Michael Fanelli

MICHAEL FANELLI PASSES AT 67
HAD TWO STREAKS AND 115,000 LIFETIME MILES
By: Mark Washburne

The running world lost one of its giants with the passing of Michael “Mike” Fanelli, from San Anselmo, California, at the age of 67. Coach Fanelli died from glioblastoma brain cancer on the Saturday after Thanksgiving (25 November 2023). During his long running career, the California Coach and running historian had completed two streaks (2010-12-30 to 2013-09-24 for 1,000 days - 2.74 years; 2004-12-17 to 2006-02-07 for 418 days - 1.14 years) and over 115,000 lifetime miles. The announcement of his passing was made on social media by his widow, Renay Weissberger Fanelli:

Dear Friends and Family,

It is with unbearable sadness that I share with you that Michael has passed away from brain cancer, at home, surrounded by loved ones. While he was a public figure in many ways, he was also a very private person. Because of that, he chose not to share his diagnosis broadly, preferring to live his life as if he was living, not dying.

A little over a year ago, Michael was diagnosed with glioblastoma. Nevertheless, he faced this journey in the same way he approached all he did in life: with determination, discipline, dignity, and optimism. As a coach, he often told runners to divide the race into thirds: "Run the first part with your head, the middle part with your personality, and the final third, with your heart." In many ways, it's how he took on his illness.

Through it all, he continued to do the things he loved, including running, of course. In October, he achieved his goal of reaching 115,000 miles run, the equivalent of traversing 4 times around the world. As many of you know, mentoring and coaching were lifetime passions of Michael's. He truly believed that the world was a place of abundance and wanted to share that with others. And in the process, he had the privilege of influencing and inspiring so many along the way.

For Michael, the magic happened when pushed outside his comfort zone. In a podcast a few years ago, he said, "As long as I can come across the finish line...knowing that I couldn't possibly have run one iota faster, that to me, that's satisfying."

We send our condolences to Mrs. Fanelli and the entire family. Below are a couple of updates we received from Coach Fanelli over the years:

FROM SPRING 2012 TSR
MIKE FANELLI JOINS USRSA;
HAS RUN OVER 98,000 LIFETIME MILES

Although I have run continuously for in excess of forty consecutive years, I am a relative neophyte to streak running. My lifetime total running mileage exceeds 98,000 but my longest recorded streak is just 418 days (retired)...although my current active streak is just on the verge of conquering new heights.

I began in 1968 as a sixth grader inspired by the Mexico City Olympics but really caught the bug in 1970 as a high school freshman on the cross-country team at my Philadelphia high school...and have never stopped running and racing ever since.

As is typical, I began as a middle-distance runner in the early '70s and continued to move up in distance. Collegiately I was competitive at 5,000 and 10,000 meters and after school the road races up to the marathon. One thing led to another and the next thing I knew I was racing 50 milers, 100Ks, and eventually even 100 miles...on the track (yikes)!

I managed to record personal bests of 4:16 (mile), 14:37 (5,000), 30:53 (10,000), 2:25 (marathon), 6:03 (50 miles) and 16:40 for 100 miles.

At age 50 I reversed course, went back to my roots and re-invented myself as a miler...managed 4:56 for the distance at the half-century mark.

Today's focus balances trying to race on the track from the one mile to the 10,000 meters while managing an assault on 100,000 miles (tentatively scheduled for November 2012) and this newer passion for "the streak."

It is just SO fun to have added a new twist to my enjoyment of the sport through streaking. Streak running is such a very different sort of challenge at this stage of a long running career . . . more about management mode. Am constantly treading a fine red line between training at high intensity speeds for competition purposes and yet not overstepping those bounds so that I can live to add another day to the streak annals...am having just a crazy great time doing so and love being a beginner amongst this amazing breed of streak stalwarts!

When not out counting miles, professionally I am a broker of fine residential properties in San Francisco and adjacent Marin County. I enjoy spending quality time with my wife Renay and handsome dog Baci at our Sonoma County wine country weekend property. Together we share a passion for reading, cooking, golf, traveling, and bird watching and look forward to conquering Mount Kilimanjaro in the very near future.

FROM SPRING 2013 TSR MIKE FANELLI PASSES 100,000 MILES

Recorded mile number 100,000 during the Philadelphia Marathon on 11/18/12 between miles 13 and 14 according to my training logs...planned to dovetail the milestone with this event which I first ran 40 years prior as a 16-year old in 1972 (my first ever marathon).

Started recording training as a high school frosh in 1970. My goal was not to ever create such an enormous tally but instead to gauge training and fitness to compete. That very first marathon was 3:36 and eventually improved to 2:25 at 1980 Nike OTC Marathon in Eugene, Oregon. Other bests range from 14:37 5000 meters, 30:53 10,000 meters, 3:05 50K and 16:40 100 miles (On the track!).

While I have slowed substantially, I never really took any time away from the sport - always trained to compete at the best level that I could - hence the training diaries. While I managed lots and lots of 90+ mile weeks in the late 70s and early 80s, these days I am typically averaging just over 40 miles a week. I train every day (haven't missed a day in the past two years) with a longish run of about 10 - 12 miles, a hard tempo type run and one interval session most weeks. All other days are active recovery jogs of 4 - 7 very slow miles.

I still love track and field and, now that my final marathon is thankfully behind me, I shall focus on my true love of 800 meters and the mile. I recently qualified for National Seniors Games at the 800/1500meters and intend to compete there in Cleveland in July 2013.

What a long strange trip it has been.

SCOTT LUDWIG'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 16,438 DAYS
"My Knees are Just Fine"
By: Scott Ludwig
Senolia, Georgia

When someone I meet for the first time finds out I've been a runner for quite a few years, they inevitably ask me the same question. Technically, they ask me why I run first, and then they ask me this:

'How are your knees?'

My knees are just fine, thank you very much. As for everything else? Not so much.

I took a day off from running for the first time in more than 45 years the other day. That means before that day I had run at least once - and many times more than that - for 16,438 days in a row. *

(*That reminds me of another question I'm often asked when someone finds out about my running streak: 'don't you feel better after taking a day off?'
My response was always the same: 'How would I know?')

Whenever the subject of my running comes up, I'm always asked about my knees.

When someone finds out how many marathons I've run, they ask about my knees. I tell them my right thigh occasionally feels numb – the result of a spinal injection gone bad many years ago – but my knees are just fine.

When someone finds out I've run races of 100 miles or more, they ask about my knees. I tell them my lower back aches every now and then – the result of a bulging disk between the L-4 and L-5 spinal segment - but my knees are just fine.

When someone finds out how many miles I've run over the course of my lifetime, after they tell me they haven't even driven that far, they ask about my knees. I tell them my sanity is often questioned, but my knees are just fine.

However, that's not to say it's all been easy. Not by a long shot.

My back hurts. My legs hurt. My feet hurt. My shoulders hurt. My neck hurts. My stomach hurts. My side hurts. My feet hurt.

And I should probably mention the mere sight of my toes would scare the dickens out of you.

But again, my knees are just fine.

To sum things up, I started my streak of running consecutive days on November 30, 1978 – a time when you could count the number of different running shoes on one hand, and Gatorade came in just two flavors (orange and lemon-lime).

(Currently, there are a bazillion different running shoes – not to mention Gatorade flavors – to choose from. It's almost hard to comprehend how things have changed since the running boom of the '70's - when I paid $5 for my first pair of USA Olympic running shoes at Marty Liquori's original Athletic Attic store in Gainesville, Florida, and a 32-ounce glass bottle of Gatorade sold for nine cents.)

The streak came to an end – intentionally, I might add - on December 1, 2023. That morning, I ran the route I ran with my son Josh the first time he and I ever ran three miles together. Then, that afternoon I was accompanied by three good friends for another 2.6 miles; the same 2.6 miles I ran with Josh on the day before he passed.

So, on December 2, 2023, I did something I haven't done since I was 23 years old. I simply didn't run. (NOW you can ask if I feel better after taking a day off!)

After logging 166,050 miles – an average of just over 10 miles a day – it was time to put a merciful and probably long overdue end to my streak of running every day.

There are *any number of reasons I decided to end the streak, but they can best be summarized by the four-word title of one of B. B. King's most popular songs:

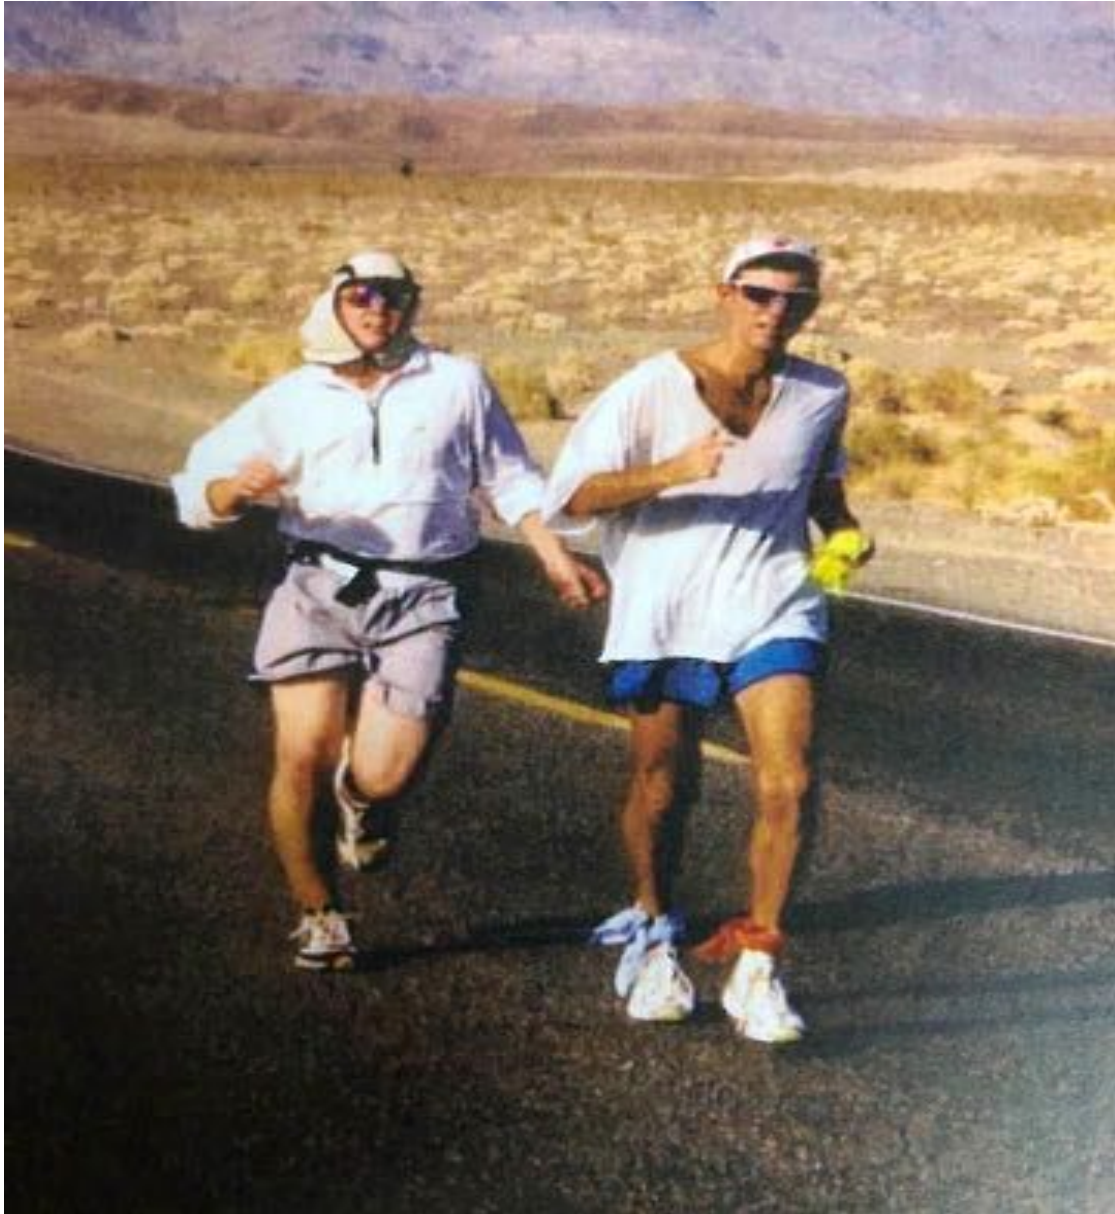

The thrill is gone.

Been there, done that.

Now it's time to try something new. While I still can, that is.

And, for the record, my knees are still just fine.

(*The full explanation of why I ended my streak can be found in 'Death of a Runner,' a chapter in my book Timbuktu and Back: A Running Commentary. You don't have to be a runner to appreciate the book.)

BIRGIT SACHER'S STREAK HITS A DECADE

By: Birgit Sacher
Santa Rosa, California

It's not that I never ran before. And I count myself among the lucky ones who never had a high school coach that considered running a punishment. But I didn't start calling myself a runner until graduate school. With no money to join a gym or pursue sports that my parents or university had bankrolled for me, I hit the road. It was 1994, and I would say that my enthusiasm for running was based on the time I got to spend in the fresh air, solving the world's problems with a classmate.

I took my first job out of school and I was finally able to join a gym again. I still ran from time to time and even entered a footrace. In 2000 a new job took me to Northern California. A few weeks after I started, we had a retreat at Asilomar, a coastal retreat and conference center near Pacific Grove, CA. Think Northern California rugged coastline, beautiful but blustery beaches, and The Links at Spanish Bay. Coming from Wisconsin, I had never seen anything like this place. It was gorgeous, and so I got up early one morning to explore the area on a run.

I don't know exactly how long or how far I ran. I had never run more than 5 miles, and I estimate I was out for at least 13. I missed breakfast, and the conference center folks were looking for me because I missed the checkout time too. I wasn't lost in the navigational sense, but I was lost in the beauty and the exhilaration of the run. It might go without saying that when I got back home I could hardly pry my body out of my car. Runs that long would wait a while, but despite the soreness, I couldn't wait to get out again.

A couple months later I met Greg, the man who would become my husband. I had now decided I would run a marathon, and he was preparing for another one of his Calistoga-Santa Cruz 200-mile relays. After just a couple months of dating, we decided to run the London Marathon together. We got into triathlon too, and Greg proposed at the finish line of our first one on Treasure Island. Over those next years we ran lots of races, each of us one Ironman, and had kids. A race of their own, we kept up a little triathlon, and all of the running.

Most importantly, running has been the reason we have met some of the dearest people in our lives. We have spent most New Years for over 20 years with our friends Susan and Andreas, and our children have grown up like siblings. Many of these New Years have brought me back to our beautiful rugged coastline for a tradition of staying together at The Sea Ranch in Sonoma County. Beautiful coastal trails and endless inspiration.

And so my run streak began. It was 2013, and I had just taken nearly a month off from running after the New York City Marathon. It was a grueling race for me physically, and I was waiting for the inspiration of my favorite stretch of coastline. So, I set out on December 30, 2013. It wasn't my Asilomar run, rather just a few slow and easy miles. Susan was back in the cabin making a breakfast I did not want to miss.

On a beach walk later that day Susan asked me if had any New Year's Resolutions. I don't generally make resolutions, but out of my mouth came the words, "I think I'm going to run every day in 2014, at least one mile." She loved the idea. Greg said I was crazy, but he'd happily support me.

One year turned into, "well, 365 days is nearly 500," and 500 days turned into, "gee, it would be neat to make it to 1000," and after 1000 days it really seemed more fun to keep going than to stop. There was always so much encouragement along the way.

Having support for a run streak is more significant that most would think. Patience when you need to delay dinner by 10 minutes. A dry towel when you get inside after a run in a torrential downpour. Someone who helps kick you out of bed when you have to get it done at 3am before an early morning flight. Family and friends who tell you they think it's cool instead of telling you they think you are nuts, or dangerous.

