I don't make these requests lightly. I simply want to extend my time on this third rock from the sun and continue to live a healthy life, running, riding my bicycle and paying attention to what I eat. Thank you so much for reading this message. Please message me on Facebook if you have any questions.

MARK COOPER'S STREAK HITS 7 YEARS

I've just completed 7 years of my running streak. My first day of my streak was at a work conference. Because it's on the same week every year I was there again for my 7 year anniversary.

As we all must know, there have been tough days to get out. Days I've been sick, I even kept going with COVID last year. A couple of days I almost forgot, getting out of bed at 10pm to run...

Fortunately, my wife is a runner and she has been very supportive of my streak, even making me run when I had tonsillitis. Here is to the next year of running at least a mile a day.

SIMON ANGELDORFF JOINS SRI FROM SWEDEN

I did have 'occasional fits of running' in the early 2000-s, with two finishes in Stockholm Marathon in 2002 and 2009 and a finish in New York Marathon in 2006.

Later, I did a Gothenburg Half-Marathon in 2014 and a Stockholm Half-Marathon in 2015. My times were not great and I did not catch the 'running bug.'

In the beginning of August 2022, my wife challenged me to do a run-streak, which was fantastic, as this type of training fits me perfectly. I do it for myself and not with any ambition to run races or anything.

TIM JADICK'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

I was just telling my buddy on a 16 miler today [19 August 2023] that my 4-year anniversary is tomorrow. So, I am a 2-mile minimum streaker, and this was a fantastic year of training!

Some highlights include- my first ever 100-mile week, completing the Hyner Trail Challenge 25k with over 4200 ft of vert, getting back under 19 min in the 5K with an 18:57, and running a 5:29 road mile at the end of July. I got back down under 1:30 in the half with an 1:29 at the Scranton Half Marathon in March. I have a downhill mile next in which I plan to go sub 5.

My most difficult day to get out this year was when I had a stomach bug back in the winter and let's just say it was a miracle I made it 2 miles!

So far in 2023 I've logged 1,509 miles. I'm excited to focus on the mile and the 5k before I shift to longer trail races in the winter and spring. My streak motivates me to get out the door each and every day, and it's only made me a better runner.

THE FINISH LINE

By: Mark Washburne

This Fall issue of THE STREAK REGISTRY features athletes from Norway and that country's top female streak runner, Tone Killengreen. I was lucky to meet Ms. Killengreen virtually when I was a guest in March on her podcast RUNSTREAK PODEN, that she hosts with Jon Asphjell, who currently has the 13th longest active running streak in Norway. Their podcast features Norwegian streak runners and is usually broadcasted in their native language. As I do not speak Norwegian, however, they were kind enough to conduct my interview in English and I was the first (but not the last) interviewed on the RUNSTREAK PODEN in English. I hope you enjoy our cover and feature story by Tone Killengreen about some of our amazing Norwegian streak runners.

Besides Norway, streak runners from another Scandinavian country also grabbed our attention this last quarter. In August, Dennis Malmberg, from Hanaskog, registered the 1,000th streak from Sweden with Streak Runners International (SRI). Mr. Malmberg's streak started on 8 August 2022 and recently reached the one-year mark making it eligible to be listed on the SRI website. The longest running streak held by a Swedish athlete belongs to Ellen Westfelt, from Vallentuna. Ms. Westfelt's streak began on 4 September 2013 and will, hopefully, reach a decade soon.

Sweden has the second most streaks listed in the world behind the United States with over 4,500 active and retired streaks. Rounding out the top dozen streak running countries is United Kingdom (300 streaks), Canada (207 streaks), Germany (128 streaks), Australia + New Zealand + Oceania (123 streaks), Norway (63 streaks), Demark (61 streaks), India (32 streaks), South Africa (26 streaks), Netherlands (25 streaks), and Ireland (19 streaks).

Congratulations are also in order to Steve DeBoer, from Rochester, Minnesota, whose running streak tied the late (and great) Ron Hill's streak at 19,032 consecutive days (52.11 years) on 15 July 2023 and passed him the next day. Mr. DeBoer now has third place on Streak Runners International list of the longest running streaks in the world after the still active streaks of Jon Sutherland (54+ years) and Jim Pearson (53+ years).

Posting about Steve DeBoer's streak matching Ron Hill's streak on Facebook also set a personal record for me using social media. According to statistics posted on Facebook, my DeBoer-Hill post was viewed by over 224,400 people and generated over 2,000 likes, 90 shares, and 169 comments. I am not sure what algorithm Facebook uses to promote some posts and not others. It is my belief, however, that the popularity of the post is a testament to the amazing running streaks of Steve DeBoer and Ron Hill and the growing interest people from around the world are taking in our running streak community.

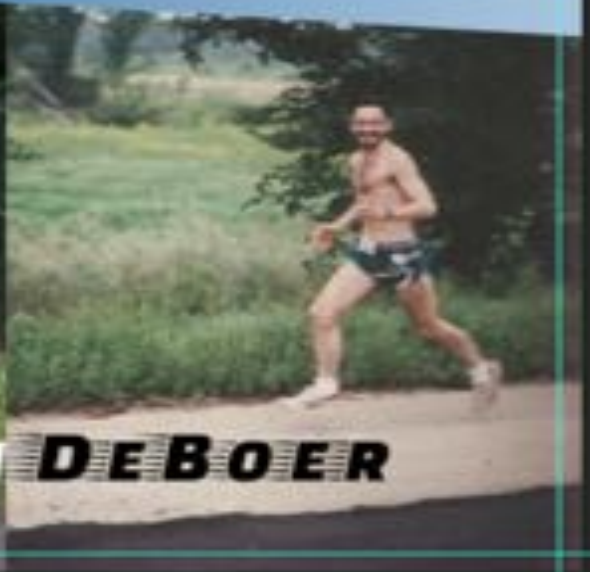

Prior to my DeBoer-Hill post, my next most popular post on social media happened when I shared the news about my mother's 100th birthday in May of 2022 on Facebook. The 100th birthday post generated 716 likes and 228 comments. My mom is now 101 and we hope that there will be a few more birthday posts in the future to share. The lesson I learned from sharing news on social media is that the way to become popular is to run every day for a long time and live every day for a long time. In that regard and as always, I want to wish all of you good luck as we each run the roads and trails – every day!