When we found ourselves changing plans to wait 6 hours for Lufthansa to find our lost gate-check bags, I donned collected airline socks and Greg lent me his shoes so I could run a mile while he sat barefoot in a pub in Dublin. I call it my Clown Shoe Run, but Greg calls it one of my greatest days on the road.

Greg is so supportive that, on December 23rd, 2019 he started a run streak too. Our 17 and 19-year old boys engage in the sport as well, with the 19-year old taking on mini-streaks here and there.

Five years ago, we added a dog to the family. He is a Vizsla, the ultimate run dog. Whisky is always up for the exercise, and always keeps things from getting too serious. When I am so-so on getting out, he always gets me out.

Although I don't know the total distance off the top of my head, every single run is logged. My run streak has covered 22 countries, 20 states plus DC, more cities than I can count, and a list of iconic bridges. Happily, precious few treadmill miles.

Seeing parts of cities that I never would have seen otherwise is one of the best parts of having a streak. We were geared for a marathon while in Stockholm and ran 18 miles to cover all of the main archipelagos. While I don't plan trips to run in different places, I'm always excited to add new running locations to the list.

My sons have already determined that, during our 19-hour layover in-route to Japan this summer, we will be running a family 5K on the Formula One racing course in Singapore. Run streaking is really fun with such an enthusiastic family. I'm fortunate to have something in my life that reminds me every single day just how fortunate I am.

I'm lucky I've never had a serious injury. But among the many lessons of run streaking, it teaches you how much you can push through while actually striking a healthy balance.

This December was the first year I have ever had to run through sickness, as for the first time during my run streak I got the flu. For 10 years I have barely had a sniffle. Covid never found me, and although I wasn't overly careful, I was obviously careful enough to have lost some resilience in my immune system to get the flu now. Over the past two weeks I have gingerly jogged my mile, stopped as I needed, and at least got to take in a little fresh air.

As I hit December 30th 2023, completing a full 10 years, my airways are still a little inflamed and running is a bit tough. But I will shortly embark on a gentle 3-5 mile run to mark this wonderful day, with my dog, and take a picture for this newsletter. The worst day of my flu was much harder than the miles run after road marathons or hilly 50Ks, harder than after a long day of travel or jet lag, even harder than after a minor surgery I had two years ago.

I'm 51 years old, and running is definitely more humbling than it used to be despite how young I feel and how fit I remain. I suppose at 10 years I needed that perspective to launch me into the next 10! This is why we streakers don't just give up one day.

Happy streaking, everyone!

Richard Westbrook and Steve DeBoer

Traversing the Tundra with Richard Westbrook
Being the 6th Person in the World to Streak for 50 Years
By: Steve DeBoer

Richard Westbrook was born Jan 26, 1947 in Trion, GA (the denim capital of the world), northwest of Atlanta. He grew up there and played football in high school. He did the broad jump in track, but was asked one time to run the 2-mile. After two laps he was in oxygen-debt and in last place (and getting “laster,” as he says). The coach had Richard’s friend ask him to drop out, as it was delaying the finish of the meet, but Richard stubbornly refused.

He worked the next year, married his high school sweetheart, Jan, and then went to college at Austin Peay State University in Clarksville, TN, majoring in Physical Education. After two years of playing defensive end, he found he enjoyed training for the mile during summer workouts. He won the race by over 1/2 a lap. When the coach suggested he needed to put on more weight from the 205 lbs. he had built up to, he decided to quit football and take up running, losing 50 lbs. in the process.

Streak runners at Richard Westbrook's anniversary run – Mike Moser, Grant McAllister, Dean Thompson, Richard Westbrook, Steve DeBoer, Rick Porter, and Rand Wise.

The plan had been to teach and coach football, but now football was out. He helped coach the college track team instead and continued working out. He jumped into a cross country race and finished just behind the team's top runner. He agreed to go out for cross country if he could continue to do his own workouts most of the time. But the coach reneged on that promise, so Richard quit. In grad school, he was running 80-100 miles per week, reading about Arthur Lydiard's training strategies. He ran his first marathon in April 1971, a very hilly course, winning in 3:26.

After college, he got a position teaching grade school in Ft Walton Beach, FL. He soon started a running club for the older kids, which they enjoyed. Once those kids got to high school, Richard volunteered to coach a cross country team, which did quite well. For the next 44 years he coached and taught in several high schools, and his athletes really appreciated his coaching and his friendship. One former student paraphrased Richard's adage, "It is not enough to love winning. You must hate losing to be successful."

On Richard's website, another student wrote, "Honestly, I hate running. I always have. But there was always something that brought me out the next day to practice. Why? I don't know. But I do know that I have learned more from you than I ever have from any coach, my parents, or any relative." Needless to say, some of his former athletes attended his 50th anniversary run in Atlanta's Piedmont Park and shared several stories. One time they were running, and Richard and another coach ran into a cross bar and hit the ground. The other coach was taken to the ER. Richard was bleeding, a flap of skin falling off his nose. He pushed the flap back into place and said "Let's run."

Over the years, Richard raced between 500-1000 times. He has never added them up and his records are kept in a few different locations. His best marathon time was 2:37. The Ultra Signup website lists at least 52 ultras he has finished. He ran the Vol State 500K race nine years in a row, the last being in 2021 at age 74. One of his most successful races was the 1992 Runner's World Transamerica Footrace, the first such event to be held since 1929. It began in Huntington Beach, CA, finishing in New York's Central Park. 64 days of running with no days off. There were 28 starters, 13 of whom finished. Richard ended up in 4th place, the first masters to cross the line at age 45.

When Richard realized he had run 3 days in a row to end 1973, he decided to try going every day in January. That, of course, led to February, and he never stopped. He was living in FL at the time, and thus is the first person we know of running daily in that state. The family moved back to GA in 1977, making him the first run streaker in that state as well, since Rick Porter did not begin running daily until Dec 1977. There have been at most a handful of days he ran only a mile, including the time he was in the hospital, and snuck out to get his mile done. As of December 31, 2023, he had run 174,588 miles, 160,133 since beginning daily runs. The most he ran was the year he did the Transamerica race in 1992 - 6,261 miles.

He finally decided to register his running streak in 2015, which had reached almost 42 years at that time. That put him in 8th place in the United States. Later that year, Jon Simpson from TN, retired his 44-year string of daily runs, and Richard moved up to 7th. With the retirements of Dave Hamilton of WA and Steve Gathje of MN in the next few years, Richard climbed to #5, as well as #5 in the world after Olympian Ron Hill of England ended his 52-year run streak in 2017. Ron was the first person in the world to make it 50 years in 2014. The four active streakers ahead of Richard are Jon Sutherland (50 years in 2019), Jim Pearson (50 years in 2020), and Steve DeBoer & Alex Galbraith (50 years in 2021). Mark Kushner, a friend of Mark Covert (first person in the US to run daily for 40 and 45 years), reached 50 years on Aug 28, 2023, but his streak is not certified as he does not have running logs to confirm it.

It was a cool (low 40s), cloudy, and windy day in Atlanta's Piedmont Park, when we met at noon to celebrate this 50-year achievement. I counted 28 people in attendance, most of whom went around the 1000-meter track twice (1.25 miles), Richard leading the way, talking with some former students. I hung a bit behind, conversing with fellow streakers Rick Porter (46 years) and Grant McAllister (41 years), who were doing daily runs long before they met while living in the same neighborhood. Grant found out about the Running Streak Association first and then told Rick about it, so they both registered in the early 2000s and are currently #12 and #31 on the US active list. Rand Wise of Decatur also attended, with a registered streak over 5 years. There were at least two attendees with unregistered streaks, one of them, Dean Thompson, having run daily over 11 years, except for one day he just forgot. I encouraged him to register.

After the run, I gave a short speech about the Association and the first compilation of streak runners by George Hancock in 1994 (51 people, one being Margaret Blackstock of Atlanta, the only woman). I mentioned that those of us who do this have stories about how we kept up the daily runs with a combination of ingenuity, determination, and stubbornness, that could be said to border on insanity. We like to call it a "positive addiction." Since the founding of the US Running Streak Association (now Streak Runners International) in December of 2000, the active list of runners has increased from 113 to 2853 in the US (plus 1717 in 75 additional countries). The states with the most (both active and retired) are CA, TX, MN, NY, and PA. Georgia has had 138 persons run daily at least one year, including 105 in the Atlanta metro area (as of 12/28/23).

I finished, saying, “But enough statistics. Richard, I present you with this certificate from Streak Runners International, signed by President Mark Washburne, in recognition of your incredible achievement. With eight billion people in the world and you being the 6th person to reach this milestone, you are truly one in a BILLION.”

Then several people shared stories about Richard and, among his former student athletes, the positive impact he made on their lives. One story was of Richard coming home from a run, and his running clothes were all bloody. He never said what had happened. The family found out later that there had been an accident, and Richard had gotten a young child from the vehicle and gave mouth to mouth resuscitation. Some folks lingered a while for more conversation. Then I joined Jan, Richard, and several family members at a nearby restaurant for lunch, learning more details about his life as we ate. I sat with Richard and his daughter, Season, who said all his kids thought he was crazy, but they all ran in high school and were coached by him. Season did run one marathon with her dad and has thought about running every day.

I did some more visiting along the way home. On New Year’s Eve, I ran 12 miles with Bill Shires (37 year streak) in Charlotte, NC. It was in the low 30s at the start, so I ran the first six with my Streak Association t-shirt on. Five others, including two with unregistered streaks, joined us. The others said their goodbyes, while Bill and I did another six (me shirtless this part) as the temp climbed into the low 40s. On New Year’s Day, I met with retired streak runner Rich Holmes at his home in Durham, NC. He has run over 800 marathons and ultras but is currently recovering from right knee replacement surgery needed because of an injury when he slipped and fell on a very challenging ultra course earlier in 2023. Last streaker stop was in Raleigh, NC, at the home of Barbara Latta, who celebrated 40 years of daily runs on Dec 5th. Besides conversation, we ran two miles on a paved loop around a lake a quarter mile away. She runs twice daily, always doing her first run at 4:30 AM with reflectorized gear and a headlamp.

Most of anniversary attendee, Richard Westbrook’s wife, Jan, center front.

The 70,000 Mile Club By: Steve DeBoer

A large number of streak runners (at least 167 that I have been able to confirm) have accumulated over 70,000 miles running in their lifetime. Here is an update of their total and streak mileage. Herb Fred ran more miles than any other person with verified records that I am aware of.

Darryl Beardall had run an estimated 280,000 miles by the end of 2012 but was not able to locate all his running logs to verify his total. He was only able to confirm his 2007-2018 mileage. He did not run on Sundays, so was not a streak runner. He ran the Olympic Marathon Trials in 1960, 1964, 1968 and 1972.

Dallas Robertson, Bill Rodgers, Suzanne Ray, and Jerry Heaps are also not streak runners, but I have included them because of their high mileage totals. Dallas had logs for all but the first five years he ran. Rodgers won both the Boston Marathon and New York Marathon four times. He twice set the American Record in the marathon, the first time while winning the 1975 Boston Marathon (2:09:55) and the second time while winning the 1979 Boston Marathon (2:09:27). Suzanne set the American age group 65-69 record for the one hour run in 2019 with 12,850 meters. Jerry is a fellow Minnesotan with the 4th highest lifetime mileage in our state.

Don Ritchie, British ultrarunner, who was not a streak runner, logged 208,100 miles from 1962 to 2011. His 100K world record (6:10:20, set over 40 years ago) was achieved in a track 100K race. Ritchie's halfway split in that race was under three hours, the first time anyone had run that fast for 50K as a split in a longer race. It was the longest standing world record in all of Track & Field until broken by Nao Kazami (6:09:14) on 6/24/18. Don also held WRs for 100M on the track (11:30:51) and 100M on the road (11:51:12).

Earle Linwood Dilks, American ultra-runner, who was not a streak runner, logged 195,855 miles from 1905 to 1977, and at one time was listed in the Guinness Book of World Records for having run more documented miles than anyone else.

With Darryl, Dallas, Bill, Suzanne, Jerry, Don and Earle, there are 174 runners now mentioned, though only 167 are part of the streaker "Club."

 not streak runners

- have not had their running streaks certified by the US Running Streak Association; Chester T was certified but then dropped from the list; his mileage is from when he was on the certified list.

+ money found in 2023 and since his streak began – has found money every day he has run since 1983 except for the week in April 2020, when he was in the hospital, the weeks he was recovering from strokes in 2022 and another hospital stay end of December!

The person with the most miles in 2023 was Carolyn Mather (7073). Those with the most miles who have a current running streak in 2023 were Bjorn Suneson (5294) & Roger Urbancsik (5388).

I probably did not get everyone who qualifies. Please send your data if you have surpassed (or will this year) 70,000 running miles, at (stephen.william.deboer@gmail.com) and I'll include you in the next update.

MEMBER UPDATES – SPRING 2024

CARRIE SANSOM'S STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

Year 3 is done! This year's mileage (959.7) was down a little from last year's, but I've started incorporating weight training, swimming and cycling to increase strength and mobility.

I still love the benefits of getting up and running each day—even when I don't feel like doing it... especially when I don't feel like doing it. I'm stronger and healthier physically and mentally because of it.

I thank God for the ability to continue this crazy streak, and I'm grateful to my husband who encourages and supports me! On to year 4!

HOLLY ELGIN'S STREAK HITS 5 YEARS

Today [22 November 2023], I celebrate 5 years of my run streak! I started November 22, 2018, intending to run until New Year's and simply did not stop. I've changed jobs twice and had COVID twice but nothing was enough to stop! I'm thankful to be healthy and strong enough to run EVERY day!!

PHILLIP HAWLEY'S STREAK HITS 24 YEARS

The streak is still strong after 24 years. Still trying to hold on to a 5-mile average for a few more years. The cold weather affects me more these days but on nice days it's still a treat to get outside and run. No close calls or injuries this year. I got better shoes that make things easier but there is a limit to what they can do against age and cold. I'm interested in seeing how I do in a couple of races this spring.

Bart Marowelli

BART MAROWELLI'S STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

My plan to streak from Thanksgiving to New Years, 3 years ago has continued to inspire me to run every day.

The benefits I feel from taking that time is always worth it to me! Even on the days I might be late or almost forget (only a couple of those days), those days might not feel big value on the run, but the value is in maintaining the streak so that more days still have a good run in them.

CHARLIE KIENE'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

On this Thanksgiving, 2023, I am so thankful to have been healthy enough to keep running every day for one mile.

This year I ran a 5K race in Slovenia. This was my first European race.

I ran at the Durango Running Club track workout every Tuesday I was in town.

I am most proud that I won my age group in the Bayfield 5K. That was the race that my hip pain was so bad I wasn't sure if I could start the race. But I ended up winning my age group. I won a cool age group winner shirt.

I won the Durango Adult Education 5K. There is a test at the end and I won because I Aced the test and this took more time off my race time. I won a gift certificate for hot and cold therapy.

And I won my age group at the Dolores 5K. I won an Osprey backpack.

I got 1.1 million steps during this year's (28 day) step challenge at work.

My hope for next year is to find a good way to prevent the hip pain I had this year.

TODD TEKIELE'S STREAK HITS A DECADE

"The Next 100" is a phrase that has become my personal tagline of sorts. My friends and family know about it, and I've even incorporated it into my training workshops and speaking engagements (I own a hospitality industry coaching firm). I even wear a wristband that says The Next 100 on it. I even think it might be on my tombstone someday, haha.

After every 100 consecutive days of running, I proclaim "Nice job! It's time for The Next 100!" This is my reminder to be grateful, reflect, and smile, then look forward rather than dwelling on the past. Breaking my running streak into manageable 100-day milestones has been very helpful in keeping me going.

So, today (11.27.23) I completed 10 years of running at least a mile every single day. The streak began on Thanksgiving Day in 2013 with my son Travis in response to a Runner's World Magazine holiday run streak challenge. Well, we made it Thanksgiving to New Year's Day (35 days), then on January 2nd we just kept going (Forrest Gump, anyone?). Since then, my two best friends are on impressive, multi-year streaks of their own.

Now that 10 years is complete, I guess I'll just keep going. Going another 10 years seems daunting, but I don't need to worry about that. I'll just focus on The Next 100.

GUY ALMOG'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

I crossed the 4 years line on Halloween 2023. This year was going on great and I was keeping steady on 10+ miles a day for the most of it.

I was injured during the Munich Marathon, in which I participated in the relay run, setting a PB for the HM (1:29:44). A small back pain I had before the run, turned into a very sore hip which forced me to reduce my daily mileage but managed to keep the streak alive!

This year I also participated in the 3rd Munich Great Breweries Ultra, running 82km between 8 breweries, and sipping a beer at each one with a total of 3.5 liters of beer.

I hope now to recover from the injury and to be able to run 100-130 km a week again, and to reach the fifth streak year milestone with no big showstoppers.

Saron van Diemen

SARON VAN DIEMEN'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

I started my run streak shortly before the pandemic hit and daily running became a consistent factor in otherwise uncertain times. Nowadays as a busy personal trainer, being a stalker helps me to prioritize my own fitness in addition to the people I train. Last year I ran my bucket list marathon, the Jungfrau Marathon in Switzerland, followed six months later by new P.R. at the Rotterdam Marathon.

I can count on one hand (okay, maybe two) the number of days that have been truly challenging to get out for a run in the four years since I started my streak (illness, international travel, extreme weather, the day-after-a-marathon, etc.). The rest of the time it's just part of my daily routine and I don't think too much about it.

Because I get a lot of physical activity in my job as a personal trainer, I find I need to prioritize rest days and stick to the daily minimum (2 km, or 1.6 miles for me) 2-3 days a week. My daily average ends up being around 6km (3.5+ miles).

Every day that I'm able to run feels like a gift. Long may the streak continue!

RACHEL SULE'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

It's awesome and humbling to be part of such a terrific group. I'm still streaking - some runs are great, some are rough, and lots in between. Like many of us, I've gotten to run in numerous states, on an island in a river, in the mountains, at the beach, through sickness, snow, cold, rain, and heat (my least favorite).

Each day I get to lace up and get out there is a blessing, one for which I'm tremendously grateful. Run on fellow streakers!

The Streak is going well. I feel that as our streak grows so does our appreciation of how lucky and fortunate we are to run every single day. This past 12 months I've run a 100-mile race, two 50km races and a marathon. Having come off 3 years of insertional Achilles tendinopathy I'm pretty pleased with how things are progressing.

Thanks for bringing so many like-minded runners together. I think my run group RK POD on the Gold Coast still has the largest number of Streakers in Australia.

Stay well and happy Streaking. Cheers!

2 Years today [28 November 2023]! Going for the comma now. This streak has allowed me to dive into my daily habits. I'm focusing on stackable habits and eliminate habits that were not going to help me reach my vision. It's continually challenging but I'm staying focused by keeping it simple. One continuous mile run a day. Some are faster than others but they are still a mile distance. My best years are still to come and streaking is included.

MATT CARPENTER'S STREAK HITS 20 YEARS

In celebration of the 20-year anniversary of my streak, I ran an easy two miles (my daily minimum) down the road from my house. I pushed my one-year-old daughter in the stroller, and my wife and 4-year-old daughter walk/jogged along. For the last tenth of a mile they ran along with me.

Looking back, I never would have dreamed the streak would last this long. I am extremely blessed to be able to keep this up all these years. I have always said sooner or later something will happen that prevents me from completing my two-mile run. So far that has not happened. There has been plenty of challenges and close calls however. Both of my daughters were born at the right time of day so I was able run without leaving my wife's side when I needed to be there. With the second child there was some concern that I might not be able to leave the hospital room due to COVID regulations. Luckily this was not the case, but I did contemplate how I might run two miles within the room if it became necessary.

There were also a few times when family members had health emergencies that could have prevented my run. Each time, either I had already run that morning, or things were better in time for me to get my run in by the end of the day.

Twice I even forgot to run. The first was day 546. Lying in bed that night I realized I had not run. I got back up and went for a quick two miles in the dark. A similar thing happened on day 3,092. I normally fill out my running log right before going to bed. That night I was tired and planned to fill it out the next day. I went to bed, but after a few minutes I decided to get back up and fill it out, lest I forget what I ran. Once the log was in my hand I racked my brain, trying to remember the day's run. It became clear fairly quickly there was nothing to remember. Out the door I went, for a two-mile run in the dark.

On day 2,634 my first wife died in a car accident. The sheriff's deputy who brought the news was still in my living room when I said to myself, "I guess today is the day the streak ends." A few hours later I was saying, "I NEED to go for a run!" In the ensuing weeks and months my daily runs became an integral part of the grieving and healing process.

Looking back over my running logs, there are lots of mentions of aches and pains, and sometimes I had to limit my mileage for a week or two, but I have not had any real injuries in that time. The worst injury actually had nothing to do with running. I fell off my backhoe and banged my knee really hard. Luckily, I had already run that morning. The next day proved to be the hardest run over the last 20 years. My first mile took twenty minutes, at a time in my life when nine minutes would have been considered extremely slow.

Traveling always presents challenges for keeping the streak alive. There are certain places I have regularly stopped to get my run in when driving across the country. I used to get up early and run before long drives, but then I discovered it is much better to take a break along the way. York, Nebraska, off I-80, as well as exit 49 off I-70 in Missouri, have both been used for running breaks multiple times.

I have also run in several different airport terminals. Although I always feel awkward doing it, no one looks at you funny when you go running through the concourse. Perhaps the most unique run I ever did was back and forth in the hallway of a hotel in Lima, Peru at 3am.

As every streak runner knows, keeping this up day in and day out would be impossible without a supportive family. My wife has been extremely accommodating and encouraging along the way. It probably helps that I was well into the streak when we met. Our first date was on day 4,164. She knew what she was getting into!

Someday, something will happen that will bring this chapter of my life to a close. Until then, Lord Willing and the creek don't rise, I will keep going, one day at a time.

Jarl Odin Herland

JARL ODIN HERLAND'S STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

I am extremely grateful for everything the runstreak has given me the opportunity to do! Living in Nittedal, Norway, with snow covering everything 3-4 months a year, I sometimes have to run on a treadmill, but I love running outdoors in any weather. It makes me feel more a part of nature and the seasons.

Every year I feel more robust and stronger. Last year I ran my first 50 miler. This year I ran a 100 miler and a 24-hour race (152 km) and I am planning to do 3-4 100 milers next year.

The runstreak has shown me what my (the human) body is capable of and the fact that even after 3 years I see progress in robustness is inspiring and quite surprising. Most of my family and friends think (or at least thought) a runstreak would break my body down slowly but certainly.

I am sure that most people would benefit and love to do a runstreak if they just gave it a real try (minimum 60 days). The picture is of me on one of the mountains we climbed during Soria Moria Verdens Ende 100 miles.

Run Day 1,464 days (4.01 years with at least a mile long run every day). The last 4 years have been amazing. I am truly grateful to have had the opportunity be running every day. Being part of the running community has allowed me to connect with people all over the world from Kenya to the UK.

My running is inspired by dyslexic community and changing the culture around dyslexia, with the mission of running Until Everyone Can Read. I have fundraised using running including a treadmill marathon, 4 X 4 X 48 Challenge, The Speed Project (Relay from Los Angeles to Las Vegas) and other events raising awareness for the International Dyslexia Association. Hoping to continue this work in 2024.

On Thanksgiving morning Nov 25, 2021, I did a barefoot 5k since it was #barefootcrew5K 5k Thursday. The next morning, I saw a FB post for the Runner's World Holiday Run Streak Challenge where you run a minimum of 1 mile every day from Thanksgiving to New Year's Day. I decided why not. 2 years later I haven't missed a day.

Some stats for the run streak are 731 runs, 2,750.58 miles. States I have run in during the streak are Delaware, New Jersey, California, New York, Massachusetts, Iowa, Indiana, Maryland, Virginia, Washington DC, Missouri, Wisconsin. U.S. Territory - St. Thomas

Foreign Countries I have run in during the streak: Portugal, Switzerland, Slovenia, UK, and Germany

This year was a different year for my streak, I rode a bike 500 miles across Iowa in the 50th annual RAGBRAI event. I maintained the streak, getting up early and getting a run in every day on that trip.

In reality, the shift of training from exclusively running to a more holistic approach, running, riding and some small amount of weights, really seemed to strengthen my running. Now, I am looking for a big run in 2024 to complete my 10th year of running every day!

JOANNE GUPPY'S STREAK HITS A DECADE

Wow 10 years! I am so grateful for the ability to run daily. What started out as a December run streak challenge from our local independent running store, Runners Soul, has turned into a daily habit.

I am a faithful morning runner and start the day with my run. Some days are just 2km while others have me eating miles for breakfast!

The running community is so international. Over the last ten years I've had the opportunity to run in many provinces in Canada, many states in the USA, Mexico, England, Ireland, Wales, Scotland, Belgium, Holland, Germany, Prague, Austria, Italy, Switzerland and France. Everywhere I have been I've found fellow runners open, inviting and inspiring. Everyone has a story to tell!

My motto is "you must be disciplined as you won't always be motivated!"

Happy running everyone!

Dear co-streakers: I am proud and happy to announce the celebration of my two first years. Proud because I made a spontaneous decision and have stood by it for quite a period of time, through covid, work, family, holidays and all other challenges in a normal life. Happy because it has given me such a tremendous amount of joy.

I really cannot remember one moment of regret or lack of motivation. Now I know a lot of you have multiple years of runstreak and as such you are my heroes and my idols. But I believe I am also an inspiration for many people around me and that too makes me happy.

I always run outdoors, no matter what weather I am given. That makes me feel strong and invincible. So folks, see you around at K-day.

JOSEPH CRANO'S STREAK HITS 8 YEARS

My running streak has just passed the eight-year mark as my focus is on maintaining fitness while pushing my competitive spirit as I am always trying to improve.

My son has provided a strong, positive influence by his example and support throughout the streak as we have participated in many races together. We provide each other encouragement and share our training education and stories of the running world.

My streak miles only include outdoor miles with most being in Ohio. I enjoy my neighborhood runs after work to relieve the day's stress and catch up on the neighborhood news and visit with numerous neighbors and dogs.

Over the years my mileage has increased with running over 2,600 miles during 2022. My running races are mostly half marathons, but I have been doing one or two full marathons annually. 2022 included the Boston marathon in the spring and Chicago marathon in the fall. 2023 included four half marathons and one 10k with PRs in the half marathon and 10k with the big bucket list item being the New York City marathon this November.

I have been fortunate to continue receiving tremendous race day support from my son and his wife and enjoy providing other runners encouragement during races and training. The next items on the bucket list are London and Berlin marathons.

CAMILLE KY-SMITH'S STREAK HITS 5 YEARS

Hello! Very pleased to have completed today's [9 December 2023] run, which marks the final day of my fifth year of running every day. And looking forward to tomorrow's run, which will begin the sixth year of my running streak.

My runs usually happen in the mornings, at the gym when I go to work, and outside when at home. I don't complete long runs - 5-6 miles on weekdays, and usually just over a mile to three miles on weekends. I'm not interested in races or marathons, as I see my runs as "me-time."

I have three daughters in different stages in their lives (college, high school, middle school), elderly parents who live with us, and a job where I am honored to lead a team of around 50; the time I spend running provides me with the time to think of everything or think of nothing, to daydream or ruminate over issues that I may be dealing with on a particular day.

When I discuss my running streak with others, I tell them that I first approached it with the idea, "one mile only takes ten minutes, and anyone can last ten minutes." And I still use that idea on days when I'm ill or just need to get that run in.

Heck - I've spent quite a few ten minutes running in airports before long flights! My kids and husband are quite good about those runs, and kindly never seem embarrassed. :)

While I first viewed my runs as a key step towards mental health, I now realize the importance of the daily runs in my physical health. I rarely get sick (but manage to complete my runs when I do!), have no issues with my joints, and have minor symptoms as I approach menopause. And, I never have the pressure to start a fitness plan, as running is a habit as normal as brushing my teeth.

Finally, I am deeply grateful that I've been able to run every day, and find that my runs and the ability to run are gifts in my life.

Looking forward to the next five years!

Thomas Turfrey

THOMAS TURFREY'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

I am a father of two young girls (August & Harper). I live in Napier, Hawkes Bay, New Zealand.

I was never a runner, only used to enjoy sprinting at athletics and playing rugby.

I started running everyday a few months after my first daughter was born. This was also because I was on a hunting trip with a group of friends, and they "bet" that I could not run 5km every day for 90 days.

The following week I started, and obviously made the 90 days, then it was a goal of 100, then it was a goal of 365 days, now the goal is 1,000 and beyond - Forever I hope!

I ran my first marathon during this running streak on the 14th May 2022, with a time of 3hrs, 35min. Running the following day was tough, but taught me that mind of matter can achieve anything (just get the shoes on!).

Around these first 200 days I found a love for trail running. Following on throughout my streak I went on to complete the following Ultra's:

- Tarawera: 50km, 1,100m elevation (Feb 2023)
- Ring of Fire: 75km, 3,500m elevation (March 2023)
- Taupo Ultra: 50km, 850m elevation (October 2023)
- Hospital Hell: 50km, 2,500m elevation (November 2023)
- The Wild V5000: 75km, 4,000m elevation (Last weekend, December 2023)

Next challenge for me, is hopefully completing my first "Miler - 100miles" in February [2024] at Tarawera. This would round out 6 Ultra's in 365 days, without a rest day! Very exciting goal to achieve.

I have also run through a stress fracture in my shin, hence the reason for a big gap in my competition races this year, took over 3 months of light treadmill training to allow it to heal.

At a minimum I run 5km a day, usually in the dark in the Tongoio Mountain trails behind my house 😎 or along our beautiful beach out front.

Ultimate bucket list: UTMB Mont Blanc 100mile race

Biggest Inspiration: David Goggins

Favourite running artist: Juice WRLD

Favourite running token / medal: The finishers Ring, awarded for completing the "Ring of Fire."

Thank you for taking the time to read my story. I hope to inspire my friends and kids to push themselves.

PAL SAETHER'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

I celebrated two years of running every day today, December 12th, 2023. While I previously had been exercising on and off, two years ago I wanted to run more consistently. And then, luckily, I was introduced to the runstreak concept.

This has motivated me to do longer runs, instead of fast runs. And last year I ran 4 ultra-races, the longest of which was over 50 miles. The goal is 100 miles which I hope to reach in 2024 or 2025. In the meantime, I now mostly run between 5 and 15 kilometres per day, and at present time on challenging snowy and icy conditions here in Trondheim, in mid-Norway.

ROY KOENIGSBURG'S STREAK HITS 5 YEARS

I'm happy to graduate from the Neophyte stage. It's been five years of one foot in front of the other (repeat often), sometimes hard, other times easy. Occasionally in below-zero windchills and a few times on a beach by the ocean. The best is running with family and friends. The organized events (70+) are always a joy. It's fun to run into people I know and cool to meet new runners and share fun stories.

This streak started on a whim in mid-December 2018. In a Facebook holiday workout support group, a guy mentioned a milestone he just reached in his running streak. My initial reaction was 'running streak,' what is that? I researched it a little bit and thought, 'EVERYDAY?!'

But I figured what could it hurt. So, I embarked on this streak. For a few months I kept my minimum to two miles. But life is busy, so I granted myself the option of covering one mile to "keep the streak going." Sometimes those one-mile runs were harder to get motivated for than a 6, 7, or 10 I was planning for the weekend.

I have been blessed to not suffer any serious injury that would sideline me. I have run on some pretty stiff legs after an intense trail running event, such as Zumbro in Southeastern MN. Or doing a 5K the day after my first marathon.

I was starting my marathon training when I started The Streak. I spoke with a few people about the wisdom of doing those concurrently and got advice on both sides. With the importance of a 'rest day,' the one-mile runs became more palatable.

I have run through COVID twice and some really cold days when fitness centers were closed due to the pandemic. I found that if I dress properly, I'm almost never cold. Well, there was that one-time running home into a brutal wind that I got pretty chilled. When I got home, I laid down on the floor rubbing myself trying to get the feeling back everywhere.

I'm not a big fan of the heat in general, but I don't mind running in the heat. It's ok to sweat when running, but not when going about daily tasks.

I've run seaside and mountain top. Each has its own appeal. I've run with music and without. Sometimes it's nice to rock out (usually to country music) and other times it feels good to think. Running is a great way to clear my mind and go over everyday happenings. I get a sense of accomplishment after my daily pounding of the pavement.

Even before starting The Streak, I credit my daughter with inspiring my joy of running. Up to that point I would run to get some exercise, but my favorite part was when I was done. By connecting with her and her friends, I started to enjoy running. Nowadays I sometimes dread the end of a run and wish I had time to keep going. At least there's always tomorrow.

Been quite the run. During the pandemic, I got COVID twice which required my runs to be indoors around the exterior walls of the bedroom I was confined to--3 miles around a bedroom is a long and tedious run.

During my streak, I've been sprayed by a skunk, followed by a coyote, chased by a deer and a goose, hit by a car, run in 35 below and 28 inches of snow and 115 degrees above, but through it all, I've endured.

My running shoes are the first thing I pack when preparing for a business trip. Others have coffee to start their day--mine is a run.

DARBY HUGHES' STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

I have been so busy with my work and family activities during this holiday season that completing my 4-year milestone got by me without noticing. I think I am most proud of that!

My original goal was to be so used to running one mile every day that it was just as much part of my routine as brushing my teeth. That mission has now been accomplished. Next mission – 5 years and being part of the PROFICIENT group!

I do not run competitively, but I have the confidence to compete if that becomes something I'd like to start one day. My daily journal keeps me focused on self-improvement and my mile-a-day is a solid part of minimum routine I have established. My mile is personal and I use that time to reflect on the day before and also to prepare for anything coming my way.

LEWIS CLARKE'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

So, four years of running has flown by!

Originally my streak started out as a RED (Run Every Day) January, a charitable event here in the UK where you sign up to run every day for the month of January. This slowly evolved into a bigger thing and soon became a habit/ now a complete way of life!

My first streak was for 339 days back in 2019, but due to an injury this had to stop. I think at this point I was still learning and didn't listen to my body and pushed hard on one too many runs. But have since learnt and my current streak started again on the December 19th 2019.

During this time and throughout my running journey, I have learnt a lot and been able to cope with a lot due to being able to run every day from stresses at work, loss of family as well as the whole Covid 19 period of our lives! But now having one daughter and another on the way, I hope that this helps to instill some great values and work effort in their lives!

I started out running my first marathon in Berlin, Germany in 2018, and finished in 4:11:12. Over the years, I have honed my training, nutrition, dedication and most importantly my recovery to allow me to recently run a 2:29:21 marathon in Valencia, Spain on December 3rd. It has been an incredible journey so far, with some amazing highlights along the way, lots of runner's highs, some great miles with friends and my partner, and some amazing scenery on route.

For those who love the stats, my 1462 days have consisted of:

1718 Runs

12313.2 miles (19816 kms)

8.4 miles a day on average (13.5 km)

6:51 min/ mi pace (4:16 min/ km)

Happy streaking!

AL DAMS' STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

Very excited to have a two-year streak going! This last year was pretty difficult because I had a bad case of Covid and a 15mm kidney stone. Running through both of those was tough. The kidney stone was the worst because it was more than a month from onset to the last medical procedure.

Running with normal kidney stones actually helps the stones move through your system. A 15mm stone is about four times normal and will not pass on its own and needs medical attention.

The hardest part was the week I had a catheter in. That was treadmill only!

As always, the best two days of the streak are during the Ragnar Rely. My team runs the Northwest Passage and it is so much fun!

Well I'm glad to make it to the 10-year mark on the running streak. On the anniversary day I got up extra early and did 10.10 miles just so that I could get the run out of the way for the day and cross that 10-year mark.

It's been an amazing 10 years. All the running, the heat, the cold, the races, the miles. It hasn't always been the best run, but the running has always been great. I'm so very happy to be able to do this. Running is a gift and I never take it for granted.

One thing that is for sure is that the 10-year mark could not happen without my loving wife. Big thanks to her for all her support.

CHRISTOPH DIETZ'S STREAK ENDS AT 392 DAYS

I was so excited about my first year of streak and already planned to write a summary for the REGISTRY available in December 2024. But - well - plans change and life happens. This is my input for the upcoming REGISTRY.

Last Friday morning I didn't feel that good and started a decision-making run. Very slow and about 2 km in 20 Minutes. And with the day approaching the flu took over control of my body. So, I had to make the decision to let the streak end on December 15th after 392 days and almost 1.911 km.

But no, I have a new goal after full recovery: Can I beat this 392 days of Streak#2 with Streak #3?

Best regards to all of you!

I began my current running streak 4 years ago. It was during Christmas break and the beginning of the Virus that was going to shut our country down. I remember thinking, "I am going to see how many days in a row I can run...it will give me something to look forward to each day and a daily goal as well."

I have currently run a minimum of 1 mile each day for 4 years without a single day off. My weekly mileage is 35-42 miles. I have a yearly goal of 1800 miles, as well.

I have run through 103-degree fevers, vacations, illnesses, stress, some of the worst days of my life and injuries...it is the one thing that I am the most passionate Fellow Streakers: With the completion of my 1 mile run on 26 Dec. 2023, I have reached the 2-year mark of my current run streak!

In early December of 2021, at the age of 68, I wondered if I had another streak in me. A quick glance at the Streak Registry and the rather large numbers of runners over 70 and even 80 convinced me I could do it.

ALL streak runners, those registered and not registered, have been an inspiration to start another streak and make it to the 2-year mark.

Three individuals, in particular, have helped. First, Kathleen Selmar from Wyoming who started her streak a few weeks before mine, while running with a sling following surgery on her shoulder was a big inspiration!!

The Raven from Miami, Fl. also inspired me. He is about a year away from reaching 50 years, and continues to run every day with intense pain.

Finally, the third person is well known to the streak running community, co-founder of this organization, George Hancock. George and I go back to grade school in the 1960's. Lost track of him, but reconnected around 2010 when I first heard about streak running. I believe he is on his third streak and still going strong.

Full disclosure: I have only run the minimum of 1 mile during the past 2 years. I have never been great on distance running, but have focused on consistency instead.

The desire to run every day and to rejoin a group of individuals who I consider the most unique people in the running community was reason enough to start another streak.

Happy and safe running in 2024!!! And thanks for the inspiration!!!

JEFFREY SHUMWAY'S STREAK HITS 14 YEARS

14 years are now complete, including three February 29th leap days (14×365) + 3 = 5113. My wife Diane and I continue to run side by side every day.

Here's a little game any streaker could play. Every year, several runners on the streak list will have their streak number match that day's date. For example, on February 1, 2024 (2/1/24) is that somebody's 2,124th consecutive day? By my calculation, that will be true for Tyler Dawkins of South Pittsburg TN!

A five-digit streaker has two date possibilities -- a runner might match their Day 11,524 with January 15, 2024 (1/15/24) or November 5, 2024 (11/5/24). So far, my streak has never matched a date, but I've been pretty close a few times.

JULIA HADDAD'S STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

I am so thrilled to hit my 3rd year of my ongoing running streak! I would love to share my story to inspire and give hope to people.

I started my running streak on Dec 30 2020, when one of my students got diagnosed with an advanced stage of brain cancer, and sadly he passed away. I decided to take part of an initiative called Run for Life, and my plan was to run for 200 days, which appeared to be the end duration of the initiative.

So, I ran every day with a minimum of 5 km, windy, snowy or rainy weather didn't stop the streak, it even made it more fun, but something unexpected happened on day #94, when I started my run. Within the first 100 meters I felt something was wrong with my body, I felt a lump in my breast, I stopped the run, panicked, googled few things, panicked again and continued running while crying for the first time.

Google said it wasn't cancer, because young runners are unlikely to get breast cancer. I was 33 by then, and a runner, but I knew something was wrong and I decided not to trust dr. google.

The next day I booked an appointment at the cancer center, went there five days later, an MRI and Ultrasound have confirmed my fears. It was breast cancer but they needed a biopsy to confirm it.

I kept my running streak, but it has shifted a little in its purpose, as now I am running for my life. I used the time when I ran as a form of meditation. I listened to a lot of TEDx talks about the power of brain, brain over pain and all these things. When I run, I just absorb the words and the information differently. I feel empowered!

After the cancer diagnosis was confirmed, I met my oncologist and my first question was "will I still be able to run?" He thought I was crazy, but decided to go with and use my language and my mindset to describe the upcoming treatment journey for me. He said it will be like a long-distance race with obstacles. Little did he know that I will literally prepare myself for this race!

My protocol included chemo therapy, double mastectomy, radiation, targeted therapy and hormonal therapy. From what we know about chemotherapy I thought there is no way to keep the streak and I'll be ok with it but I will run whenever I can.

I ran the morning before my first chemo session and the run title for my run on strava was "one last run before my life takes a turn." After the session, I felt extremely nauseous. I couldn't stand it, and I didn't want to throw up.

From all the Tedx talks and podcasts that I heard while running, I knew that breathing properly will reduce the nausea, so I decided to go for a walk. I noticed that within a few minutes I started to feel like myself again. I decided that no matter how I felt the next day I will get up, put my shoes on and try to go for a run or a walk.

I woke up the next morning, while feeling so nauseous I had trouble putting on my shoes, I went out for a run. Within few steps I felt amazing and all the steroids that I took started to kick in. 😊 The hardest part of this run was making the decision to put my shoes on. Everything after it was amazing and I was almost symptoms free for the rest of the day.

I knew by then that I want to keep the streak for my own health. Any pain or side effect that I feel fades away when I run, either totally or at least for few hours. I enjoyed the short relief. Running became part of my protocol, my treatment. It helped me mentally and physically, so my "200 days" plan was cancelled and it became an open-ended running streak.

I kept the streak through 5 months of chemotherapy. I didn't care about the pace. I didn't mind walking or resting for few minutes whenever I felt like it. My goal was to run happy, and of course having a toilet around my running route was a must during chemo. 🤔 The last thing I was expecting to do was running 5km inside the hospital! My doctor was very supportive in this.

When it was around the double mastectomy surgery time, I had a plan. I wanted to keep the streak, but also, I didn't want to hurt myself, so I was very careful, and I talked to another runner who went through a mastectomy surgery and managed to keep her running streak. Her name is Vanessa Oshima.

My surgery was on Nov 9, 2021. I ran on Nov 8 in the morning before I was admitted to the hospital. After admission, I ran again at 1 am inside the hospital so technically it was Nov 9, after the surgery.

I felt good, the pain was very tolerable so I was sent home the next day. With the ok from the doctors, I ran but was extra careful as I had two drains attached to me. A 2km treadmill run saved the streak. It felt so unreal.

Three weeks post my surgery, I participated in a half marathon race. I looked like a typical bald cancer patient, but I didn't feel like a cancer patient at all as I was crossing the finish line!

The streak lived on. A year later in November 2022, I did my first full marathon in Athens with Vanessa! Then I did two full marathons. I am planning to keep the streak as long as I am able to run. Hopefully, I can also run a full marathon every year during November to celebrate my cancer anniversary,

I am told that the hormonal preventive medicine that I am currently on will make my body feels older, more sore and tired. They said it will make me gain weight even if I exercise. It will also affect my mood.

Every year my answer won't be "nope it didn't happen." Instead, it will be my medal as proof that we can still do something about these expected side effects and that we can do what once felt impossible because everyone said it was impossible.

RYAN FLETCHER STREAKS ENDS AFTER 4,749 DAYS

Today, December 29th, 2023, will be the last day of my Streak. I ran one last mile this morning. My family came out and ran with me. Tomorrow I will not run.

I am having knee replacement surgery next month. While the urge to continue The Streak up to the surgery is strong, ending it now, on the day it started, is a little more fitting and on my terms. Honestly, it has been a struggle to make it to my Anniversary. Old injuries that I didn't properly take care of and some new injuries the past few years have finally caught up to me.

Over the past 13 years of my Streak I have run 21,899 miles, Three 100 mile races, 2 Ironmans, A "Last Man Standing" race, 50 milers, triathlons, and numerous races from 2 miles to marathons. I have run in 100+ degree heat to -10 degree cold. I have run beaches, snow, mud, trails, roads, treadmills, my basement, laps around the firehouse, laps in parking lots, and a bunch of other odd places to get my miles in. I have shared miles with family, old friends, new friends, and strangers. There are a lot of memories and stories from those miles. I will miss my daily miles. Hopefully, one day a few months from now a new streak will be born. Until then stay safe, stay happy and Streak On.

MATTHEW ANDERSON'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

This past year, I turned 42 and experienced the strongest running year of my life: I've run over 3,100 miles in 2023, finished with my two best marathon times (3:10:01 at NYC in November, and 2:52:30 at Revel Mt. Charleston in April), which means I'll be running my first Boston in April 2024!

I ran a half-marathon every day in June to raise money for the Alzheimer's Association (I ran for their team at the NYC Marathon), and every day's run during 2023 has been at least a 5K.

I'm deeply satisfied with this year of running and I attribute so much of it to my run streak. Since starting the streak 4 years ago, the consistency it provides has not only strengthened my body, but I also find myself in a healthier place mentally, emotionally, and spiritually than ever before. I never could've anticipated a year like this when I started the streak on New Year's Eve of 2019, so I'm excited to see what the years ahead may hold! I'm deeply grateful for the Streak Running community.

GREGORY LOLAS JOINS SRI FROM AUSTRALIA

Back in 1997 (age 22) I started running almost daily – 5-6 times a week. I only ran about 1.5km each time. I was pretty overweight - somewhere between 95-105kg in those days. However, running became a habit. Something I felt I needed to do each day/morning to feel refreshed and ready to take on the rest of the day.

When I missed days, - especially more than one day - I really noticed it. My mood was always low on the day I didn't run. Having had issues with low mood and anxiety for most of my life, I realized that running was the most helpful and protective thing I could do for my health (physical and mental) so, I kept it up.

Given my weight, I also had a lot of knee pain. It hurt to sit down, stand up, even walk at times. Then in 2006 I bought some actual runners for running – Nike Air Zoom Vomero's, the first version (I had been running in a cheap no name brand). It made a difference and I started running a bit longer. Maybe 2-3km a day.

In 2008, I got a sports watch (Suunto T3) and started tracking my run times and heart rate. That motivated me to run longer. It was also this year that I set myself a challenge. To run 100 consecutive days (minimum of 3km). I did it and then each year since tried to do it again.

Below are my successes and failures.

YEAR	TOTAL RUNS	CONSEQ RUNS
2008	354	121
2009	349	65
2010	352	69
2011	342	135
2012	325	51
2013	332	66
2014	324	43
2015	328	55
2016	318	107
2017	331	124
2018	344	184
2019	365	365
2020	366	366
2021	365	365
2022	365	365

So, in 2016, I stopped running as I got the flu. I had done my 100 consecutive and was fine with taking a few days off to recover from the flu.

In 2017, I had planned ahead of time not to run on New Year's Day. I had done my 100 days and again was fine with missing a day.

Then in 2018 I tried again for the 100 days starting the 1st of July. Once I achieved it, I again planned to keep running until the end of the year and have New Year's Day off again.

1/1/2019 is where things changed. I had planned to not run, but it was a lovely day. Warm weather and one of my favourite things is to run and jump into the bay straight after my run. So instead of having a New Year's Day beer at lunch time, I decided to go for a run along the beach and jump in the water afterwards.

"So now what?" I thought. "I didn't have a day off. Maybe I will keep running."

And that is what I did.

I thought about stopping, but suddenly a year of running every day was looming. So, I went for it. I was so proud of achieving that. Never thought it was possible given the last decade of my life, I had only managed to run 100 consecutive days half the time. Four and a half years later, I still feel like that first year was the biggest achievement.

The next target was 500 days. Again, I thought about a day off. Actually, thought about taking the 500th day off and ending my streak on 499, just to have a story to tell and because I didn't know where this run streak was going to end.

As I am sure many of those who have run streaks know, the longer you go, the further you have to fall when you finally miss that day. I was and still am scared of that day.

So here I am 2004 days [24 December 2023] and counting. Each run is at least 3km for it to count. I have been doing minimum of 35k a week for the past 73 consecutive weeks. I made that a rule when my average distance over the runs started to decline to approach 5k.

On day 2000, I had run 10,112.5 km in total (average distance of 5.05km) – of these runs 33 have been on a treadmill due to illness, travel, or horrible weather.

I have run through cold, flu, covid, gastro (that was the worst) and hip, knee, and back injuries (with lots of anti-inflammatories).

PERRY ROMANOWSKI'S STREAK HITS 15 YEARS

15 years!

When I first started my streak in November of 2008, my goal was to run 1001 days. I like palindromes and that seemed like a good challenge. I had previously had a streak that I stopped after 444 days. So, I kept going but when I got to 1001 days, I didn't want to stop. And here we are 15 years later and my streak is still going.

My streak is a bit unique in that not only have I been running every day but I've been doing it while juggling. The sport is called Juggling and I'm out there every day running while juggling 3 bean bags. I've also done all of my runs outside. I don't have a problem with treadmills, it's just that I didn't have access to one and, after a while, I liked the idea that I have an outdoor running streak.

I do have a streak-within-the-streak which I find motivating. Since 2015 I've managed to run at least 100 miles every month. Some months more but never less.

Since I haven't had any substantial injuries or illnesses in the last 15 years, I feel fortunate. Sure, there have been a few minor cases of Achilles tendonitis and plantar fasciitis, but those weren't enough to stop my streak.

I don't know how long I will go but I don't see any good reason to stop.

Juggle on!

MIKE ORRICO'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 3,947 DAYS

3,947 days and done. I've been battling my IT band for the last 6 weeks and it's making life hard and running even harder.

Thanks for all those that I shared miles with, those that helped patch me up to get me back out there and to those who got me started. Special thank you to my wife and the boys for letting me escape each day to do what I love.

It's been a fun ride over the 22,810 streak miles but all good things must come to an end. I feel like I'm at peace with this but still crushes me to my core. I know I will wake up tomorrow thinking about a mile but I will show restraint. Time to get healthy!

ANDRE HAMMOND'S STREAK HITS 5 YEARS

January 1st, 2024 will mark 5 years of my running streak journey. It started off as a challenge to run for 7 days straight, then a month and then a year. Now here I am 5 years later and making great progress.

I have transformed myself from someone who only ran for my military physical fitness test and intramural sports. Since I have moved up to 5Ks, 10K's, half-marathons, to yesterday [30 December 2023] completing my first 40-mile ultramarathon.

This journey has brought on the best of me and has allowed me to positivity where others see doubt. When I have tough days, I think about a long run and how I have had to hold it together to make it back home after being near dehydrated running in the Florida summer heat.

This journey has been majestic, surreal, painful, but full of joy. I have traveled off the beaten path and found locations I would have driven by in a car. I have met so many interesting people and gained so much from these encounters. I have collected a closet full of t-shirts and running shoes that I have no idea what to do with.

I can't wait to continue on this journey and hoping to be able to live a healthy lifestyle where I can continue to run every day forever!

CRAIG PERRY'S STREAK HITS 9 YEARS

I have run every day for the last 9 years, and I don't plan on stopping now!

I got my start in running when I was 10 years old and it's always been a big part of my life. I coach cross country and track and enjoy the occasional road race, so running is always present.

I started my streak on January 1st 2015 and kept going because I never wanted to start from zero ever again. Often times it's just over a mile I run, when I'm training for something then it's obviously more, but I make it a point to get out the door to run daily.

Mostly I'm excited that I get to be an example to my daughters. They see me go out for a run daily and see the perseverance it takes to keep going each day. Thanks for including me in this great group and happy running to all!

December 31st, 2023 marked my entry into the "Decade Club." Over the last ten years, I have made some amazing memories and experienced many priceless memories. Over the last ten years, I have finished 19 half-marathons, 12 full-marathons, and 4 50K's including one Sky Race.

I enjoy streak running because I believe in and teach the necessity to have a growth mindset, never becoming perpetually stuck.

TJ HERZOG'S STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

My running streak started as a New Year resolution back in January of 2021. I challenged myself to run 100 days in a row in preparation for my first attempt at 100 miles. Well, 5, 100 mile runs later and a couple 100k's under my belt, I'm at 1,095 days of running at least 2 miles every day.

Starting a run streak has changed my life in so many ways and I couldn't imagine it not being a part of my life. It's brought my family and I closer because I invite them out to run with me. I've met new friends through this journey that I'll have for a lifetime.

Last but not least, my faith in Jesus Christ has grown during this streak. There have been many times I've called out in prayer either while running or before running because I wanted to stop or just not begin and Jesus always shows up. True to His word, "I can do all things through Christ who strengthens me." Philippians 4:13.

JENNIFER ADAMS' STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

When I started this thing I never thought I'd still be here, 4 years down the line, churning out that daily grind - but here we are! Where on earth did the time go?

I couldn't be more grateful for The Streak - there have been times it legitimately felt like the only thing I had for myself.

Over the past four years there have been a few dark days - I've run through sickness and stress, illness and injury, through tears and heartache and soul crushing exhaustion. Through it all my Streak Overlords were there to keep pushing me forward, telling me that if I just keep running enough, the good times will come around again.

Weirdly though, it feels like this year it's all started to pay off, the epic times are in view, and all the pieces have begun to fall into place. This year I've run less with the grim stubborn determination I've previously relied on, and more with the peace and completeness of knowing that not only have I found my place, but that I'm running it at my pace. I am exactly where I need to be.

And so, after 15 years a runner, 4 years a stalker, 2 Marathons, more Half's than I can remember, multiple 10ks a week, and a fair few single streak mile dotted in there, it feels the time is right to retire from my running life, hang up my trainers, log out of Strava, and take a nice long rest....

Nah, who am I kidding, I'm not fooling anyone with that. Streak year 5 here I come! Bring it on. I am ready for you.

OLEG LEE'S STREAK REACHES 3 YEARS

Wow, what a year it has been! I am so proud of accomplishments in running. I managed to complete 4 marathons, and even set a new personal record with a time of 3 hours, 2 minutes, and 40 seconds. It was such an amazing feeling crossing that finish line.

But that's not all! I also took on the challenge of a 50k race, and finished it in a respectable time of 4 hours and 50 minutes. It was tough, but I pushed through and gave it my all.

And if that wasn't enough, I went even further and tackled a 50-mile race. It was a grueling experience, but I managed to cross the finish line in just 8 hours and 30 minutes. I couldn't believe it when I saw my time.

I am incredibly grateful for all the hard work and dedication I put into my training. It was definitely worth it. I am excited to see what the next year holds for me in my running journey.

RON SHEALY'S NEW STREAK SURPASSES A YEAR

It's good to be back on the active streakers list although at this writing (December 31, 2023) my fourth streak is at a modest 13 months.

My first streak lasted about 15 months, ending during a move from Virginia to Japan. That was in 1989 before the birth of the USRSA. So, I didn't have that motivation to at least go out for a mile or two that day.

My second streak started the next day and ended in February 1993 (3 1/2 plus years) when I decided to have elective surgery.

I didn't start my third and longest streak until 2001 when I learned about the impending formation of the USRSA. It ended mid-March 2022 (16 days shy of 21 years) due to plantar fasciitis which I was unable to run through. Most streakers can understand how hard I tried to at least reach 21 years. I couldn't do it.

At 77 years old I had no immediate desire to start my current streak. But on October 29, 2022, I sort of "accidentally" did. We'll see how long it lasts....

Lastly, I'm pleased and greatly blessed to have recently reached 94,000 lifetime miles after 45 years 9 months of running.

Running Blessings to everyone,

DEVAJYOTI KATAKY'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

Several years ago, I read a NY Times article about the streak running, and found it interesting. I had been running since I turned 50 in 2009, but not as a streak runner. Two years ago, on January 1, 2022, I read a new article on NY Times about streak running, and some of very noteworthy runners, such as one that has been running for 50 years, and one that runs 8 miles every day. My mind set about running, health and fitness, turns on the need to do the out-of-ordinary things.

I do need to mention that I turned into a runner at age 50. I had decided that I needed to completely get into health and fitness if I wanted to be able to live well, for the next 50 years. Running became one of the things I took on.

At 50 it took me 3 months to run 1 mile without stopping, then 3 more months to run 2 miles without stopping. Two years after I turned 50 I ran my first marathon, in Minneapolis. I have not yet run a 2nd marathon, although I have always run 3 to 4 times a week. I am planning to start running marathons again soon.

I started on streak running on January 1, 2022 and completed that one. Most of that first streak was around just making sure that I did at least 1 mile. I found out that it can be quite challenging finding the 15 minutes to do that 1 mile. I often travel from my work location in Salt Lake City to Atlanta. On the days of flight travel I would make sure I ran in the morning, just in case I was delayed at the airport and would not be able to get out to run 1 mile. I ran when I had Covid in January 2022, although I was not very sick as a result of Covid. But mentally I knew I would run even if had a raging fever. At the end of my first streak, when I registered the streak in SRI, I was thrilled to see my name on the site.

On January 1, 2023 I was back into streak running. This 2nd streak was much more powerful. While I completed 455 miles in my first streak, I completed 1,143 miles in my 2nd streak. Although I am a runner in 2022 I was often out of breath very easily, which I ascribed to my having had Covid. In 2023 I felt much stronger and was able to run 3 miles on most days. I was thrilled when I was able to finally run 5 miles again on some days. The great accomplishments for 2023 was that I did two 10 miles, 2 personal half-marathons, and a 14-mile run.

Squeezing in my daily runs became interesting sometimes. One time while my wife and I were visiting the Zion National Park, I was working remotely from a library, while my wife was at a lodge. The plan was that once I was done with work we would leave the park. I knew I had to squeeze in my run before we drove off. So right after my work was done, I packed my work stuff in the car, and ran in my jeans and jacket for a mile.

Another time I was moving out of Salt Lake City, and worked till 3am to clear out the apartment, slept for 2 hours then ran a mile, so that I could get on a flight around 11am. Many times, I ran just 1 mile because all I could spare was 15 minutes. I would sometimes hate the fact that I have to run that day, because I was tired, or it was cold or rainy. But I learned that it can always be done. That lesson then often flowed out to other things, like being able to work on anything even though I was tired.

I have learned that streak running is a discipline that only a few people can really take on, given the pull of the environment to do everything else that is so much more comfortable to do. But now I am in. I am 64 years old and I think I will be streak runner for many years.

SIJMEN MULDER'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

Year 4 complete! Last year I was struck with a (relatively minor) spinal injury after which I only ran a mile for several months, which was a chore. I found it hard to get back on track and enjoy running this year but did end up running a few fun events, including the Amsterdam Dam tot Damloop, an obstacle run and a local run during a heatwave. It was so hot and humid they cancelled the 10k and made the 5k an untimed fun run!

In year 5 I hope to train more properly again, maybe hit 2024 km, that would be fun if health permits.

Finally, mad props to all my fellow streak runners! I love reading your stories in the newsletter. Rooting for you all.

DULCE WHITE FARROW'S STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

I went for a run on the 1st January 2021 and haven't stopped since. Day in, day out, I've run a minimum one mile, mostly in the mornings, during my lunch time or in the evenings, always outside in all sorts of weather (superhot and humid, cold, in the snow, rain and windy).

I've run through sickness (tooth pain/infection, chest infection, flu, headaches, stomach aches, anaemia, etc.), time constraints (travelling, holidays, going to doctor's appointments, minor surgery, etc.) and many other obstacles. All of which reminded me that I am stronger than I think (and extremely stubborn!).

I've taken part in many races throughout the streak. The most challenging ones (both physically and mentally) were without a doubt the ultra-marathons. But the race that I will never forget is the London Marathon which I completed in April this year. It was just amazing with the most vibrant atmosphere in spite of the circumstances I was in as I was diagnosed with a DVT in my left leg a week earlier. I've met so many incredible people there with unbelievable stories of perseverance and grit and that kept me going all the way through to the finish line.

Here is my Running Streak stats so far:
3 Years = 36 months = 156 weeks = 1,095 days of running every single day
Total Miles: 3,076
Total no. races: 47 (8 in 2021, 25 in 2022 and 14 in 2023) - mostly 10K, 10 Mile, Half Marathons, 7 marathons and 3 ultra marathons
Highest mileage in a week: 52.4
Minimum mileage in a week: 7
Minimum mileage per day: 1
Average mileage per day: 3.4
Most miles in one run: 40
Number of countries: 3 (U.K., Portugal and Spain)
Number of pairs of trainers: 5

I've learnt and grown so much over these past 3 years, especially on those days I struggled to run because I was in either in a lot of pain or lacked motivation.

"Small disciplines repeated with consistency every day lead to great achievements gained slowly over time" - John C. Maxwell.

I thank God for the ability to continue this crazy streak and I am grateful to my wonderful family and friends for all the encouragement and support.

Next milestone is Forrest Gump Day #1170 (3 years, 2 months, 14 days and 16 hours).

Cheers to year 4 of running streak!

CHRIS KATO'S STREAK HITS A DECADE

10 YEARS. A decade of running every day! This included a hospitalization for stroke-like symptoms that ended up being a rare form of migraine. Thankfully I got my run completed before the symptoms hit and was released the next day with enough time to keep the streak alive.

Over the past ten years, I've also experienced two ambulance rides, six marathons (including training and recovery), one (official) case of COVID-19, nine seasons of coaching high school cross country, a 24-hour train ride from Portland to LA where I had to run while we refueled in Oakland, a pretty bad IT band injury, various illnesses (flu, strep, sinus infections), and the birth of my son.

I ran in Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Tennessee, Kentucky, Florida, Louisiana, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, Washington, Oregon (including a mile on the track at HAYWARD FIELD), California, Nevada, Utah, Colorado, and my home state of Michigan.

I've inspired a few of my friends and former runners to begin streaks of their own. Here's to 10 more...if the good lord's willing and the creek don't rise!

DAVE ZASKI'S STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

Today (12/31/2023) I ran my 1095th consecutive day hitting the three-year mark. I have maintained my 5k minimum distance with an average daily mileage just over 5 miles. My total mileage for the streak is 5672 miles.

I plan to continue the streak and I am feeling strong. I wouldn't be here without the support of my incredible wife and daughters. Congratulations to all of the other streak runners! Every day is a triumph!

BOB PROUTY'S STREAK HITS 5 YEARS

I'm excited to reach this milestone! For the first few months, I was always worried I would forget to get in my run, but since then, it has just become part of my daily routine, through the pandemic, kidney stones, muscle strains, and all the challenges of life after 70. I've run in airports and hotel rooms (including when I was quarantined with Covid in N'Djamena, Chad).

I've averaged about 4 miles a day through the streak, running in a dozen or so countries from Guyana and Ecuador to Lebanon to Mauritania I've run at least a mile in 80 countries now, but some were well before the streak. Thank you again for keeping up the streak list—it has added a new dimension to an activity I have always loved!

AARON ROHRE'S STREAK HITS 7 YEARS

2023 brought a couple of challenges to keep my streak alive, but more rewarding it brought some beautiful places to experience putting one foot in front of the other. Whether around local Lake Georgetown (TX), the Puget Sound in Seattle, the Texas Gulf Coast hamlet of Port O'Connor, or the Olentangy River in Columbus, OH, the miles were rewarding and the runs were never a regret.

For each year of my streak (7 years), I've added a mile to run every day. So, in 2023 I ran 7 miles a day. I'm not sure what distance 2024 holds; I do know I'll be out there every day enjoying the ability to put one foot in front of the other. Here's to hoping your miles are as rewarding as they are enjoyable.

Lutz Balschuweit

LUTZ BALSCHUWEIT'S STREAK HITS 12 YEARS

12 years Streak. If you think about what you were doing 12 years ago today and what you have experienced in the past 12 years, how you have changed, how your surroundings and environment have changed, how old you were 12 years ago and what you looked like.

Today [1 January 2024] I jogged on day 4383, making it twelve years in a row without taking a day off. I have always run outside, in all weathers and in all moods, with good and bad moods, with and without motivation and mostly in good health.

During this time, I covered 91,585 km jogging in the mornings and an additional 33,642 km hiking in the afternoons.

I have now covered the circumference of the earth, a little over forty thousand kilometers, several times on foot and have a better understanding of distances than if I had covered this distance by bike, car or even plane.

I don't know how long my daily jogging will continue, but as long as it lasts... Streak On.

ALAN COOK'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

I am excited to reach the 2-year mark in my running streak! Running has helped me regain abilities after major surgery and health problems.

Prior to the streak, I spent 2-3 years running longer distances and faster paces. It was great, but at some point, it became harder and less motivating to find time for longer runs and energy for training. I still wanted to be a runner.

My true long-term goal is to be a runner for life, and I realized that slower runs and easier training is more compatible with that goal. I enjoy running one slow mile per day because I avoid a lot of the tough requirements of long runs, but it still feels like I'm "always out there."

This community makes it all the more enjoyable and motivating. I am also part of a great local running club that enjoys watching my streak continue.

NOEL WHITEMAN'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

I have completed 2 years of streak running. I have run through illness, life circumstances, and much more. In my streak, I completed my first marathon in Indianapolis, ran halves, 10ks, and many 5ks.

Memorable moments include running at a Truck stop in Gater Alley, Florida at 11:30pm to keep my streak, coaching my sons cross-country team this year, meeting with friends to run, running on a stormy day in the Georgia mountains, that mile run the day after my marathon, and squeezing in runs amid travel, school, and parenting. It's been a great 2 years. My mileage has been 1380 for the 2 years and I have set a goal of 1000 miles for 2024.

14 straight years. My streak is a 2-mile minimum I started Jan 1 2010. I hope to keep this going as long as I can.

In 2023, my streak survived a slightly gimpy hamstring, the Boston Marathon, a trip to Hawaii, and my daughter's wedding. It's certainly a blessing and a privilege to be able to run every day. Good luck to all to continue your streaks in 2024.

MARTIN SOUTHAM'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

Today, 1st January 2024, is my 4 years runstreak anniversary. I attended my local parkrun to start my year right.

My 2023 has been an interesting journey, through tough times, injury, feeling unwell, bad weather, I still had the motivation to continue my running journey.

Learning new lessons about enjoying my runs as opposed to running fast or running well, something I believe I am going to work on for the rest of my journey.

My journey will continue!

FELICIA WIJKANDER'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

The second year of runstreaking in the books!

This year has truly offered a few challenges for the streak. Like that one time when a delayed flight forced me to run in circles on deck of a ferry boat, In the rain, on rough seas, while having a cold. After 16 hours of traveling.

But more than that it has finally settled into a habit I don't contemplate about. Those feelings of "Do I really want to go out and run?" are gone. I know that all my runs are worth it. And they do get easier. Even if it might have taken some 1.5 years for that to happen and remain consistent.

The streak lives!

Robert "Raven" Kraft

RAVEN KRAFT'S STREAK HITS 49 YEARS

I made 49 years on my streak December 31st. It wasn't an easy year for me to keep my 8 miles a day streak and I had to cut down to 5 miles a day on Nov.5th. It really hurt to do that but I was really hurting.

I didn't get my pain pills for my spinal stenosis and arthritis of the back from Walgreens in July. I had to preserve what I had by cutting them down to half a dose. I went through a slight withdrawal and the pain came back 3 times as bad on my October 25th run.

My runs were taking me as long as 4 hours and 15 minutes a day - like a marathon a day. At 73, it was literally killing me so on November 5th I cut back to 5 miles.

People say I'm doing better but I don't see it. I feel the same pain but less time in pain. Doctors have told me that from looking at my MRI they can't believe I can even stand let alone run 8 miles every day.

I'm one in millions but I'm still running every day and working out hard at Muscle beach in South Beach where no one can beat me on the ISO hang at any age.

On a happier note, I am in a band called Raven and the Dark Shadows. We have a new album out titled "An Unkindness" that's doing well. I am the singer and songwriter of all the songs. It's really good if I do say so. We even performed in a concert with over 100 people and it was a great hit. I felt like I was really on so check it out and tell everyone. I was always a songwriter but never expected to have a late in life new career as a singer.

Keep Running ever day everyone and Run Free Raven.

TIM DESANTIS' STREAK HITS 9 YEARS

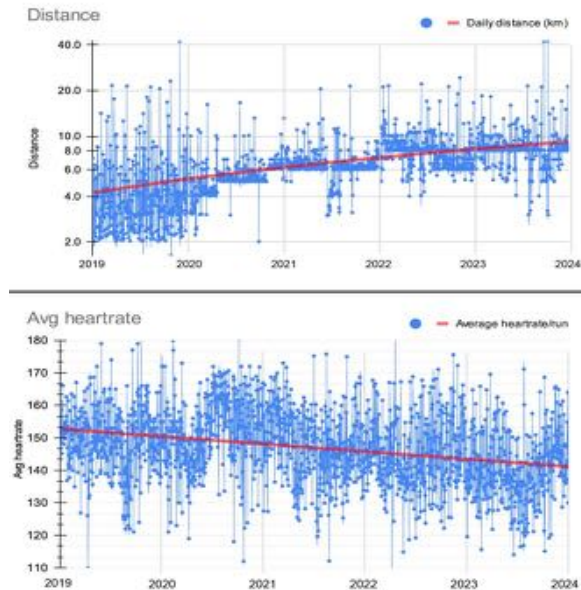

Getting older, but wiser I think. Just finished nine years of running every single day. Completed four marathons last year as I'm pursuing 50 states. I reached 20 states right after Thanksgiving.

What I'm learning is to rest in those slow days and enjoy the days that I push it hard. I don't have to be pressured to run fast or far. Just listen to my body and go with that felt sense.

Sometimes I'm on a trail in the mountains, other times on a path along the river, or running through my neighborhood.

Over the last four or five years, I've learned to work/exercise, my feet, hips, joints, and strength training so I can continue to run and enjoy life. Enjoy where ever you run as a new experience awaits each of us every day. Run on!

Mircea Dragoi's charts

MIRCEA DRAGOI'S STREAK HITS 5 YEARS

At the beginning of the 6th year (on January 1st), I feel my streak enters its own new chapter, maturity. The new milestone is now, of course, 10 years, and after five years I feel more confident, more prepared to get there.

At the same time, strangely, what I feel now is that I am less eager to get milestones under my belt and more open to enjoy every single RSD as a unique, special and beautiful event. Enjoying the journey and the present feels more important now, especially these days, with so much turmoil around the world.

Beyond touching the fifth mark, 2023 was such an amazing year for me. It is the year I met Robert Raven Kraft, one of the legends, and completed a Raven Run with him. I am, on his famous fellow runners' list, Beyond Forest, my nickname reminding of Transylvania, my home place. Three incredible hours on Miami South Beach, full of stories and bonding - another sign that enjoying the moment, not only the destination, is utterly important for us.

In October, I completed my first official marathon, in Lisbon, Portugal, a beautiful race on the shores of the Atlantic Ocean. While I am not a big fan of races, I think meeting the amazing community of runners and tuning to that special energy of a big race are important even for us, streakers, loners by definition. And, as a sign that everything is connected, at the prerace sport expo in Lisbon I bought for the first time some Ron Hill gear, including a running hat with a RunEveryDay mark. It was a good race, finished in 3:42, a personal record.

On a final note, I feel that we, as a community, beyond our personal goals, carry an important mission attached to our runs: to inspire others! Not pressuring, not preaching, not pushing people around to get off the couch and run, but gently inspiring them, letting them know there is another possibility, among many others, to stay healthy, run happy! One of those who listened and acted is my beloved wife, now on her own beautiful #RSD 284. Others run or walk frequently, and that's heartwarming.

I chose to share two important charts at the end of these first 5 years: one showing how I climbed over 5 years to the 4,9 miles I run these days (hint: slowly) and the second, my average heart rate, with 10 beats/minute I shaved off since 2019 until today, a sign of a more resilient heart.

Happy, active runs, dear SRI members!

ASHLEIGH KIEDROWSKI'S STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

I previously heard about the Runner's World magazine "Run Streak Challenge" from Thanksgiving to Christmas, but I missed that window. Instead, I decided to try to go from January 1st, 2021 to Valentine's Day (February 14, 2021).

After I successfully made that streak, I decided I would just keep on running. A few weeks turned into a few months and my new goal became to make it for all of 2021. Well, 3 full years later, I am still running and have no plans of ending my streak.

What I appreciate about my streak is that it has taken the excuse out of not running. As a result, I've run on vacation, at crazy hours, in whatever clothes I slept in, etc. I am so fortunate to live in Southern California where I can run outside on beautiful trails 365 days a year.

Lastly, my streak is also the best ice breaker or "fun fact" whenever I am asked to share something unique in a group or work environment.

As I sum up 3 years of runstreak, I feel incredibly grateful - grateful to my body that has stayed healthy and free of injuries for so long.

After these 3 years having at least 20 minutes as the limit I will give myself a little more space and allow myself to have the 1-mile limit and focus on building strength.

Hopefully, it will also give me a little more motivation, because wow, I have really work with my will the past year.

Today's [2 January 2024] run was a bitterly cold one, 1,5 mile in - 28 Celcius (18,4 F) and, as always, every run outdoors - no matter the weather!

15 Years! I made it to the Well Versed and even though I am once again at the bottom of the category I will keep working my way up for as long as I can.

I am excited to continue my running streak into 2024 for year number 16 and continue moving up the list into the super stars of streak running. Currently I am #33 on the list of active women and remember when I first looked at this list 15 years ago. I did not realize then how far my journey would take me and what I was about to embark upon but it has been amazing!

This year I earned my 6-star medal after completing the Tokyo Marathon which was the highlight of my running in 2023. Another highlight was my husband Dave reaching his comma and 3-year streak anniversary. Go Dave!

I crested 33,000 overall streak miles this year ending 2023 with just over 2300 miles.

SCOT DEDEO'S STREAK HITS A DECADE

Looking back on running every day over the last 10 years is a bit crazy; a minor surgery, the birth of a child, a pandemic, 3 streak saver airport runs, 114 races with 34 of marathon or longer, 31,618 miles, and countless memories. 2023 was another wonderful year where my running friend group increased and now includes former Boston Bruins Captain, Zdeno Chara. Not only did it include my biggest mileage month and year ever, but it took me all around the country (and the world) with time in Seattle, San Francisco, New York City, Jackson Hole, Portland, ME, and Spanish Wells, Bahamas.

To kick off year 11 of my streak, and my training for the Tahoe 200, I ran 50 miles yesterday [1 January 2023] with a 2 AM start and am so thankful for friends that agreed to run with me at such a ridiculous time.

AARON CAFASSO'S STREAK HITS 7 YEARS

Streak did make it through 2023, hitting the 7-year mark, but not after some tough months after a fire destroyed half of our home in February. I had a real talk with myself & I concluded that I did not want this turmoil in my life to be the catalyst for why my streak ended. Not only did I continue my streak but without a doubt it helped me more than ever to have that daily run in to keep my balance of so much uncertainty for us at that time.

Now that we are back home and my daily running is more on my normal home routes I am thankful that my streak helped me get through this recent year.

I also completed my 5th "Run the Year" goal as I came in with exactly 2,023 miles for 2023. Also, my "side" streak of running ≥ 5 miles/ day reached a 4-year mark, another smaller streak that I am very proud of. I look forward to continuing my daily grind to help me "Earn My Sleep" each and every day.

Hi everyone, just reached the 2-year milestone! It's great to be part of this community here and it certainly helps a lot on those difficult days. But honestly, those have become so rare they don't even matter anymore.

At 730 days so far, my obvious biggest next milestone is 1,000, which I'll reach on September 27. It used to be my only goal but now that I'm this close my opinion has changed: I'll definitely keep going after that. Curious on how many years I am able to add – let's keep motivating each other!

PAUL SMITH'S STREAK HITS 17 YEARS

January 1st 2007 was the start and no intentions of stopping. Happy 17 years of running every day to yours truly Paul William Smith aka LordOfTheStreak - 6,209 days #runstreak #RunEveryDay. 🏃🏃

Of course, it was celebrated with some bubbly to keep the drinkstreak going not quite 17 years, but 7.25 years = 2,651 days of having at least one daily alcoholic drink.

Unlike previous runstreakaversaries, every New Year's Eve today was to be a no bells, no whistles, no costumes, no gimmicks affair. It was like many of my days of my streak, on my own-some lonesome, along with my thoughts, a smattering of Ron Hill running gear, Brooks running shoes and of course those knackered knobby knees and other aches and pains of this battered body of mine, the byproduct of running every day for seventeen years I guess. I was, however, accompanied by Dickie Dark, the rain, oh and a hangover, the result of a day/night out with running lads from my club CrookAC. A good time was certainly had by all, that's for sure. Managed to finish off 2024 with a 10k and notch up the 17-year Streak Runners International milestone.

I would just like to thank family and friends for their support throughout my runstreak, special mention to the good lady wife, Susan, who deserves a sainthood for having to put up with a lot to accommodate my obsession and dedication. Also like to thank everyone who has at some time ran with me, alongside me, whether it be a parkrun, a race, a training run, a social run, a celebratory runstreak occasion or one of my many crazy fundraising challenges, your company has always been appreciated. I'm now looking forward to a day off tomorrow...

Happy New Year everyone! As if that is ever going to happen - I'm already planning 18th runstreakaversary celebrations - viva la streak and good luck to all who are currently streaking may it continue with enjoyable and injury free running, take it one day at a time folks.

ALISON HARVEY'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

On Dec 31, 2023, I finished two years of my streak! 730 days of running every day, at least a mile (usually 2-5), and, as part of my personal streak, my runs have to be OUTSIDE.

Since I live in Reno, NV, at 4500 feet elevation in the High Sierra, I have had some memorable deep-snow runs with crampons strapped onto my running shoes, and jogs through blizzards, and just generally interesting winter runs, on days when without my streak I'd probably not even go outside at all! I have run through plantar fasciitis, COVID, a bad reaction to an anti-viral, and the usual colds and allergies. Every time, I felt like the running helped.

My latest-night run was in Elmira, NY, at 10 p.m.; nicest trail run was alongside Caples Lake near the Carson Pass; favorite runs are a couple of great routes along a ditch trail and hilly neighborhoods around my house. Am now on day 732 and still running! Happy New Year and congrats to all my fellow streakers!

HECTOR DELGADO'S STREAK HITS 9 YEARS

As I reflect on my running streak for the past nine years, the United States Running Streak Association motto, "Through weather, injury, illness and life events we run every day," resonates deeply with my goal to run every day, 365 days every year.

As I have aged, my runs have slowed down to 9 minutes or so per mile, and I often wrestled with my inner self to get up and run. Despite the bad thoughts of skipping a day, I lace up and get out the door.

As a full-time employee for a local community college where I live in Santa Rosa, California, my work schedule can be 10-12 hour days, leaving me with low energy, motivation, and desire to run after work. Despite the unwelcome thoughts of giving up, I have managed to run late at night, between 10 and 11 pm. Most impressive is that I have pushed myself to keep my running streak of 100 miles or more per month for 120 consecutive months, an average of 4.1 miles per day.

I am a lifelong runner who started running when I was 13. For the past 35 years, I have run consistently every year. In this timeframe, my wife of 23 years and I have raised four children, including one grandson. My family's life events have had close calls, but my wife and kids have been team players to give that extra push to keep running. My wife has been the biggest supporter through this streak-running journey.

As I enter my ten years of running daily, I aim to keep the 100 miles per month challenge going and the 4.1 miles per day.

Cheers to another (366 days) leap year!

NELSON OHL'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 2,922 DAYS

RSD: 2,922, December 31, 2023, I celebrated running at least 1 mile each day for the last 8 years.

It was a good long run, so to speak, 6,667 miles, averaging 2.28 miles per day.

I'm retiring this streak to have surgery. Running every day has enriched my life. To this Group and my running friends - thank you for being so wonderfully inspiring!

I look forward to beginning another streak soon. I'm including a photo of myself during my favorite destination run, the Annapolis 10 miler.

RAY ORTMAN'S STREAK HITS 9 YEARS

I'm pleased to say that my daily running streak continues (5K or more every day since 1/1/2015). I still love it and look forward to completing my run every day. Of course, some days are tougher (or slower) than others, but the personal satisfaction and physical exhilaration makes it worth every mile.

In the past year, I have finally allowed myself to run indoors (first 8 years were run exclusively outdoors), thanks to my ready access to an indoor running track. I still run outdoors most days, even in winter, but it is nice to know that I don't have to face -10° icy or deep-snow runs anymore if I don't want (or the treadmill alternative).

I hope to stay healthy enough all year to complete a milestone 10-year streak by New Year's 2025 (and keep on going).

HELEN RYVAR'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

I'm currently on a half marathon run-streak, my second one of this kind! This morning [5 January 2023] I ran my 615th consecutive half marathon! I'm not sure how long I'll go but I'll keep going as long as I can!

If you want any more info to document my story please ask! I've posted my runs on Facebook and Instagram daily with maps and photos, and I've run all over the world to include the UK, Miami, Italy and Spain so far!

Who knows where 2024 will take me! Best wishes for the New Year and beyond!

MARY ERIKSON'S STREAK HITS 5 YEARS

Fellow streakers: I can't believe I hit the five-year mark this past New Year's Eve. I am grateful that I've run every mile outdoors; it has given me a new appreciation of His creation.

October of 2024 will mark ten years since I was diagnosed with cancer. I love that my running streak has lasted over half of that time.

I love being part of such an amazing community of encouragers, athletes, and passionate people.

I hope that my story will encourage others to never give up hope, serve as a reminder that cancer is not a death sentence, and live each day and mile to its fullest.

Run on,

SIMON LAPORTE'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 17,568 DAYS; HAS LONGEST RUNNING STREAK IN CANADA

The big news is that I ended my streak.

From November 10th 1975 to January 2th 2024, 17586 days. 271,172 km.

Daily minimum: 6 km
(Very proud of that minimum).

It would have been better for my hip to stop before but I wanted to reach 2024 to touch 50 years from 1975 to 2024.

Last day, Jan 2th, I ran 11 km to remember my first day of 7 miles (11.2km), 8km the morning to secure my streak and 3 km in the afternoon.

It was looking so bad during the afternoon at the restaurant, that a kind lady offers me her cane to help me to get to the washroom.

I decline to save my Faith. She would not have believed me that I was to run 3 km.

Afterwards, at home, I was able to walk a painless 10 feet. I knew then I was able to start for 3 km!

So much to talk about that streak.

Thanks and Happy New Year.

I am so happy and grateful, for being able to run every day. This morning [6 January 2024], my daughter and my husband ran with me. They wanted to celebrate the day with me. Of course, on my five-year runstreak day, I ran five kilometres. :-)

After that, I got a sweater, chocolate, and a beautiful silver bracelet from my family. The bracelet has a charm, my letter V, which also stands for the Roman numeral five. And five o'clock today, we have a reservation at a nice restaurant.

I am so incredibly proud of myself, for my runstreak! And of course, I will continue my runstreak tomorrow.

MICHAEL BETZ'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

My streak is still active and going great!

Sometimes it's just 1.6km but on some days it's a marathon. I've also had days where I hiked 100km and had to do my streak before and after, which was very demanding!

Streak running has become an important part of my life and I'm a little dreading the day when I have to stop it for some reason. Of course, it will only be a break!

Streak running and the fitness I received from it also got me into the fire department. I've been with the volunteer fire department for 4 years now. Even as a fire truck driver!

ANDREA VULA'S STREAK HITS 9 YEARS

Hello! I'm Andrea. Wifey/mom of 2/Run Streaker/World traveler! Today [7 January 2024] is my 9-year stalker anniversary!

My husband's job allows us to move quite a bit - international and stateside. We are based stateside and we like to travel. During my streak, I've lived in three different countries on 3 continents and two states, traveled to 5 continents, and visited 25 countries.

I've run in basement parking lots during monsoon season, I've run on the 85th floor gym (or as I like to call it running in the sky). I've run on boats, in the desert, on mountains, the beach, on bridges & cities.

What I've learned from my streak is:

1. Always have running shoes on you when boarding the plane. Either wear them or pack in your carryon luggage.
2. Just run. Even if you don't feel like it. Your rest day is one easy mile. You'll feel better afterwards. I always do.

FREDERICK HEINZE'S STREAK HITS 5 YEARS

I ran my average 3.1 miles that I have been averaging during my streak of 1,826 days. This past year was the hardest year so far as I started developing pain in my lower back and left hip from running every day and not doing any kind of strength training and the streak almost ended. So, I started doing strength training for the lower part of my body and I'm back to close to 100 percent and training for a half marathon this month!

JIM PEARSON'S STREAK HITS 54 YEARS; HAS THE SECOND LONGEST RUNNING STREAK IN WORLD

One wouldn't think I would be excited about running a paltry 1,023.2 miles in 2023, but I actually am. I racked up well over 500 miles in the first five months of 2022 before everything started going badly. And that is where I was when the next year started.

I am a realist, so I set my goal at running 600 miles for the year. After three months, I was three miles ahead of that pace, but then in April things got much better, and by the end of June I had tallied 431.4 miles and had changed my goal to 750.

I did hit a few months over 100 but no longer made a point of doing so. I checked my diaries and found that the knee that Hopper had torn up while showing me a leg lace wrestling move happened early in 1996, so half my streak has been with a knee so damaged that the specialist said I could never run again.

I am not sure as I approach my 80th year that I can take the excruciating pain that I experienced during two different three-month periods, but the pain I now worry about each day varies from tolerable to pretty bad, something we have all had to conquer. I can still deal with that.

Though it is just one day at a time, I do have a couple of goals which I will fight to maintain. The first is to run until I turn 80 on April 30. The second is to reach 20,000 days, something that seemed impossible when I reached 19,000.

Thought I'd stop at the four-year mark as my partner had a life-altering medical event on 29th December. However, the combination of the ICU doctors telling me I need to keep myself going and the knowledge that she'd be really cross with me for stopping prevailed. Ten days later she awoke from her coma and, since we have a long road ahead, I'll need to keep this thing going in order to stay sane and in shape for it. So... onwards!

I can't believe I am celebrating 4 years of a running streak! I have never been an athletic person, but I can run!

After being inspired by an article in Runner's World on streak running, I decided that is what I wanted to do...and I am doing it. I want to encourage everyone that you can do it too!

My dog and I run outside every morning...that is how we start our day. Every run I complete, I thank Jesus for the strength and energy to get up, and put one foot in front of another.

There are so many people who wish they could run, but can't....so I am thankful every day for the ability and dedicate each run to them. "When you walk, your steps will not be hampered: when you run, you will not stumble." Proverbs 4:12.

ANDREAS ERICSSON'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

I started my runstreak 22/01/16. My first run was tough. For me to run 1 mile was difficult. My weight was 125kg. After the first 3 month everything was getting better. I was able to run further and faster. Today [15 January 2024] my weight is 100kg. I have done my first half marathon and in May I will run Göteborgs varvet again.

Running has become a daily routine and I love it. Best feeling is to get up at 4am and go out and run. I hope next year I will say that I have run every day for three years. So, I hope we will be in touch. :-)

MARK RABASCO'S STREAK HITS A DECADE

On December 26th my streak reached 10 years! Christmas day 10 years ago was the last time I took a day off from running.

I was battling a hip injury during sophomore year of college. In that time, I have graduated, got my first teaching job, got my masters, moved to a different city, ran 25 marathons, bought a house and got married. My 3-mile streak started on December 31st of the same year. I celebrated my streak with a track workout to prepare for some track races this winter. I also plan to run a few more marathons this year and many shorter races.

One of my other goals is to be a 50-state marathoner which I have completed 20 states so far! My streak keeps me in marathon shape year-round so I am always ready to race.

MARTIN GRIERSON'S STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

I only started running in 2019, at the age of 48, whilst off work with a bit of stress. I found that I enjoyed it and got into a bit more - and then COVID and lockdown happened in 2020! That's when I really got into it, using it as my opportunity to get out of the house whilst working from home. By the time I turned 50 in July of 2020 I had lost 16kg and had to buy a new set of clothes!

I started 2021 with a view of running every day in January but that was quickly curtailed as we had to isolate after my daughter contracted COVID. I resumed running on 18th January and have not missed a day since! I have been fortunate to stay fit and well - I've had the odd cold or minor injury but not enough to stop me.

I live in Liverpool. Most of my runs have been there but first thing I do now when planning a trip is to look for running routes. A trip to Las Vegas last summer was probably the most challenging - especially in a heatwave but the most challenging part was the time difference when returning home and trying to fit a run in at 9pm after travelling for over 13 hours!

I think I have run in every possible weather - even the last few days wintry weather has given me an issue and threatened the streak!

I finally hit my 3-year anniversary on 18th January 2024. Over the 3 years, I have run a minimum of 5km per day. In total, I have run 9214km, averaging 8.41km per day. I have no plans to stop - waiting for the inevitable injury to cause that - but I have my first marathon coming up in April so I am hoping my training can still incorporate the streak!

On January 16, 2023 - I hit my 3-year run anniversary!! During this past year, I have qualified for Boston for the second time, hit 2,000+ miles for the first time in a year, raised money for the American Cancer Society at the Chicago Marathon and celebrated a bunch of smaller milestones.

This run streak has been the one and only thing I can control in my life. As a working mom of two young children and a wife of a fire fighter - this means late night or very early morning runs to keep it up and lots of dates with my treadmill. Juggling everything life throws at me is not easy - but running has been the one consistent factor that I look forward to (mostly) ever day!

This is my 3rd and longest attempt at a run streak. My first one had to be broken due to a medical emergency where my 2nd daughter was diagnosed with trisomy 18 and considered incompatible with life during my 19th week of pregnancy. My second attempt ended for 11 days after I gave birth to my rainbow baby January of 2021. I have no plans to stop and remember all the hard and good times running has gotten me through over the past 3 (plus) years!

BENJAMIN GRIFFIN'S STREAK HITS 11 YEARS

So happy to be sharing updates with our friends at USRSA. I continue to be upright, still teaching 6th grade Ancient Civilizations and Cultures and World Geography at a charter school in western Massachusetts.

This year has been harder than past years, due to the mandated hours at school and a higher case load of students on individualized education plans. However, I continue to maintain my streak.

It's funny that I started this with the auspicious goal of 120 days in a row. Here I am, still persisting after 11+ years. I love this community. I look forward to my daily run each day as a way to close/summarize my commitment to this goal.

This year we traveled to Colorado to my wife's grandfather's place of birth: Silverton, Colorado. He was born there in 1923. We spent many hours in the cemetery there and located his babysitter's grave, as well as the graves of his relatives. We toured the block his family's restaurant was on, and then spent days in Ouray, Ridgway, Gunnison, Montrose, Telluride, and Durango.

Had some fun and continued to run Mind the Ducks 12 hour (I have run every edition 2011-now except 2016), and I ran in Delano Park 12 hour for the first time and got to meet a friend John Nevels who does that race every year. I saved up points and flew down, and I am happy to say I'm going back for this year. What a beautiful park Delano Park is in Alabama!

I continue to coach cross country. This coming season will be my 15th consecutive season of coaching.

I am approaching 150 marathons/ultras, and I continue to spend my summer race directing (much to my wife's chagrin).

I can't wait to see what the next year holds. I have auspicious goals and hope to push towards a new PR in at least one distance. Everyone lol's at me right now for running every day, but joke is on them because I run on the treadmill (It is 9 degrees out right now).

Thanks to Streak Runners International (SRI), I have developed the habit of running every day.

My favorite quote is: "Be careful of your habits; for your habits become your character." I think my character has changed for the better thanks to this habit of running every day.

But there will come a day when I will stop running. In order to postpone that time as much as possible, I will continue to maintain my physical condition by eating properly, doing yoga, stretching, and going to a Sento (Japanese-style public bath).

There was a big earthquake in Japan on January 1st. I would like to help them recover quickly.

STEVEN MODICA'S STREAK HITS 12 YEARS

Today [24 January 2024] marked the completion of 12 years of running. It went quietly as I'm traveling and staying in a hotel near DC. I didn't have a crowd with me, or any cake. No one was holding a sign.

It's ironic that an accomplishment like this, that requires one to actively commit each day, often slips by unnoticed by most, but provides so much benefit and satisfaction to me.

Running has allowed me to sleep better, keep my fidgety energy under control, and learn to overcome those moments of doubt we all feel when something appears a little too hard, a little too scary, or we feel a little too weak to continue. We dig deep, we find it within ourselves, and off we go. And like every day, as we start moving and realize it isn't so bad, we make it to ok, then we make it to pretty good.

If we're lucky, sometimes we make it to glorious and we shed some tears for something. There's really nothing like it. From nothing, the joy of being alive and being well reappears, never mind the rain, or the snow, or the cold.

I hope all of the new runners that are aiming for that first 365 days, or their comma, or that very special day we call "Gump Day" look at me and feel encouraged as I look at people like Steve DeBoer, Mark Washburne, and Raven and hope that I get to run as long as they have.

Onward to the next 12 years!

JOHN MYATT JOINS SRI FROM UNINATED KINGDOM; STREAK STARTED IN 1994

On 31 March 2024 I will have completed 30 years of running every day. During this time, I will have run 70,000 miles, across five continents, rarely running less than 4 miles a day, over road, trail, mountain, desert, rain forest, rocks and swamp.

I came to running 40 years ago when in the middle of a low period in my life. I was soon to realize the powerful effect running can have on improving your mood and raising your self-esteem. I have completed over 70 marathons and ultraraces and hundreds of other events on road, trail and mountains around the world. Many years ago, I was the Asian Veteran Marathon Champion.

For over 30 years, I worked as a teacher and school administrator, mainly based overseas. Chronologically, my teaching career and wanderlust took me to the Blue Nile in Sudan, Cairo, Hong Kong, Amsterdam, Bahrain and the English Lake District, which means I have maintained my streak in a variety of interesting places each with their own challenges and obstacles to overcome.

When I returned to my homeland with my family, I began running over the fells (mountains) of Cumbria, which prompted me to write a guidebook called Lakeland Fell Running for Mortals. This was published by Pesda Press in November 2022 and was a runner up at the Lakeland Book of Year awards in 2023. I am currently writing similar guides entitled Eden Valley Fell Runs for Mortals and Peak District Fell Running for Mortals, both describing running routes over hills in England.

I usually run every day in the mountains close to my door in Cumbria in the north of England, often running with my camera, taking photos to sustain my enthusiasm for the natural world. I am a member of Penrith based Eden Runners in Cumbria and a member of the Outdoor Writers and Photographers Guild.

15 years today [26 January 2024]! Hard to believe when you think about it but when it just becomes part of daily routine you just don't think about the streak.

RICHARD SWEETMAN'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

My 2-year milestone has been completed as of today (January 26, 2024). I started a run streak back in March 2020 when the Pandemic forced shut downs in Canada. I had retired in 2019 and the shutdown gave me an opportunity focus on running. I got to about 260 days and then fell and cracked some ribs. I reactivate the streak again after 20 days of recovery. I got to 150 days and repeated the same injury.

In January 2022, I restarted the streak of running a minimum of 5K per day. So far, I have been able to stay upright and injury free. In December 2021 I also started a 21.1K minimum run per week and that is now at 198 weeks and going strong.

My stats for the streak are as follows:

730 days in a row
6878K total kilometers run
Average of 9.42K per day

MICK CULLEN'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

My running streak faced its biggest threat over the last two months. On December 12, I ended up in the ER with stomach pain that quickly got worse, and I learned I had a kidney stone. They got me on morphine and sent me home hoping it would pass on its own. I hadn't run that day, and after a long nap, still on painkillers, I managed to run a relatively slow mile on the treadmill before lying down again the rest of the day.

Over the next month, pain popped up sort of randomly, making those days challenging for runs, but the stone didn't pass on its own. Surgery was scheduled early on January 10, so I stayed up the night before to run after midnight rather than having to run after the procedure.

I was in enough pain post-procedure that I couldn't work the next two days, but--thanks to that treadmill--I was able to get in at least a mile each day. I am good as new now, back to more typical daily distances and pace, and looking forward to year five!

Jimmy Lindberg

JIMMY LINDBERG'S STREAK HITS 5 YEARS

I have reached a runstreak of five years now. In the same time my 13-year-old dog Kia has had three separate streaks of almost one year, with the longest being just over 1,000 days. We run together in all weathers and I think that part of my runstreak still being alive despite me having had issues with my breathing this past year can be attributed to having someone to run with.

I have decreased my volume and am no longer doing any 10,000+ km a year, like I did for three years in a row. It wasn't sustainable and my body didn't feel right from going on any extreme runs.

At present I am happy if I can even run more than 10 km without having to stop. That's how it is and you have to be mentally prepared for things not always going your way.

Running daily is part of my life and I can't think of quitting my streak now. At one point I strived to climb in the rankings, but people in Sweden have proved to be a durable kind, and I am actually ranked lower now than when I first registered my streak four years ago.

No races or anything planned, for now I am just content with going on my daily runs. Perhaps I'll make a push for some races in the summer if I can get proper help with my breathing.

CHRISTINE WINGER'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

Today [31 January 2024] I hit 4 years of running daily! I had the honor of running with fellow run streaker Jay Eitlejorge. He inspired me to do the Thanksgiving to NYE run streak back in 2019. After that I decided to try another streak for the month of February 2020, and then I just kept going! Thank you Jay!

RYAN REESE'S STREAK HITS 5 YEARS

Five years and going strong! It's hard to believe that something that started as a month-long challenge is now a major part of my life.

My five-year streak includes over 7,500 miles, 17 states, and 3 countries. I've run in temperatures over 100 degrees and below zero and any weather you could imagine. Some of my craziest streaks are in business suits, through airport terminals, and during pretty intense fevers and illnesses.

On top of that, I ran through nearly seven months of oral chemotherapy and radiation treatments for cancer. Some of my goals are to continue the streak, visit more states, and encourage others to begin a streak of their own!

Running has become my daily ritual, a source of inspiration that fuels my day. Each stride echoes determination, and with every step, I find solace and clarity. Rain or shine, I lace up my shoes, embracing the rhythm of my run as it transforms into a journey of self-discovery. This consistent practice not only improves my physical well-being but also serves as a constant reminder that resilience and commitment pave the way to personal growth.

PAUL HYMERS' STREAK HITS 8 YEARS

I'm delighted to complete 8 years, not long to go until I reach the 3,000th day. This year, I must stretch more and prioritize recovery. Also, I need to find a race to focus on and train for. I've been a bit slack these past few months. I greatly appreciate all the updates. You guys keep me motivated!

JERRY LANE RUNS STREETS OF DALLAS

As I near my 5-year streakaversary in May (1,726 today February 5), I decided to finally contribute some fodder to the newsletter while my streak continues. Accumulating over 1700 consecutive days is an accomplishment, but I'm most proud of my status as the #1 runner (out of 1,261) of completed streets in the City of Dallas, TX, for the past few years. I've run the full length of 2,657 of the city's 9,086 streets.

I'm also proud that as I near 70 years old, my global rank among those that participate in CityStrides is 925, the 98th percentile of participants. As we age, the PR's become unattainable, so it's important to set and include other personal challenges. Looking forward, I look forward to adding more countries (currently 23) and cities (119) worldwide to my list.

NATHAN WEBBER'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

On February 1st I celebrated 2 whole years of run streaking. During my second year of streaking I completed my 100th parkrun. Even managed to keep my streak alive when I did a multi-day hike on New Zealand Milford Track by getting up early to run 2km before the days hiking.

I have run in dress ups, run on Rakiura Island, run in snow, run races and run with friends, but my favourite run was when I did a trail race with Dad in Wellington.

I am really excited that my comma day is coming up and I hope to run more cool places in 2024.

SAMUEL EDVARDSSON'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

First of all, thank you for the congratulations! I'm really proud to have achieved this runstreak.

A lot of things have happened on a personal level in these two years. The biggest moment, obviously, is the birth of my daughter and the family's third child three weeks after the runstreak started.

As a man, it might be a little easier task to make the runstreak survive during that time (just a little right?). Nevertheless, this runstreak is really important to me and it makes me feel good in both mind and body. It's great to get outside and have a moment by yourself, even if it's just for 20 minutes.

Lets keep going!

TIM MCLEAN'S STREAK HITS 12 YEARS

I'm grateful to celebrate another year of running every day; at least 5 miles each outing, 10K or better a lot of the time; rain, sleet, or snow; feeling great, feeling so-so, or dragging; everything working well or experiencing little nagging pains; running along busy streets or along a scenic trail.

My day doesn't truly begin until I've gotten my run in. I appreciate each and every time out. I never take it for granted. I make it a point to stay in the moment and enjoy interacting with all the friendly and encouraging people I come across. I thank God for bestowing this ability upon me and keeping me safe and injury free!

EMILY BEEMAN'S STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

Three years, wow! Looking back, so many things have happened during that time. Running has brought me through so many of those time, the good and the bad. Sick days that made it difficult to get up and go, but it got done. Unmotivated days that I've had to cheer myself on to get it done. Travel days that made it difficult to make time.

My favorite day of running during this streak was when I got stuck in Nashville airport overnight on a layover. I put on my running shoes and ran my mile in the airport. I hit a mile and kept going for 10! I'm sure I looked like a crazy person but I got my run in.

During this streak, I've race a lot of races in different states to include three marathons and an ultramarathon. I recently hit a PR for a half marathon.

DON LEWIS JOINS USRSA

“I’m not a runner“

“You will never see me doing that.”

“If you see me running, you should run too, something is wrong.”

These are things I used to say for the first 43 years of my life.... funny how things change.

2020- 0 Miles Ran.

In August of 2020, I found myself overweight, depressed, and I had just broken my leg taking out the trash. It was a complicated break that took until January of 2021 to heal before I was released to put weight on it again.

I decided then I was going to make a change and start doing something about my life for me. I came up with a plan to reduce carbs, reduce sugar, reduce alcohol consumption, and somehow get my body in motion. I’ve never been athletic or any version of that word in 43 years.

March 2021- 0 miles Ran.

My diet plan worked as I lost over 50 pounds and was now looking for a way to keep my metabolism up, so I started walking 45 minutes a day (3.1-mile goal) as briskly as I could.

Being the father of 4 children, time is important, and I always felt guilty for spending that time on myself. So, I needed to get faster to save time - at least that is what the guilt was saying.

I started running in the areas of my walking path, where no one could see me, knowing I looked like a fool that had no business running. That soon evolved into not caring and just focusing on finishing the walk faster. That’s when it happened.... a switch flipped in my brain...I actually like this. I started setting goals for myself, things like, “I’m going to run to those trees and then walk for a bit” and “I’m going to run for 5 minutes straight, and then walk for a bit.”

December 2021 – 305.5 Miles Ran.

In the 7 months I ran in 2021, I managed to get myself to a 9:30 minute per mile average. I signed up and ran a couple of local races.

- The Firecracker 5K.
- BCS Oktoberfest 10K- Finished 15th in my age group.
- BCS Half Marathon- 1:58:13.

I learned that me and my body do not like running 13 miles. But I was bit by the running bug and there is no looking back now. I did decide, however, that I would start running the BCS Oktoberfest 10K every year. It was a comfortable distance and a fun race. So, I focused on trying to get faster without hurting myself and set a goal of winning 1st in my age group for the 10K.

December 2022 - 856 Miles Ran (550 for 2022).

BCS Oktoberfest 10K- Finished 3rd in my age group with an 8:32 per mile average.

As 2022 ended, I was getting bored but my 2023 resolution stayed the same, be consistent in life not just running. So, I started challenging myself with monthly running challenges.

January 2023, I ran a 5k a day just so my Nike Run Club Graph would be straight across. I was still obsessing about finishing 1st in my age group at Oktoberfest. February's challenge was to run two separate sub-8-minute miles, every morning for the whole month.

On the 16th, I was doing well and I was telling my wife about my challenges for myself. That's when she asked, "Have you ever heard of Streak Running?" That's when she showed me runeveryday.com. I was blown away by the consistency needed to hold a 53-year streak...53 YEARS!

The very next day I decided I was starting a streak. I continued with my February Challenge of two sub eight miles every morning, which also by default changed my regular pace. I was now running my first mile in my 5K at a 7:42 and averaging an 8:30 across all three miles.

December 2023 – 1,423.1 Miles Ran (561.1 for 2023).

- Kolache Krunch 5k (Caldwell, TX) 1st in my age group- 8:00 per mile average.
- Millican Summer Series Trail Runs – (6) 5k races- Let's just say I almost died a couple of times, but learned valuable lessons about Trail Running. You had to run all six to get every piece of the puzzle that made the medal. Also, it was 107 degrees all summer in Texas, trail runners are a different breed!

- Oktoberfest 10K- 3rd in my Age Group – 7:57 average.

February 17th, 2024 – 1,479.7 Miles Ran— Streak #1 Done.

Streak running has renewed my reason for running and the consistency I crave! Of course, I enjoy the side effects, but my running has a purpose again. I have maintained my weight loss within 5 pounds since 2021. I am almost to the Purple Level on Nike Run Club (for those who care). And I would say I am not so obsessed with 1st place anymore. My 5k is about 25 minutes on a good day. My mile every day is always a 7:45 to 7:57.

I am happy, mentally well, and know that I want to continue my streak. Next goal is to finish a 5-year streak. Oh, and these stupid summer trails of death, I will be continuing to do that series too. Seriously who runs in 107-degree weather through the woods?

JEFF GOULD'S NEW STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

I've run at least one race on each of the possible 366 days of the year. Yes, I ran a race on Christmas Day, a weekly race on Saturday that fell on Christmas Day one year (2010). Yes, I've run one race on 'leap day', February 29th, the Amherst 10 miler in 2004, a race that was run on the last Sunday in February of each year, and that year it was the 29th. And every day in between. While I'm sure there are quite a few, I don't really know anybody else that's done this, though I'm sure the SRI/USRSA has a fistful. Anyway.....

Incidentally, in a week or so [email dated 17 February 2024], for what it's worth, I'll run (hopefully) on my 11th consecutive leap day. Ran on the 29th in 1984, never missed it.

If you can fill the unforgiving minute
With sixty seconds' worth of distance run,
Yours is the Earth and everything that's in it,
And---which is more---you'll be a Man, my son!

- Rudyard Kipling (1865-1936) from his poem If.

THE FINISH LINE

By: Mark Washburne

Our running streak association ended 2023 by celebrating Richard Westbrook, 77, a retired teacher and coach from Jonesboro, Georgia, who became the 6th person in the world to run every day for 50 years. Coach Westbrook's Golden Anniversary run was held at Atlanta's Piedmont Park on 29 December 2023 and was attended by several other streak runners including Steve DeBoer. Mr. DeBoer, who was the 4th person to hit 50 years back in 2021 and now has the 3rd longest running streak ever in the world, used his quarterly TRAVERSING THE TUNDRA column to share details about Coach Westbrook's amazing running streak and the big 50th celebration in Atlanta (page 19). Congratulations again to Richard Westbrook on his amazing achievement and thanks to journalist extraordinary Steve DeBoer for writing, as always, a great article about the coach and filing another story about THE 70,000 MILE CLUB (page 23) for this newsletter.

Looking ahead in 2024, we anticipate (fingers crossed) other important milestones being achieved by some amazing streak runners. On 26 February, the top streak runner in the world, Jon Sutherland, 73, a writer from Washington, Utah, will hit 20,000 consecutive days of running. If all goes well and only 266 days later on 18 November, Jim Pearson, a College track and cross-country coach, from Marysville, Washington, will also hit the 20K mark of running every day. Wow!

On 25 May (again, fingers crossed), Coach Sutherland also has an opportunity to become the first athlete to reach the Double Nickle – 55 years - anniversary. We don't have a name yet for athletes whose streaks have reached 55+ years on our website so please forward any name suggestions to us before the big celebration at the end of May.

At the end 2024, we, hopefully, will all be in Miami Beach, Florida to cheer on Robert "Raven" Kraft as he becomes the 7th athlete to reach 50 years on New Year's Eve. Hopefully, celebrating 45 years of daily running in in 2024 are Jeffery Barros, Matthew Savage, and Mark Courtney. Reaching 40-year streak anniversaries in 2024 include Randolph Read and Sue Favor (3rd female in the world). Good luck to all who will be celebrating an important (and they are all important!) streak anniversary in 2024.

There was also some sad news to report since our last quarterly newsletter. On 25 November 2023, Michael Fanelli, a coach and running historian, from Anselmo, California passed at the age 67. Coach Fanelli, who had two running streaks and covered 115,000 lifetime miles, led an amazing life and we reprinted a couple of the articles he sent to this newsletter over the years (page 10).

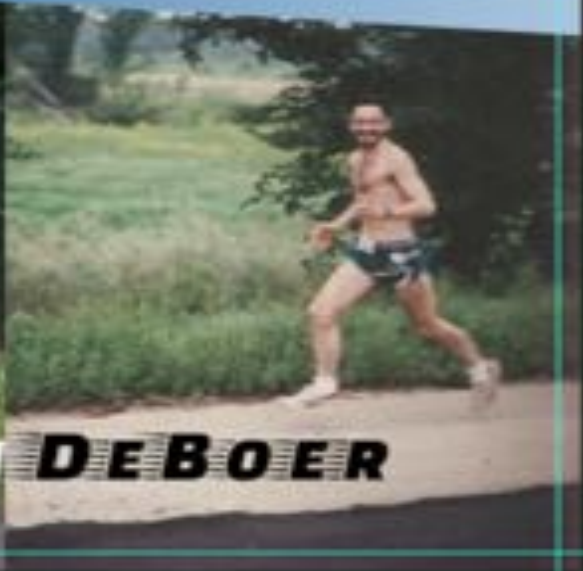

The last quarter also witnessed some amazing streaks come to an end. On 2 January 2024, Simon Laporte, who holds the record as the top Canadian Streak runner, ended his streak after 17,586 days (48+ years) and now has the second longest retired streak on our list after the late Ron Hill. On 1 December 2023, Scott Ludwig from Senoia, Georgia, ended his streak after 16,438 days (45 years) and now has the 5th longest retired streak. We also received notification that Jon Kralovic, from Delanson, New York, had ended his streak in April due to heart procedure after 16,184 days (44+ years) and now has the 7th longest retired streak. We wish them (and all of our friends with retired streaks) good luck in the future. As always, I also want to wish all of you with active streaks good luck as we each run the roads and trails – every day!
